The Y. W. C. A. residence and dining room will welcome back many students, business girls and guests and will be a meeting place for many who have spent happy years together at the "Y". The big gymnasium will be open and old members welcome to come in and enjoy a game of badminton or basket ball, and the swimming pool with its fresh, clean water should also prove a recreation centre. The library, reading room and green room will be open for guests to rest or visit with friends and to show visitors around the building and be of service in any way. A special "Y" reunion program has been planned for the afternoon of July 4th, with swimming exhibition, gymnastic drills, folk and aesthetic dances on the lawn, musical program and garden tea. For these who wish to visit the new "Y", Camp arrangements will be made in connection with the excursion to Stoney Lake, Friday, July 5th for the boat to stop at the island where lunch will be served and an opportunity given for visitors to spend a few hours around camp.

The Y. W. C. A. extends its best wishes to every Old Home Week guest for a very happy visit in Peterborough.

Daniel Hopkins

Daniel Hopkins was the father-in-law of the Hon. George A. Cox.

He was born in Monaghan County, Ireland, in 1808. On the death of his father in 1826 he came to Canada with his mother and three sisters and settled in the township of Cavan. About 1828 he moved to Smith township, with his mother, his sisters having married in Cavan.

In 1835 he married Jane Donnelly, who lived in Smith. She was born in 1817 and came to this country from Ireland in 1827. Of their seven children, several may be mentioned here.

They were: Copeland Hopkins, born in 1835 and died in 1851; Mary Ann, born in 1838 and married Wm. Morrow in 1867; Margaret, born in 1844 and married George A. Cox in 1862; William James, born in 1851 and married in 1882 to Margaret Martin of Peterborough.

Returned to Peterborough

After his marriage, Mr. Hopkins with his wife and mother lived on his farm in Smith for about a year. They then went to St. Catharines, but returned to Peterborough four years later. Mr. Hopkins learned the plastering trade, but after some years he opened a harness shop on Water Street, assisted by his sons. He subsequently engaged in the boot and shoe business, but retired in 1880 on account of illness. He went on a visit to his native home in Ireland with his son-in-law George A. Cox, came back to Peterborough and died in 1881.

When Mr. Hopkins settled in Smith the only houses on the present site of Peterborough were the Government building and the log store, which was also the post-office; Brumwell's mill, on the Otonabee, was called the "pocket mill" so small was it. Grain was often taken to this mill on a crotched stick, two oxen being hitched to the stick and bags of grain tied across the crotch.

INDIANS ALWAYS FRIENDLY

The Indians were always friendly to the early white settlers and they built their log huts around the mill which Adam Scott built in 1820 at the foot of King street now occupied by the Peterborough Canoe Com-

Welcome Home

To the thousands of former residents who this week have come to their Old Home, The Examiner unites with all resident citizens of Peterborough in saying to you most heartily, Welcome Home.

Whether you are a native of Peterborough or were born elsewhere; whether you lived here for a long or short time; whether you were formerly a resident of the City of of the County! whether you have been away for a short or long time; whether you in returning travelled from a long or short distance, the same warm welcome is given to you.

Do not look upon Peterborough as your former home, but as your home, with all that word connotes We are all one family, bound together by the feelings and ties that unite those of the same household.

You will see alterations, many of them, in the face of the city, and that these changes have been made by growth and progress. We remember that you assisted in laying the foundations for this advancement and in the development that followed, and as fellow workers we welcome you back to witness the progress that has been made upon the foundations you helped to build.

While you will recognize changes, you will find many places that will be familiar to you and that will vividly recall the days you spent in Peterborough—the school where you studied, the church where you worshipped, the shop, store or office where you were employed, the grounds where you played, and the spot where you sported in the water. Alterations will be found in many of these, but they are recognizable and will bring to your memory many happy days. If there are any unpleasant incidents connected with any of these, forget them, and give place in your mind to the pleasant events, that this home coming week may be one of thorough enjoyment.

Most important, you will meet many old friends—friends who still are residents and friends who have come for this joyous reunion. If you cannot recall a name, let that make no difference, and let the warm handclasp renew the friendship of other days.

This is a week of enjoyment. Each day entertainment will be provided. This is for you; enjoy everything to the full. The spirit of the occasion is one of pleasure and of joy. The resident citizens are anxious that you will enjoy thoroughly every minute of your visit, and will do anything and everything they can to that end.

Welcome; welcome home!

SIMON R. ARMSTRONG
City Clerk.

Chamber of Commerce

The idea of an Old Home Week and Reunion of Peterborough's Old Boys and Girls has been under consideration for a number of years.

At last the idea has reached the practical stage, and for months citizens have been working hard in order to make this event an unqualified success.

Upper most in all our thought and preparation has been a genuine desire to make those who will be returning to our City heartily welcome.

As president of the Chamber of Commerce, it gives me a great deal of pleasure to extend to every one of Peterborough's Old Boys and Girls, as well as to every visitor, a real welcome to the Old Home Town.

We hope you will be impressed with the wonderful growth of the City. This growth has been characterized by the development of a civic pride which we hope you will share with us because it is the result of the efforts of many of you who helped in days gone by to lay the foundations upon which the city has been built.

We are proud of our homes, our schools, our churches, public institutions and factories, and also of our citizens.

You will notice many changes—miss many of the old landmarks—and also many old friends will be absent. But amidst all the change, there is one thing of which you may rest assured, that is, the sincerity of the welcome that awaits you.

We want you to feel that you have a warm place in all our hearts and we can assure you that we shall do all within our power to make your sojourn with us pleasurable and profitable, and in the renewing of old acquaintances, we hope that happy memories will be revived and that you will carry away with you such impressions as will help to lighten burdens, cheer darksome days, and inspire to nobler effort.

JAMES DUTTON,
President.

Young Men's Christian Association

The Young Men's Christian Association of Peterborough extends a real cordial welcome to all Peterborough Old Boys and Girls. The Association Building will be one of the familiar landmarks dating back 33 years and occupying as it does one of the most prominent locations on George Street opposite old Central Park.

Many of the returning Old Boys will recall happy hours spent in the gymnasium and the old swimming pool. The names of such teams as the Brownies, Harriers, Alerts and others will be recalled, teams that made basketball history. Memories of the old social groups and classes for Bible Study and Educational work will also be recalled.

The doors of the Association will be open to all the Old Boys, whether former members or not, in friendly welcome and the facilities of the building will be at their service.

G. H. ROPER
General Secretary.

Board of Education

The Board of Education joins with the Citizens in general in welcoming home during "Old Home Week" the former pupils and teachers of the Peterborough schools together with all other former residents.

The Board hopes that your visit to the old familiar scenes, including the schools, may afford you genuine and lasting pleasure.

In order to facilitate reunions the Board has placed at your disposal for meetings the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall for the week of your visit.

No effort will be spared to make your visit a memorable one.

J. J. CRAIG
Chairman.

The Separate School Board

To the returning Sons and Daughters of the Old Town a Hearty and Cheery Welcome. From beyond the confines of City, Province and Dominion Peterborough's Old Boys and Girls have retraced their steps to renew acquaintence with the friends and once familiar scenes of their earlier years and with the echoes of cordial greetings ringing in their ears they will during the coming week cast off the cares of the present and renew the spirit of youth.

As Chairman of The Peterborough Separate School Board I join with my fellow townsmen in extending to you a warm and earnest welcome. To you Peterborough is still home. It was here that were spent the happy days of your youth. It was in Peterborough Schools under the guidance and zealous and devoted teachers that you first imbibed at the font of knowledge and laid the foundations for the successes and achievements of later days. I trust that the re-union with the days of the past and all they imply will be for you a happy one. May a large and generous hospitality await you at every turn, and when Old Home Week has passed into history and you each go your separate way, may the memories of these days linger long in your hearts and help to keep alive the friendships which they have enkindled.

J. R. CORKERY.

Hon. George A. Cox

George A. Cox was born in Colborne, Ontario, in 1840. He came to Peterborough in 1858 as agent for the Montreal Telegraph Company. In 1861 he became the local agent for the Canada Life Insurance Company. These two business connections, the one with a financial institution and the other with a telegraph company and to a certain extent with railway interests, were the foundation of his brilliant career.

Mr. Cox gradually absorbed the management of the whole business of the Canada Life Insurance Company, east, west and north of this district, and eventually became President of the company.

In 1878 he was induced to take the presidency and management of the Midland Railway, then in financial difficulties, and in five years he established it in a position of efficiency and considerably prosperity. In 1883 he leased the railway to the G. T. R. on terms that were very satisfactory to the bondholders and shareholders.

In 1883 he organized the Central Canada Loan and Savings Company, a Peterborough institution which took over the assets and business of the Peterborough Real Estate and Investment Company.

Appointed to Senate

Mr Cox moved to Toronto in 1887, and afterwards was appointed to the Senate of Canada and also attained the presidency of the Bank of Commerce. He died on January 16, 1914. Wealth and power did not affect the natural amiability and friendliness of George A. Cox. When as Senator he used to come to Peterborough on business, a splendid figure of distinction in his stature and careful grooming, with silk hat and Prince Albert coat, he used to have his carriage stopped to chat with an old friend working as a laborer on the streets, apparently with as much enjoyment as in his meetings with friends on a higher level of business. "George A." was no snob, and it was that human depth in his character which makes him still remembered by old Peterborough friends with warm respect and admiration.

Interested in Peterborough

It was inevitable that George A. Cox would transfer his home to Toronto, but his going was hastened by his defeat in a federal election campaign. His influence went far in locating here the Canadian General Electric Company, the Quaker Oats Company and the Peterborough Lock Company, to mention just three enterprises which he helped to secure for Peterborough.

The youngest of his sons, Herbert C. Cox, resides in Toronto, a financier of national reputation. Herbert C. Cox is a first cousin of W. G. Morrow of Peterborough.

Hon. George A. Cox demonstrated that he was a bigger and greater man than his local political and business environment. Political partizanship might flick him in his striding success, might try to pull him down, but abundant honors came to him beyond his own country.

"George A." was Friendly

The following is a simple little story which reveals something of the manner of man he was. A few weeks ago it was related to the Examiner by a citizen who shall remain unnamed: "I was walking along Front street in Toronto one day and met Mr. Cox shortly after he had left Peterborough. I greeted him passing by, but he stopped and said, 'I remember your face but I've forgotten your name, but I know you are from Peterborough'. So I told him and he said, 'Oh yes, your father was against me in politics, but we were good friends just the same.' He talked there in a doorway for fifteen or twenty minutes, and I remember him saying, 'the people of Peterborough showed that they didn't want me, so there was no use in staying any longer'. Evidently that election had been more than just politics with him. But that was the kind of man he was, friendly and unpretentious; a real man."

ELECTRIC LIGHT IN 1884

On May 5, 1884 the Peterborough Electric Light Company received its charter, and on the 10th of the same month had made arrangements to give the town all the advantages to be obtained from the system.

TURN BACKWARD, O TIME! IS PLEA OF TOM BEGLEY

Ashburnham's Rosy Days Recalled by Newspaper Man of 1887.

SOME HISTORY

(By Thos. J. Begley, member of News Room and Reportorial Staff, Peterborough Examiner from 1887 to 1906. Now Manager Liquor Control Store, Lindsay.)

Make me a boy again, just for to-night.

I have always had a warm spot in my heart for Ashburnham (now East City). While in this reminiscent mood I do not want to be considered as one of "the rude forefathers of the hamlet," to quote the immortal Grey, but rather as one of the boys. I am turning back the pages of memory—living in fancy in the days when with my chums and associates we gathered at the old swimming hole and other haunts of our boyhood days.

I was a mere youngster when my parents took up residence in Ashburnham on the 10th of July, 1880. I hung up my hat at the corner of what was then known as Lake and Elizabeth streets. There was quite a gathering of the "great unwashed" under the gas lamp, and I was given a close inspection. I was duly initiated as one of the gang a night or so later.

At that time Ashburnham was a municipal corporation. It had its village council, its village policeman, etc. It was quite a busy centre, too. Rogers' flour mill and saw mill gave employment to quite a few, to say nothing of Mowry's foundry, McFadden's furniture factory, Wand's planing mill, Faint's woollen mill, Cope's turning plant. These were all situated on Rogers' raceway. The only one standing today is the old flour mill.

Alexis Cope, the proprietor of the turning factory referred to, was indeed an interesting character, besides being a first class turner. He had a finger amputated on one occasion by a jug saw. He promptly applied first aid by restoring the digit in its place with a little shellac and glue, but unfortunately the operation ended with the finger nail turning in instead of out.

Included in the industries of that day was Calcutt's brewery, a broom factory, Stephenson's canoe works, David McGregor's cooperage, Craig's carriage factory and Clancy's blacksmith shop.

Ashburnham was originally called the Scotch Village. This does not necessarily mean that the population was made up largely of descendants from the land of the heather. On the contrary, there was a goodly number of English and Irish families. Such names as Erskine, Glover, McGregor, Cummings, etc., figured in the Scotch muster roll, while Wall, O'Connell, Kelly, Young, Griffin, Lundy, Sullivan, etc., indicated that there were a few Irish around.

Many fine English families played a prominent part in the history of the village, a number of their descendants leaving their impress not only locally, but also in foreign lands. Among them might be mentioned Rogers, Burnham, Strickland, Mills, Meade, Rice, Woods, Peck, Orde, etc.

In the eighties Ashburnham could boast of two hotels, three groceries and a butcher shop. The hotels were managed by Mrs. Swanton and David Wheeler. Mr. Wheeler displayed a sign bearing a foaming bootleg of beer outside the hotel. The sign mysteriously disappeared one Hallowe'en night and was never found. A few years later Mr. C. Young erected the hoted at present managed by Mr. J. Jocque. The grocers at that time were Messrs John Garvey, J. C. Sullivan, Con. Young and Mr. Glover. The three first also sold wines and liquors. "Bill" Swanton was the village baker and his sweet loaf of diminutive size was a thing of beauty and joy forever to the small boy. The late Mr. Peter Glover, father of Mr. R. M. Glover, of the Peterborough Examiner, conducted a butcher shop in the west end of the village hall. This hall was a modest frame structure and also contained the village lockup. It was not safe to put in a prisoner over night, however, as he was always conspicuous by his absence next morning.

John Craig was the village constable in those days and John Woods, a lovable old gentleman, and father of Mr. E. W. Woods, of Toronto, dispensed justice as Justice of the Peace. I well recall the time when the village cut-ups were lined up before him to answer to a charge laid by a well known resident of the village that we did pose as nature unadorned at a popular swimming hole. We engaged a lawyer (John O'Meara) to defend us and we left the court badly scared. The lecture given us by the Magistrate, however, was worth the price of admission. Later that summer the gang occupied positions on the bleachers at a session of the village police court when the complainant in the swimming episode declared that he could tell the age of a hen by its teeth.

OLD EXAMINER MAN.

Ashburnham at the beginning of the eighties did not have any railway facilities. True, many years before the Cobourg Railway, which ran from Cobourg across Rice Lake and came to an abrupt ending at the village, placed it on the map. But this railway was short lived. It was a wide guage line and remnants of the roadbed are still visible in Otonabee township. The writer's mother was a passenger on the train that carried the Prince of Wales (later King Edward) to Peterborough in the sixties. Later on a company of Belleville and Hastings County citizens organized what was known as the Grand Junction Railway. A charter was secured for the construction of a line from Belleville to Ashburnham. Work on the new line was prosecuted with vigor. In 1881 the construction gang had reached the village. A station, freight shed, round house and elevator were erected. The locomotives were of the antiquated type and bore the names of the railway officials on the side. They were old wood burners and I can still hear them puffing and snorting. The inauguration of a passenger service was a gala event. When the first passenger train steamed into the village bearing the railway officials and other distinguished personages a deputation of Peterborough citizens, with the Fire Brigade band was on hand to welcome them. A big banquet was held during the day at the Oriental Hotel.

This railway was a little short on rolling stock, especially railway coaches. Whenever an excursion was flat cars were used for the overflow. Evergreens were placed on either side of the flat cars and planks used for seats. flat cars and planks used for seats. The sun, and, oftentimes, the rain would pour down on the excursionists and a shower of sparks from the old wood burners would convert the white dresses of the girls into polka dot effects. The Grand Junction was later absorbed by the Midland Railway, and the only memorial left standing in the village is the old elevator.

In the early eighties construction work on the Ontario and Quebec Railway (later known as the C. P. R.) had reached the outskirts of the village from the east. This also marked the first arrival of Italians in this section of the Province. In the year 1883 the first train passed over the C. P. R. bridge spanning the Otonabee. The writer remembers crawling on top of a box car and making the initial trip.

Ashburnham figured largely in matters military in the eighties. The old drill shed was situated on Mark Street. One company of the 57th Battalion was stationed in the village. The Rogers family was prominent in military circles. The late Col. J. Z. Rogers was for many years head of the regiment, while the late Col. Harry Rogers, former Postmaster at Peterborough, was in command of the Prince of Wales Dragoons. A son (Harry), entered the Imperial service in India after graduating at the Royal Military College, Kingston. David Rogers, father of Col. J. Z. Rogers, was a veteran of the rebellion of 1837. He was attached to the militia, and was one of a party that figured prominently in the Caroline incident. The Caroline was a steamboat which was used in the rebel interests at Niagara. David Rogers and a number of other soldiers were detailed to destroy this vessel. They set it on fire, cut it loose from its moorings and allowed it to drift over the Falls. David Rogers died in the early eighties.

A number of old veterans also resided in the village. Prominent among them was "Mexican Joe" Graham. Mr. Graham saw service in the United States-Mexican war. He was for many years drum major for the Peterborough Fire Brigade band, and was every inch a soldier.

Around about the year 1882 England was engaged in a sanguinary fight against the Arabs in Africa under El Madhi (the False Prophet). General (Chinese) Gordon had been bottled up in the city of Khartoum, and the Imperial authorities called for Canadian boatmen and rivermen to navigate boats down the Nile in order to effect Gordon's rescue. One Ashburnhamite, M. Mowry, answered the call together with a number from Peterborough. General Gordon perished before help arrived. Mr. Mowry accompanied the British Army under General Stewart after the work of the Nile voyageurs was over. The writer can remember when, on his return, he held the boys spellbound by his recital of stirring incidents.

The spring of 1885 was a lively one around the old drill shed. Louis Reil at the head of his Indians and half breeds had cut loose in the Northwest and there was a call for volunteers to supress the outbreak. There was no trouble to get men, ex-Alderman Joseph Crowe of Peterborough, being one of the number from Ashburnham who answered the call. I remember picking up an Examiner special fly sheet one Sunday morning which told the story of the first reverse to Canadian arms. The Examiner followed up this journalistic enterprise by launching a daily paper.

Ashburnham citizens took their politics seriously in the early eighties. John Burnham represented the constituency in the Federal House for many years. Lively political meetings were held in the old town hall on Mark street. Heckling of the candidates was a feature. The writer has vivid recollections of one meeting. It was held late in the fall and the hall was filled to capacity. The village cut-ups were on hand to a man, or, at least, to a boy. We were not interested in the National Policy or other questions. We were there to have some fun. When the fun was at its heights, however, we were unceremoniously ejected from the hall by constable Craig. A brief indignation meeting was held on the outside and reprisals followed. One of the gang mounted the roof of the hall with a piece of board and brick. It was a perilous task and also a labor of love for this particular member of the gang. He placed the plank over the top of the chimney and placed the brick on top to make it secure. We then awaited developments. The large box stove in the hall belched forth volumes of dense smoke. The village constable opened the big stove door to investigate, but this only aggravated matters. The meeting was abruptly terminated, the windows opened up and many climbed out rather than be compelled to fight their way to the door. The boys were sworn to secrecy, and no one ever divulged the plot.

While on the old town hall, the writer can recall another incident of the eighties. A social had been booked for the hall. Part one consisted of a strawberry feast and part two a dance. A well known village character had secured a quantity of cow itch, and before the chairs and benches had been set back against the wall had succeeded in distributing the contents of the package over the floor. Those were the days of the square dance, and after the boys and girls had executed a few ends, the cow itch had found its way up their clothes and next to their flesh. The situation can better be imagined than described. Justice moved slowly in those days, and no effort was made to find the perpetrator of this ticklish trick.

IT ISN'T NEWS, SAYS DUGGAN, TO TELL WHAT IS OBVIOUS

But William F. Succeeded in Digging Up Something Different.

IT'S A GREAT LIFE!

By William F. Duggan
Formerly Reporter for the Peterborough Examiner (1925-6). Now Reporter for The Border Cities Star, Windsor

During my brief career as a newspaper man, I have at various times been called upon to record the impressions and opinions of the great and the near-great, but never has any gentleman from the press requested an interview from me.

True, I have never been jailed on any interesting charge, nor been in a serious accident. I have not preached any revolutionary sermons, presented myself for the Legislature, nor joined and aspired to office in fraternal organizations. In fact, now that I have reflected, I can't think of anything noteworthy that I have accomplished but none the less I have the faculties essential for receiving and imparting views on this and that which should be all that is necessary.

But it isn't. To break into the news you must be somebody of importance or do something in an unusual way. Years ago some newspaper editor queered the works for mediocrity when he sprung that one about the man biting the dog and I have concluded that rather than resort to such methods, I would remain in obscurity even at the cost of withholding my trite comments from a waiting world.

So now, just when I had resigned myself to a life in the background, along comes the Examiner managing editor requesting me to say something, anything, reminiscent of Peterborough and my association with that city. Permit me to confess that I, like many an otherwise good banquet lecturer, am totally unprepared. I have forgotten my notes and left my music at home. Besides, I have had no practice.

These folks who see their names in the paper day after day are accustomed to it. They have had years of practice. When a reporter goes to see them they known how to look at him in that intense, searching fashion and shout "I have nothing to say about anything!" whereat they proceed to talk rapidly and incoherently about everything between the present fashions for women and the scandalous way the gov'mint restricts their liquor.

But aside from all that I feel a natural hesitancy, a reluctance to intrude, for strictly speaking I am not a Peterborough old boy. I wasn't born here, I do claim though that I spent some three years here, three years which I shall regard as the best of my life. During that time I had experiences which will leave me with nothing but pleasant memories. Whenever I return always with that exultant feeling which came over me when I went back to school after the summer holidays. Don't misunderstand, for I really did like to go back and if my memory serves me well so did most of my boyhood friends.

I have gone to Normal school here played on one of the best ball teams in the world here and have worked in many of the city's leading industrial establishments, although I must confess that I was generally fired before my employers discovered my true worth. Not that I hold it against them. They have probably realized long before this that they made a mistake in depriving themselves of my services.

It was on the Examiner that I cut my newspaper eye-teeth. It was there that I became initiated into the noblest and most accursed profession in which man can engage. It was there that I learned to hurl myself out of bed after a two-hour sleep and busy myself in tramping along my beat in search of material for my facile pen. There were calls to be made at the undertakers to discover who had passed away, then on to the fire-hall to learn if the "flaming monster" had tried to break loose during the night. The police station was another port of call where I used to sit, pencil in hand, a note book before me, ready to record the misfortunes of such citizens as had carned the attention of the law, and any quips and jests which the legal lights might use in their wordy battles.

After calling at a dozen other places, my "nose for news" quivering expectantly all the while, I would return to the office and there make a frantic effort to decipher my notes, generally finding that there was some important detail on which I had neglected to attain full and exact information. I never asked any other reporter about this last mentioned feature but I have no doubt many experience the same difficulty.

When all the "stuff" is up and in the pages and the presses begin to drone the reporter then has nothing of very great importance to do. He can relax. Of course there are the incidentals of heading up "time copy" for the night machines, totalling the "strings" of the outside correspondents and, when those minor tasks are completed going after features such as the life of a telephone operator, elevator man or interviewing the dog-catcher to see how his great work is progressing.

After this a reporter is free to write some more or make a resolution that he will do it "soon" following which he is allowed a brief period for supper and is then forced to rush away to his night assignment. Then "far into the night."

I don't know why I have given this resume of a day in a reporter's life. I am almost forced to believe that it was done to obviate the necessity of presenting those views and impressions which I spoke about earlier.

Peterborough is a fine city, but why should I say so through the medium of "The Press". It wouldn't be news for everybody knows it.

WELCOME HOME.

With banners gaily waving and sound of silvery chimes,
We welcome home our old boys and girls from many climes;
As, at fair Spring's returning, the birds all homeward fly,
So you, again foregather, beneath your native sky.

Welcome you are as Sunshine, when darksome clouds decay,
Welcome as the bonny blooms, that glad our hearts in May;
For why, you are our ain folks, our kith and kin and more,
The dear friends and companions beloved in days of yore.

To you, your old Home City, flings open wide her gate,
With very kindliest greetings, our civic powers await,
Hark, our loud acclaim up rising, sets the startled birds aflight,
And awakes swift answering echoes, round Armour's lofty height.

The Keys are handed over to you for Holiday;
Our citizens in thousands, together will combine

Indigestion
Immediate Relief!

What most people call indigestion is usually excess acid in the stomach. The food has soured. The instant remedy is an alkali which neutralizes acids. But don't use crude helps. Use what your doctor would advise.

The best help is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. For the 50 years since its invention it has remained standard with physicians. You will find nothing else so quick in its effect, so harmless, so efficient.

One tasteless spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in acid. The results are immediate, with no bad after-effects. Once you learn this fact, you will never deal with excess acid in the crude ways. Or learn—now—why this method is supreme.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drug store.

PRAISE FOR MANY

By Chester J. Frowde

With Peterborough Review reportorial staff from 1910 to 1913, and also in 1916, now with The Journal Dailies, Ottawa.

What a rich and prized treasure house of memories I have of Peterborough. As a newspaperman I am not expected to have any sentiment but personally I cannot think of the old home town without almost wistful memories of its old associations, friends and favorite haunts.

It is ten or eleven years, I cannot recall exactly—since I last visited Peterborough. I ought to be ashamed of myself. Just why I have not been back often is hard to explain but primarily it is probably because there are no kith or kin there now.

When I left Peterborough in 1916 to make my home elsewhere, I was employed as reporter on the old Peterborough Review. For a few months previous to my departure, a couple of associates on the Review, and myself, had foolishly believed we could rehabilitate that historical newspaper and imagined ourselves businessmen enough to accomplish that feat. Needless to say we failed for newspapermen are notoriously poor businessmen and later I learned that I was the only one of the three to actually put up any real hard-earned money—I think it was $50—but it seemed like a fortune to me at the time. The others who went in on the deal will probably get a great laugh out of it now, if they by chance see this. They were, C. Kerr Stewart, now part owner of the Midland Free Press and a man named Mr. Middleton, I cannot recall his initials but he was a bookkeeper of The Review at the time.

Having first seen the light of day in Peterborough, having attended what was then the old West Ward school, now long disappeared and later the South Central school, the Collegiate Institute, and having worked at various jobs in Peterborough—without distinguishing myself in any—I feel that I can truthfully class myself as a Peterborough old boy. In April 1910 my good friend F. H. Dobbin, offered me a reportorial position on The Review at $5 a week, and I was glad to accept for having always had a hankering for newspaper work it seemed to me what I was seeking.

The next few years I did general assignments on the paper, including calling on my good friend S. R. Armstrong, city clerk, calling on the chief of police who was then Daniel Thompson, Detective Sam Newhall, and all the old members of the police force of those days.

F. R. Yokome, fine old newspaperman, was then editor of The Peterborough Examiner and his son Croyland Yokome, was city editor of the Review. Fred Craig, better known as "Josh" was sports editor of The Examiner as they call them now, and both Yokome and Craig were, to my inexperienced eyes, ideal newspapermen and still are as far as that goes. There was no better man on a story than "Toyt" Yokome, as he was nicknamed, or any better sport writer than "Josh" Craig. Then there were others who ranked equally high in my estimation, like Harry Theobald, Charlie Curtis, Percy Crane, Jim Molloy, Ernest McKeeley, who died some years ago. Poor Ernie, how we liked to sit in the big, easy chairs of the Empress hotel, then just up, smoke fat cigars and think we were real newspapermen. McKeeley was a prolific writer, and a corking good newspaperman.

About the year 1913, I got the urge to hit out for more money and landed a position in Saskatoon where I remained two years, returning to the Peterborough Review in 1916 but leaving again for Sudbury and later Ottawa, where I have been located since.

While I have not revisited Peterborough of recent years, it is an omission that I intend to corect henceforth. It is my hope that I will be able to rejoin the ough old boys for one d of the old boys and girls re Such a visit however wo tain to have a touch of since I left Peterborough parents have died, and return to the old scenes a house on Walton street w member bidding my d goodbye on the occasion visit home about 1918, it feelings that would of sentimental.

Getting back to old newspaper experience, th on one another so swiftly which you probably have this article would not sufi them all. Neither do I wish into old time stuff for boresome. But those days Review, will never be for do I remember famous of who have passed off Poor old Charlie Raymond in Peterborough, a brilli author of a series of "Jud poems, who fell a victim paperman's greatest foe, or, another editor of The I believe died under simi lar circumstances, F. H. former editor of The Revie call these names if he is minded as he was in th I recall.

Then I recall coverin Council meetings, when Jr., was in Council, wh ler was mayor, when Geo don was city solicitor an Chief Howard was in comm fire department. Many w cases I covered when G. was building up a reputati ing a top notch crimina lawyer, and even then it w predict that he would go was later borne out by his in the political field.

Others whom I recall ig, and who may still be familes in Peterborough are, "Billy" of the pillars of old Charlet church, later Trinity, Mr. principal of the Central at that time, Mr. Dela Fosse, ti an of the Carnegie Library, st, of the Best Hardware comp many others whose names ly mentioning to bring them

I even remember when an Jolliffe, used to be a re on either the Review or Exam carried a reporter's pad, D. he, was just starting out on his s paper career about the t was thinking of entering the per field. I think he is now with ina Leader.

If there are still some old friends such as Bert McLenister Stalker, Lou Ingram, Ar in Peterborough, please let tle assure them I have not forgotten altogether. Or good old Charlie, in the city clerk's office a news sleuth, now that I been others in action, as one wish to mee.

And so I conclude this ling collection of reminiscences it may be along the lines which Mr. Heron desire, and hoping that may be possible for me to attend Old Home Week, for one day a Ashburnham in the eight the centre of the athletic ac of the town of Peterborough a story could be written of letic events staged on the old field in those days. These gro were utilized by lacrosse, baseball and football clubs. Peterb had a lacrosse club of Dominio repute in the early eighties, public holidays were celebrat a right royal manner and Aham was the Mecca of the hollowds. Oshawa, Belleville, Bowm and Orillia were on the lacrosp in those days and well kno rosse teams like the Capitals of a, the Shamrocks of Montreal, Ids of Toronto, etc., were seen ction. Among those who figur the Peterborough team in the eighties were: Billy Sanderson Tierney, Joe Joyal, Mike McD Mike Halpin, Jimmy Coughlin, ortye. Billy Simpson, Kit Ruth Jimmy Sheehy, Billy Rudkin Rev. Father Rudkins. This p was reinforced later by Georgiux, C. LeBrun, Doctor Yelland, Kelly, Jumbo Stevenson, Percy Miles and Reynolds. Dick Kelly afterwards cast his lot with the Shamrocks of Montreal, and was conceded to be the cleverest centre player of all time. Jack Donoghue was also on the line-up as a goal tender.

The old cricket club was a very valuable sporting asset, many games being played with the leading cricket clubs on the continent. Among those prominent in cricket circles were: George Hatton, R. B. Rogers, Hallett, who was Principal of Ashburnham Public School, Tom Rutherford, Grundy, Hammond, Hartley, Montgomery, Cooper, Miles and Max Hamilton, etc. Later on in the eighties the cricket ground was taken over by the Peterborough Athletic Association. A cinder track was built for bicycle and foot races. Today the old place is but a memory.

The writer got his first experience in journalism as village scribe for the Peterborough Examiner. The printers never ran short of copy as there was something doing in the village all the time. My heaviest assignment was reporting the proceedings of the village council. No trouble was experienced in getting material for the village council as the villagers took the duty of citizenship seriously. The municipal elections were always spirited affairs, and good men were always elected. My thoughts go back to the time when I used to sit at the table with the village fathers. The late John Burnham, M. P., was Reeve at that time. Such problems as high level bridges and permanent roads were never dreamed of, but the village dads deliberated over the purchase of a keg of nails for the plank sidewalks with the same seriousness as is manifested by modern aldermen when the expenditures of big amounts for municipal purposes is up for consideration.

Hallowe'en night was always a gala night in the village. Constable Craig always had an assistant that night in the person of a man named Mitchell. The two officials were on their toes all the time, and then some. Columns could be written of the depredations of the village gang, but one or two will suffice. The classic of all Hallowe'en pranks was the painting of Shuter's mule. Mr. Shuter was a respected resident of the village and sold fish. His conveyance was drawn by a mule, and I fancy I can hear Mr. Shuter shouting in front of the homes: "Fresh fish, salmon trout and bass." Halowe'en came round, and prior to the opening of the night's programme, a member of the gang mentioned the mule. The gang marched in massed formation to the residence of Mr. Shuter on Lake street where a council of war was held. One member was told off to reconnoitre a little and he reported that the mule was in the yard with a long rope attached to its neck. Fortune certainly favored the gang. One of our number volunteered to lead the critter through the gate and out on to the highway. The mule had something to say about it however. Talk about a muleish disposition! I never saw a more cantankerous creature in my life. Everything was moving on this particular Hallowe'en night except that mule. Tugging at the rope, coaxing, shoving, etc., had no effect. It was dangerous to shove to much, as on several occasions. Mr. Mule shot out his hind feet with terrific force. Volunteers were called for, and the mule was literally dragged through the yard and out on to the roadway. Then the fireworks started. The mule took exception to the treatment meted out to it and made a break for liberty. It headed south along Lake street to the lake with the long rope trailing in the mud. The gang followed at breakneck speed, but the mule did not slacken its madcap pace until Burnham's Point was reached. It was then led in triumph, perfectly subdued, along the lake front, north on Mark street to the main street of the village and then on to Rogers' lumber yard. Someone volunteered to get a supply of paint of different colors. (It was learned afterwards that the paint was taken from Craig's carriage factory.) The mule, which was now quite docile and lamb-like, was striped with artistic taste. The color effect was marvellous. The mule was then turned loose on the main drive, and was later taken in charge by a village character who actually led it up the steps at Lipsett's hotel and into the bar.

On another Hallowe'en in the early eighties the boys decided to burn an old stack which was an eyesore to the villagers. It was arranged with a member of the night shift at Rogers' mill to call the Peterborough Fire Brigade after the blaze was started. In his desire to do the right thing at the right time, he had the firemen in the village before the match was applied and the conflagration was called off.

Time has wrought many changes since those good old days. The old swimming hole at the head gates is but a memory, Cumming's woods, that favorite spot east of the lift lock has disappeared, the Trent Valley canal runs through what was in those days pasture land, and saddest of all, many of the old gang are sleeping the sleep that knows no waking.

"MY CANADA."

Land of many lakes and teeming seas
And of rolling fields of golden grain,
Trees that reach on high the sky to tease,
Mountain peaks that gaze with grand disdain
Down on valleys deep, and streams that leap
Swiftly on their way to rivers wide;
Inlets where great oceans' fingers creep
Glaciers to smear with salted tide;
Where the tinted sky at close of day
Ushers in no night of sordid gloom,
But a starlit realm where moonbeams play
'Mid the cataract's resounding boom.
Land where those who work will reap rewards,
Where the sluggard quickly falls from sight,
And where ploughshares only now are swords
Used by men who once left all to fight.
Head I bow on this First July morn,
Thanks I give for all our God foresaw,
For amid your grandeur I was born,
My own Motherland, my Canada.

Lotteridge Showmen Have Trying Experiences As Last Night's Storm Plays Havoc With Tents

Last night was a tough night for the sailors at sea, but it was an equally hard night for the employees of the Lotteridge Shows, which yesterday were in the process of erection at the Exhibition grounds.

The high wind and the rain played havoc with a couple of concessions and gave a number of the employees many anxious moments as they did not know just how long it would be before their own tents would follow the path of the storm

One of the ball game booths suffered the greatest damage, being blown completely down The canvass was badly torn and the frame shattered

The storm was not without its funny sides, from the view point of some of those who were not affected by the small hurricane One of the employees tells how Pat Howe, who is in charge of the Sanitary Plate Lunch, stayed up a good part of the night trying to hold his big tent on terra firma.

This big dining pavilion had not been completely erected; the roof was up but the side walls had not been put in place by nightfall, and when the storm struck this concession in the middle of the night, it all but lifted it off the ground. Pat, as one of the men explained it, sat on the frame work all night, bobbing up and down with each gust of wind.

However, there were no serious casualties during the storm, and work was still in progress this morning. The rides were being put into shape and will soon be completed.

SENATOR BUCHANAN STARTED CAREER WITH THE EXAMINER

Raise From $3 to $4 Tempted Him to Work for Simon Armstrong.

NOW A PUBLISHER

From W. A. Buchanan, reporter on The Examiner and Review from 1894 to 1900, now publisher of the Lethbridge, Alberta, Herald and member of the Senate of Canada.

My first experiences in newspaper work, apart from a little amateurish attempt at setting type on the Norwood Register and preparing Norwood correspondence for the Examiner, were gained on the Peterborough Examiner. I started setting type in the composing room on the top floor in the day time, and taking assignments at nights—mostly church lectures and entertainments. The late F. R. Yokome, a wise guide for a cub reporter, sat in the Editor's chair, and George Van Blaricom was the only reporter. I remember "Van's" fondness for adjectives and unusual words—words that required many readers to keep a dictionary by their side, so as to interpret the evening newspaper. "Van" was a hustler as a news gatherer and a ready, fluent speaker for "The Press" on festive occasions.

An increase of a dollar a week (if my memory serves me right, from $3.00 to $4.00)tempted me to go over to the Review, where I did similar work, typesetting in the day time, handling the mailing list and the newsboys in the afternoon, and taking an occasional assignment at night, Simon Armstrong was editor of the Review at that time and Fran MacKay, of Toronto, now prominent in the telephone world, reporter. Suddenly the desire for a more complete education came upon me and I rushed from the grind at Peterborough to the classes of the Norwood High School. Newspaper work, however, had so strong an appeal, that when I was soon offered a position as reporter on the Review, following Simon Armstrong's appointment as Town Clerk, and Mr. MacKay's succession to the editorial chair, I succumbed and with an exception of a few months, when George Morrow attempted to make an insurance agent out of me, I have devoted my days since then to the production of newspapers.

I was in Peterborough for around seven years. My experience there under the guidance of Mr. Yokome, Mr. Armstrong and Mr. McKay, gave me an exceptionally good foundation. I walked the streets and covered the assignments, in the days when James Kendry and Jas. R. Stratton ruled the political roost, and William Yelland moved from his carriage shop into the Mayor's chair. Daily I came into contact with George I. Roszel as police chief, with Jos. Stewart and Charley McGinty, as members of the police force, and David W. Dumble peering over the magistrate's desk upon police, prisoner and public. Sometimes a live police item came from the County Magistrate's Court, where the late George Edmison presided, or from the County Court, where Judge Weller, with much dignity, directed affairs. Most of the news of the days I recall, related to sport. I doubt if any town in Ontario was more active and prominent in the athletic world than Peterborough in the days I was chronicling the town's life for "The Review". It shone in lacrosse, and baseball and cricket in summer, and curling and hockey in winter. Sam Ray was the encyclopaedia from which all knowledge of all games could be extracted. He seemed to have played everything, and his Hunter street shop was the rendezvous for the sporting element and the foundation from which much news fell into my note book. May I be pardoned if I emphasize hockey as I knew it back in the late nineties. I never played the game, except once, on a team of the old National Hotel boarders against the Oriental boarders. All league players were barred. The teams were intended to be made up of greenhorns—and they were—. On the Oriental team my editor, MacKay, had a place, and I remember he did not like the account I wrote of the match. I leaned too strongly to the National, and so he wrote an account of his own as an offset to my own. But that was only an incident. I can hardly imagine Peterborough at any time since, having hockey, as exciting, and with such a grip upon the populace as in the days of "Monty" Montgomery, Parsons, Benedict, Walter Phelan, Lionel King, Roger Davidson, Bert Belleghem, Rolly Glover, Fred Whitcroft, Chris Graham, the Armstrong boys, Ernie Wasson and others, that I am fearful I have overlooked. The old Charlotte street rink used to be crowded for league and exhibition games. I remember, when I was secretary of the club, we brought a famous Winnipeg team to the city for an exhibition match. The rink was jammed. After that for years, the rink always could be counted upon to be packed, as Peterborough was a real hockey town. It won championships frequently, and still keeps a place of distinction in the Ontario Hockey Association. I preserve today a picture of one of the old club executives, when I ranked as secretary, which appeared in a New York journal, through the influence, or interest, or ability to pay for the space of Lem Felcher, the diamond studded saloon-keeper, who operated a place of refreshment on George Street.

All news in my time was set by hand and I have often marvelled since at the ingenuity of the men upstairs who could make out the hieroglyphics of F. R. Yokome, Frank Dobbin, Frank MacKay and myself sufficiently rapidly to enable a paper to be published daily. It is a wonder that it did not take them days to unravel the mysteries that pen or pencil had thrown together on paper.

I recall also that reporting in those days occasionally required an assignment to write up patent medicine ads. A local druggist would hear that one of his customers had been cured by the use of the contents of one of his medicine bottles or a box of pills. Headquarters of the remedy would ask that an account should be gathered by a local newspaper to be later copied and broadcasted throughout the Dominion and maybe into other parts of the world. I was sent on a mission of this kind one winter day to Harvey township, beyond Buckhorn. I was directed to see Mrs. So-and-so and she would tell me of the wonderful cure. I forget now what her trouble was, or the name of the medicine, but I will never forget the woman. Whatever the remedy had cured her of, it was not the habit of smoking. In those days the sight of a woman smoking was rare. This old lady, living alone, in a little cabin had one constant companion and that was a clay pipe—colored to a nut brown. And what a sight she was! She would sit in a rocking-chair, some feet away from the kitchen stove, and expectorate into the hearth with never a failure in making a bull's eye.

There were three papers in Peterborough in my time. One night I wandered into the now defunct Times office. It was a morning paper. It's editor and reporter was Fred Harris who died not so long ago in Rochester. Fred was short of news. He wanted a story and he didn't care whether it was real or fictitious. I yielded to his pressing demands, and made up a tale of a near tragedy at the C.P.R. station. A child climbed off a train, and fell into the creek that ran under the station platform. A heroic passenger jumped into the creek, picked up the child as it was going down for the fatal last time, and carried it back on the train. That was all. Harris played up the yarn with a big head on the front page. I think it was at this moment that yellow journalism began. But my story is not complete. The next day the other evening newspaper—not my own—re-wrote the story and featured it. A copy soon arrived at my editor's desk and he began checking up to ascertain if there were any "scoops." His eyes fell upon the tale of the near drowning. I was summoned and criticized on my carelessness in not investigating the 'Times' front page feature. Being the author of it, I knew it was false and so reported to Mr. MacKay. I doubt however, that I told him that I had written the "fake." The joke was on my rival on the other paper. He still lives and I will not mention names. The moral is, "Investigate, before you take another paper's story as gospel truth."

I almost overlooked another source of considerable news, the Episcopal Palace, the home of His Lordship, Bishop O'Connor, since deceased. Either from His Lordshop directly or from the late Ven. Archdeacon Casey, we would get the news of the church in the diocese of Peterborough. That diocese, as I recall it, was much more extensive than it is today. It spread out into New Ontario. At any rate, the Bishop used to make a tour each year into the North, then mostly devoted to lumbering and years ahead of the mining development which has brought into existence one of the richest sections of the Dominion. A trip to Northern Ontario had as much news value in those days as a trip to the Hudson Bay or the MacKenzie River possesses today. The Bishop received the reporters upon his return and told them about his journey and about the country. He was a gracious and kindly man. I always liked Archdeacon Casey, too. He gave me many a good item of news.

It used to be the custom in those days to give considerable space to the Churches. On Monday a reporter would call on the City Pastors and get something about the Sunday services. There stands out amongst all the Clergy of that period one lovable character, a man of wide learning and scholarly attainments, Rev. Herbert Symonds, of St. Luke's. My recollection is that he inaugurated a Fortnightly Club, a literary organization. I was never permitted to report its proceedings; Hampden Burnham, if my memory serves me rightly, was the official reporter.

Back in the late nineties all banquets were held either at the Oriental, or the Morgan House, and the dances in the Oddfellows Hall. There was an annual St. Andrew's banquet, and about the only memory I carried away from them into the later years, was the name of Telford—the Scottish Bard from Smith Township. Every year as long as he lived, he dedicated a new poem to St. Andrew's day. There were banquets to George A. Cox, when he became Senator, and Honourable A. G. Blair, Minister of Railways and Canals, under whose wing was the Trent Valley Canal. At one of these, long before prohibition, or the Liquor Control Act, I remember one distinguished citizen of the County greedily quenching his thirst from a well filled finger bowl. The finger bowl contained pure, unadulterated water, but the distinguished citizen was over loaded with a mixture of many things and did not at the moment know the difference between a glass and a bowl.

Since I entered political life—and I have been there now for over twenty years—people, who knew the Review as a pronounced Conservative paper, wondered how I became a Liberal. But I was a Liberal when I was on the Review and resisted the Conservative atmosphere and influences to even quietly cast my first vote for a Liberal candidate. Of course, I did not parade the fact. I kept my political prejudices suppressed, so much so, that the Conservative candidate in this particular election, dropping in to the Review Office on the morning of the election, asked me if I had voted. "Oh yes!" I replied, "I voted on my way to the Office this morning". "I hope, said the Candidate, innocent entirely of my political leanings being different than the paper with which I was employed, "all our friends are as prompt in getting to the Polls." I thought to myself that if they were and had voted as I had done, he would not have much faith in the early birds hereafter.

The night of June the 23rd, 1896, was one both of despair and joy to me. Laurier had triumphed. The Liberal Party was in power after eighteen long years in opposition. I was overjoyed, but silent. I stood in the old G. N. W. telegraph office and read the returns. Ed. Dawson, the Agent, good Liberal that he was, could smile and be gleeful, but I had to muffle my feelings for fear that a smile would be detected and my true political affiliations uncovered and revealed to the Review. I remember, as though it were yesterday, a procession of enthusiastic Grits parading George Street. I could not be one of them but I envied every man his place in the ranks. John Lang, Liberal, had been elected in East Peterborough, and James Stevenson, Conservative, defeated in East Peterborough. The Grits celebrated Laurier and Lang and the Conservatives retired to their homes, but not to rest and peace, very early.

I could wander along for pages, with reminiscences that might only be interesting to myself, and I am afraid mostly about myself. But I must say something about Peterborough. I doubt if ever I knew of another Town that was as pleasantly situated—especially in summer. The glories of those northern lakes, the fascination of the quiet Otonabee, with prosperous farmsteads lining its shores, until Rice Lake, with its famous fishing grounds, and its wild rice beds, is reached. To me, these are amongst Peterborough's greatest assets, but probably the people at home don't estimate the value as highly as the citizen who has moved away.

And then the City itself! It was, of course, the first "big place" I had set foot in. But these first impressions of beautiful homes, shaded streets, and the wildness and the true to nature aspect of its parks—Inverlea with its banks lapped by the Otonabee and Jackson, with its Creek rambling over stones and through wood and dale—still linger.

What if we could live life over again! Would we do as we have done, or start off afresh with the whole past blotted out from meomry. Having seen much of the world, and despite the fact that I have established a home in one of the most beautiful and promising cities of the western plain, I should, I think, choose Peterborough as the starting point in my career again, and Yokome and MacKay and Armstrong and Dobbin as my journalistic critics and guides.

Senator W. A. Buchanan, who started his newspaper career with The Examiner at $3.00 a week and a tempting offer from Simon Armstrong for $4.00 made him go to The Review.

"A CANADIAN."

Could there a prouder title be
In heraldry, in history or anywhere?
I know there's none, and you'll agree
That it's a title born of Justice and and of Dare.
"A Canadian."

My heart goes throbbing when I hear
These words from lips of men, because they bring to me
Responsibilities so clear
To hold them high; from infamy to keep them free.
"A Canadian."

That was the title father had.
His father taught him of its greatness, of its worth.
My mother's title, too, it clad
Me from the very moment when she gave me birth.
"A Canadian."

It came to me with my first breath,
And while I live my aim will always be to keep
That title clean, so when grim Death
In final summons bids me rest, I'll fall asleep
"A Canadian."

FORMER CITY EDITOR EXAMINER RECALLS RAIDING TURKEY FLOCK

Received Splendid Coaching From Late F. R. Yokome, Says M. J. Hutchinson.

'SCOOP' MEANT EVERYTHING

By M. J. (Hutch) Hutchinson

I am not, strictly speaking, a Peterborough "Old Boy"—that is to say, I was not born either in Peterborough city nor in any of the townships comprising Peterborough county. I did, however, spend four very strenuous, eventful and happy years in Peterborough as city editor of the Examiner, during the period from 1903 to 1907. In connection with the Centennial celebration, I, along with other former Peterborough newspaper men, have been honored with a request for an article dealing with some of the instances of my newspaper work in the famous Lift-Lock City.

Perhaps this story might appropriately open with a hitherto unuttered confession of the subterfuge under which I secured my position as city editor of this paper. I was working in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. at the time, and saw an advertisement in the Toronto "Globe" for a city editor. I had never been a city editor; in fact I had not even been a reporter, the extent of my previous newspaper work having been as a country correspondent furnishing perhaps two "sticks" a week to the Bowmanville "Statesman", and the writing of an occasional story for the Sault Ste. Marie "News", published at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., but also circulated quite largely in the Canadian Sault. Having applied for the job on the Examiner, and realizing my unfitness for its duties, I decided that my presence on the spot was essential if I was to cinch it. Consequently, without waiting to learn as to whether my application had been accepted, I took a train and landed in Peterborough bright and early one Monday morning in May, 1903. I walked into the Examiner office and encountered the late Mr. Jamieson, who was at that time was business manager. Introducing myself, I said I had come to take the job of city editor. His reply was "Well, it didn't take you long, because we only wired you on Saturday to come." As a matter of fact, I had left the Sault before the wire was sent.

Received Fine Coaching.

Any success which may have attended my work on the Examiner was due largely to the splendid coaching and sympathetic help which I received from the late Mr. F. R. Yokome, then and for many years before and afterwards the much respected editor of the Examiner. In all my newspaper experience, I have never known anyone more patient or more genuinely kind than this true gentleman.

It was my good fortune to have associated with me in the rather rapidly changing reportorial staff a number of clever and sincere boys who have since made conspicuous success in newspaper or other fields.

Dick Choate, now telegraph editor of the Toronto "Globe," started his newspaper work on the Examiner during my connection with the paper. Since then, he has travelled almost the breadth of the continent and has worked on papers in many cities. Further reference to his work on the Examiner will be made later. He was succeeded by Bert Huston, a most conscientious news digger and a glutton for work. Later on I was responsible for Bert's leaving the Examiner to go with the MacLean Publishing Company, with which organization he is still connected in an executive capacity.

Harold A. Littledale was another reporter who started his career under me, and who, after going to the Buffalo Courier, landed in New York as a feature writer on the Herald and later on the Times. No assignment was to hard for Harold to tackle. Persistency was his middle name.

Norman Jolliffe graduated from the Review staff to that of the Examiner, and certainly musical events and sports were in good hands while Norman was on the paper. He forsook newspaper work, and is now numbered among the successful Canadian musicians in New York, being soloist in one of the best churches in the city, and a successful teacher.

Always Enthusiastic Sport.

Fred Craig, the present editor, also came to us from the Review. His specialty was—and I understand still is—sports. Fred loved the excitement of baseball and hockey particularly, but he always had a regular weekly assignment during the summer when he went up to Stoney Lake for the week-end and came back Monday morning with literally hundreds of personal items. We were never short of copy when Fred returned from his trips to Stoney Lake.

Timmie Yokome was also a product of the Examiner staff. His specialty was theatricals, and this inclination, in evidence so early in his life, led to a position on the New York "Clipper," perhaps the best-known theatrical paper in America.

I well recall the circumstances under which Tim Little started his newspaper work. His father kept a store in Garden Hill, and Tim was determined to become a newspaper man. He applied for a position on our staff, but there being no opening, he was so anxious to become a reporter that he offered to work for nothing and pay his own board, an offer which was accepted, and for some months he was a member of our staff on that basis. If I remember correctly, his first salary was $4.00 a week. He, too, has had a successful newspaper career, having worked on Toronto papers, also in Montreal, Woodstock and Belleville, in addition to having been given a commission and having served his country faithfully during the Great War. His experience was surely an outstanding example of the value of adherence to an idea. He knew exactly what he wanted to be, and was willing to make whatever sacrifices were necessary in the meantime.

We had no society editors on any of the Peterborough papers during my regime, and were at times sorely perplexed when we had to describe a fashionable wedding and tell all about the women's dresses. Incidentally, there was much more to that garment in those days than at the present time—in the way of quantity at any rate. The general procedure was for Van, of the Review, and myself to visit the home the day before the wedding, and get from the bride-to-be and her mother a complete description of the trousseau. Then that evening, after each having written his own introduction, we would duplicate the description of the bride's costume and also those of the bridesmaids and the mothers of the contracting parties. I would use the typewriter, and Van would dictate, and reports of scores of weddings of promnent Peterborough people appeared in the daily papers of that time as a result of this form of collaboration.

R. Fair's Large Ad.

In those days the front page of the Peterborough Examiner carried advertising. The space which was for many years occupied by Robt. Fair and Company was held by Mr. Fair to be perhaps his most valued business asset apart from his good name, and when there was any suggestion of taking the advertising off the front page, it raised such a storm in the business office that we gave it up. As a compromise, however, I think I started the first second (or duplicate) front page. It was devoid of all advertising, and we surely spread ourselves on Saturdays when we ran this full page of reading matter with headings as nearly like the then vogue of the big city papers as possible. We used to save up stories during the week so that they could appear on that page of the Saturday paper. Albert Martin, who was then the foreman of the composing room, I found to be very sympathetic with my efforts to produce a snappy looking paper, and he went to no end of trouble to co-operate with me.

Saturday morning was always an anxious time for me. The late Hon. J. R. Stratton came home from his duties as Provincial Secretary each Friday night, and was driven to the office behind a spanking team of bay horses about ten o'clock the next morning. If we had made any particularly bad breaks in the paper during the week, we then heard about them. The late Mr. Stratton was, however, a very real friend to me, and I am glad to be able, in the paper he owned during his lifetime, to pay this tribute to him. He wanted us to get out a really good paper, and was quite willing that we should spend money to do it.

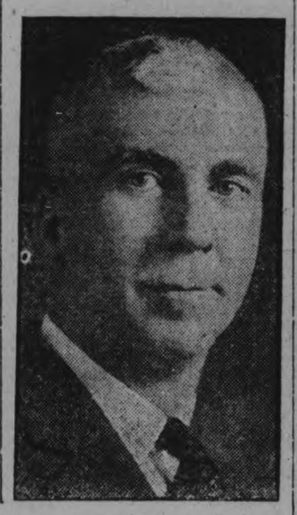
In those days, a "scoop" meant more, I think, than it does today. We were always in dread lest the Review would get one on us, and were correspondingly elated when we beat them out. I recall one such instance. It had always been the custom to have the story of the 12th of July parade appear in the issue of the day following the parade, the latter being held around noon and generally considered too late to get the report into that day's paper. One year, however, I conceived the idea that we ought to publish the news "while it was news," so far as the Orange parade was concerned, so with Harry Theobald (who was always good on Orange parade stories), I went down the line of the parade, getting the name of each lodge, its location and the name of the master. We then rushed back to the office and got the story in that afternoon's issue of the Examiner. I am afraid I was not very popular with some of the members of the Review staff for a few days afterwards.

The suggestion has been made that in this article some reference should be made to outstanding incidents in the writer's newspaper work in Peterborough. I could narrate many, but two or three will have to suffice.

Raiding Turkey Flock.

One relates to a political meeting which was held in Otonabee. Sam Moore, of the Review, and I, jointly hired a horse and buggy from Meagher's livery, and taking Ernie Best, then running a very successful hardware business on Hunter street, we attended the meeting, which was addressed by J. H. Burnham, and was, naturally, a Conservative meeting. On our way back to town in the bright moonlight of an October night, we noticed a flock of turkeys roosting on the top of a rail fence. The brilliant idea occurred to one of the trio that a roast turkey treat for the boys would be a good stunt.

FORMER CITY EDITOR.



M. J. HUTCHINSON
Director of Advertising in MacLean Publishing Company, Toronto and a former City Editor of The Examiner.

Ernie Best seized one of the turkeys firmly by the legs, one of our handkerchiefs was used to tie the legs together, and we took the bird back to Peterborough under the seat of the buggy. Repairing to the basement of Best's hardware store, the turkey was decapitated and the carcase taken to Harry Long's restaurant. The following night it was served to about a dozen kindred spirits.

Ernie Best went into the Y. M. C. A. work later, was in charge of all Canadian Y. M. C. A. activities in France during the war, with the rank of Major, and now, holding the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, is on the staff of McGill University. I imagine he has long since sent conscience money to the owner of the turkey.

The older residents of Peterborough will remember the famous Hill murder case in North Dummer. Some young chaps were out for a drive one night. They had with them a military rifle which one of the boys, a veteran of the Boer War, had brought back with him as a souvenir. They were rather hilarious as they drove along the peaceful countryside—so much that two small children sleeping in an upstairs room got out of bed to see what was the cause of the disturbance. One of the boys in the buggy, without criminal intent, it was afterwards believed, leveled the rifle at the open window and shot a seven-year-old boy through the heart. Word came to Peterborough by telephone early the next morning, which happened to be a Friday. Dick Chroate and I, adopting the only then known means of rapid transportation, engaged a horse and buggy and started on the 25 mile trip to Dummer to get the facts. We got them, including the only picture in existence of the dead boy. On our way back, we met McRae and another reporter from the Review. There followed that night the most strenuous period I think I have ever gone through in newspaper work. Dick Choate spent the entire night making chalk-plate pictures of the scene of the fatality, and I wrote the story. I believe it occupied about six columns of single leaded matter. Neither of us went to bed at all; we snatched perhaps half an hour's sleep on one of the tables on the second floor of the Examiner office, and started in to produce Saturday's paper, as usual, at 8 o'clock Saturday morning. To us, it was an enterprising piece of newspaper work. There were, of course, no automobiles in those days. We drove 50 miles as fast as our horse would take us, and I presume the only reason we were first on the scene was that we happened to have a fleeter steed.

With Militia in Ottawa.

The third incident, and with it this article concludes, deals with a visit which was paid by the 57th battalion, under Lt. Col. R. Max Dennistoun, to Ottawa, in the summer of, I think, 1906. I was not a member of the regiment, but one man from each paper was taken along on these trips to recount the activities of the battalion, and I may say that we used rare discretion, I now believe, in omitting to publish the real incidents connected with the trip. We landed in Ottawa early on a very hot Sunday morning, and when I went to dress, I found that the only pair of boots left in the pullman were a size too small. I had no alternative, however, but to wear them, and I had to walk, as did the regiment itself of course, from the old C.P.R. station, near Booth's mills, to the camp grounds, near the armouries, on the bank of the canal. It was a harrowing experience for me, and when we arrived at camp I was greatly relieved when T. E. Bradburn, then a member of the Ontario legislature for West Peterborough announced that he would like to find the fellow that stole his boots, because the ones he got were much too big for him. An exchange, mutually satisfactory, was soon effected. I recall that on that visit Sam Moore was the representative of the Review, and he and I were assigned a tent to ourselves. Sam had just bought a new pair of tan shoe. Ernie Best, then a lieutenant in the 57th battalion, was always ready for some excitement, and suggested that in the night I should pass out under the tent one of Sam's new tan boots, which I did. In the morning, to the latter's surprise, he found that he had one tan and one black boot. It happened to be a holiday in Ottawa, and it was with considerable difficulty that Sam was able to get the other boot blackened to match the one that had changed color during the night.

Meant Long Hours.

Newspaper work in Peterborough during the period to which I have referred meant long hours and much smaller remuneration, I imagine, than at the present time. I started on the paper at $10.00 per week, and was getting $16.00 when I left. I remember discussing matrimony with a girl in Peterborough, who, fortunately for her, turned me down, but she made the statement that she could live on $600.00 a year, which at that time was within my limit. We were always at our desks at 8 o'clock in the morning and never away from the office until after midnight, excepting, perhaps, on Saturday night. The Examiner office, in those days at any rate, was the rendezvous of a fine lot of young fellows interested in sport. After every hockey, baseball or lacrosse game they gathered in the office to talk it over, mainly, I imagine, because Rollie Glover was always a participant in lacrosse and hockey games, and the contests on the crease, or ice, were refought. Fred Whitcroft was always in the party as were Chris Graham, Bill Cavanagh, Bill Crowley, and others. When they got tired and went home, I had to stay and write the story of the game so that there would be copy for the machines the next morning at 7 o'clock.

When I left Peterborough in 1907 to go with the MacLean Publishing Company, in Toronto, the Press Club gave me a dinner and presented me with a pair of Persian lamb gauntlets and an address, the latter artistically illustrated and cleverly composed by Mr. F. H. Dobbin. The gauntlets have long since become moth eaten, but the address and the memory are still in perfect preservation.

Yes, those were strenuous but happy days in Peterborough, and I am delighted to have the opportunity of coming back and revisiting the scenes of the above and many other experiences during my four years sojourn here.

THREW VISITOR DOWN STAIRS; THEREFORE HE WAS AN EDITOR

F. H. Dobbin Tells His Early Conception of Editorial Ability.

TRADITION UPHELD

By F. H. Dobbin

The Craft of the Press may rightly claim that in many respects it stands by itself; differing from all other professions in that it combines the literary and the mechanical. In the centuries that have passed since the Press was evolved and has struggled for a deserved recognition, it has passed through much tribulation. And now having reached a position of usefulness and influence may rightly claim that indeed the Press is mightier than the sword.

Concede to the Press its antiquity and at once other attributes claim recognition. Consider the element of traditions. Any profession or cult that stands to influence must have traditions. Loyalty to principles, zeal and untiring application are all the outcome of tradition. The military arms of the British service are held together by traditions of achievements won and gained by corps in the battlefield and ships on the ocean. In some such manner, in civil life, we have hanging around the newspaper and absorbed by its workers many traditions that belong to and surround the Press, a part of its life history. They are traditions which may not be disregarded, for the true newspaper man accepts and stands for a code of ethics, from which he may not loosen without impugning his position as a leader in thought and action. We find examples of such dropping of barriers in the passing of newspapers which fell from grace, fail to hold public opinion, miss public respect, and fade away to disappear from sight and issue.

Among the mass of tradition is one that concerns the Editor. In these later years the editor's individuality has been submerged and impersonal, largely because he does not own and control the paper he assists in publishing. In the days when he was the proprietor to a very much larger extent than now, especially in connection with papers in the larger centres, his worth and work stood out in the community as a driving and directing power. It was inferred that by his training he had a grasp of a field of thought gained through much tribulation and burning of the midnight oil. About where he lived and printed his paper his opinions were accepted as almost infallible by a considerable section of his readers. That day has passed, but it was a vital matter when men at the helm were of the caliber of George Brown, Richard Dana and others. Such men issued the personally conducted and edited newspaper and their writings influenced accordingly.

But to return to this matter of traditions. I asked a friend who walks the same streets with me when going to meals, if there were any traditions in his business. He was a plumber. "Not that I know of", he said, and added, "Only that people say we charge about three prices for our work". I replied that such was not tradition but fact, and he was so peeved that he wouldn't speak to me for a week.

I asked another friend, who was in the way of making steam boilers, saw-mill machinery and such trifles, and after a few moments of thought he said, "no traditions that I know of" and added, "ours is a very serious business". No room for traditions there. I reached the conclusion that the Press was in a class by itself, so far as traditions were concerned.

Surely we may conclude that among those traditions hanging around the newspaper and the printing office is that handed down from cub reporter to expert writer, from apprentice to journeyman, that inculcates the beautiful thought that when the irate citizen steps in to the sanctum, demanding of the editor "who writ that piece that was printed in the rag?" and threatening annihilation for all concerned, the intruder was at once taken hold of by the editor, summarily tossed down stairs or thrown out a second-story window. This fine old tradition, I regret to write, is now much more honored in the breach than in the observance, but I have seen the thing done And it came about in this way.

The year was 1865. I was a very junior apprentice in my second year of the five years I put in, at the office of the Weekly Review, here in Peterborough. Under the tutelage of divers journeymen I had absorbed much in regard to the importance of the newspaper. Much of it, I may add, not accurate. The proprietor of the office was Robert Romaine, a printer of the old school, thorough and competent. He had been engaged for many years as Queen's Printer at Montreal, and the hands viewed him with a vast esteem and respect, for it was an established tradition that when a young man he was accustomed to go about the streets of Montreal with a game cock under one arm and a pair of boxing gloves under the other.

During the absence of Mr. Romaine on a business trip to Montreal, a couple of fakirs named Ruttley and Andrus struck town, and professing to effect certain cures for divers ailments by a sort of laying-on-of-hands, were doing a lively and profitable trade. Mr. Romaine on his return heard of the pair and their operations, and hating anything like a sham, in the next issue of the paper landed into the fakirs with a three-quarters column of leaded bourgeous. It was pretty hot writing and used much forcible language, applied to the pair and to gullible people who patronized the cult. The paper came out on a Friday morning and all hands awaited results.

In the middle of the morning I was holding some copy and Mr. Romaine was reading proof when the office door, at the head of a long and steep flight of stairs, was flung open and a large man strode into the office working room and demanded to be informed if the editor were in. The large man (Ruttley) was wearing a tall silk hat and a pounce colored overcoat and his legs were encased in light hued and striped trousers. Such apparel was plainly an offence in itself and the hands made snickering and audible comment thereon, such habiliment being almost in defiance of pioneer good taste in such matters. Mr. Romaine was pointed out to the intruder, being busy in his inner office. Striding forward, the large stranger stood by the table and towered over Mr. Romaine demanding if he were the editor.

Veteran Newspaperman

Some such intrusion seems to have been expected. It looked as if hostilities were about to begin. To my great joy and the engrossing interest of the hands Mr. Romaine leaped from his chair, pulled off his coat, flung it on the floor, rolled up the sleeves of his shirt and glaring defiance at the intruder, with a perfectly delightful disregard of good grammar, said, "if you mean the responsible editor, I'm him".

Through the glass of the partition separating the sanctum from the work-room the staff viewed the entire and joyous proceedings. Male mankind ever views a "scrap" with intense approval. Printers are ever ready to appreciate a situation. Indeed I have observed that they will even anticipate and accelerate such affairs, should opportunity offer. Such is quite in line with good tradition. Work had stopped. The rythmic grind of the No. 3 Oshawa Gordon had ceased. The comp. who was locking up an auction sale bill paused with mallet suspended in the air. And it being of a Friday, distribution day, with its relaxation after the long night session previous, all waited for the concussion to begin, an entertainment of unusual form to go forward. The caste on the stage was about to furnish both comedy and tragedy.

In a pause of preparation Mr. Romaine told me to put a brick against the door, the usual form of door holder. Now, as an apprentice I endeavored to be thorough, having pond the narrative about Ben a printer of some eminence of wise sayings. I haste that no duty of my appe did I perform with such ad alacrity. I put two brick ened back to the scene of cr. Romaine had hold of than by the lapels of the ed overcoat and was drag bout the room in an effor im backward into the outer ainst which cheerful effor man protested, with a series here's", "hold on's", "wait "; and other ejaculations pacificism.

One the door, the couple entered us territory, as anyone ried violent exercise and on the floor of a compos knows very well. The grabbed at anything hand anxiety to avoid ejection, natural feeling. The coupl over the other chair, upset stand filled with governments and other priceless litera man continuing his ejacula such efforts at unity and were lost on Mr. Romaine owed a firm purpose to setting out among the stones racks and cases they fetche lower case of smallpica, it with a fearful crash. The looking for something to sna ed at the remains of one ges of the paper, from which type had been disinterred the page around on the s about two columns of perfe advertising matter fell on t with noise enough to waked. In the further evolution aromed up against a stall bill, awaiting the going to pr dings and nothing was left up of wooden type, the chas desticks and quoins. A comp disastrous pye. The clatter seemed to add fervor to Mr Romaine's anger and with a renewed effort he got the large man to the door, the door against which I s thoughtfully had placed the two bricks, jerked him out on the landing, twisted him around and getting behind him gave one mighty heave and launched him out into thin air and eternity.

And I put it to defenders of the Craft, who I know will appreciate how my faith in the best traditions of the Press was broadened and heartened, widened and sustained as I saw and heard that large man go thump, thump, thump down the office stairs. It was a magnificent and creditable exhibition of the forces of energy and gravity enthusastically combined.

And that was the kindergarten of my initiation.

London Council Plans To Avert Railway Strike

LONDON, Ont., June 29.—(Canadian Press).—Means to prevent the threatened tie-up of the London Street Railway by a strike scheduled for Monday were placed in the hands of Mayor W. J. Kilpatrick last night by his colleagues on the city council. With only Ald. George Hayman dissenting, the council passed a resolution supporting the mayor "in any action" he may take to call in the railway board and so avert the strike.

NEW MOTIVES AND OPINIONS IN CHURCHES

Dr. Pedley, Noted Toronto Divine, Tells of Changes in Worship.

CROWDED CHURCH.

Fear Former Motive Now Love and Greater Knowledge.

(Examiner Correspondent)

SPRINGVILLE, June 29.—Anniversary Services were held in Springville United Church on Sunday with Rev. Dr. Pedley of Toronto, officiating. The church was filled at both services with an audience eager to hear the words spoken by this dearly loved minister of the Gospel. Rev. A. H. McConnachie, pastor of the church, assisted in the services.

Dr. Pedley who has in age passed his three score years and ten, looks back with happy and fond remembrance to the days when he, as a young man, taught school at Bewdley. His morning theme dealt with the Church and from long years of experience he spoke of the Church of God telling of the great changes and advancements in its history during the last half century. Fifty years ago the attendance at church services may have been better than it is today but the motive was lower. Fear was then instilled into the minds of the people not love and desire to hear the word of God.

"The church is changing. It has always been said of the church — "It is not like it used to be? It is becoming modern and better. Differences of opinion on doctrinal questions are becoming less important. Christ loved the church and gave himself for it but—"What Church was it that Christ loved?". Difference of opinion are superficial and not real. Church Union would have been impossible fifty years ago."

Dr. Pedley who spent four months in Oxford University, was asked by the noted Dr. Fairbairn if he believed in the "Divinity of Jesus Christ." His reply was, "It is about the only thing I do believe in." "The church is not a petty institution. Everybody that loves the Lord Jesus should be in it. "I'm in it," said Dr. Pedley, "and if God doesn't think I am worthy let him be the judge." Abraham Lincoln did not belong to any church because during his lifetime he never found a church big enough in its ideas for him to join.

"Let us bind ourselves together for the building up of the church, the Kingdom of God and all Humanity."

Evening Service

Dr. Pedley's evening text was from Isaiah 35.

His subject dealt with the last words of Paul—"Better is the end of a thing than the beginning thereof." Using Paul's words for his text the sermon was enlarged under the three headings: "I have fought a good fight." "I have finished my course," "I have kept the faith."

"Paul had need of being a good fighter. In one place he tells us: "I am in jeopardy every hour," while again he says, "I have fought with wild beasts at Ephesus", (a metaphor referring to the jealousy and antagonism of the people there).

We have not come into an easy world—an unconquerable man is needed. Lloyd George, Abraham Lincoln an others were given as illustrations of quick, unoffensive men who held responsible positions and were good fighters.

It requires strength and persistance to stay with a difficult task until it is finished. It is easy enough to start out bravely while the enthusiasm is high but it requires strength of purpose, of character, to stay with it to the finish. The men who won the war were those who were fighting in the trenches after all the first cheering and enthusiasm was over.

Paul never lost his grip on faith (I have kept the Faith), yet Paul was an extremely busy man through it all. The things that are seen are temporal while the things that are unseen are lasting and should concern us more. Death should be looked forward to as a beginning and our powers should be cultivated in this world that will flourish in the next.

Let us keep our grip on Faith that is Unseen and Final."

Miss Alma Blanchard, of Peterborough was soloist for the day singing at the morning service "By Love Alone" and "How Sweet is the Love of Jesus" and in the evening, "Son of My Soul" and "He Died of a Broken Heart". Robert Rose, organist of the church presided at the piano.

DECORATION DAY IS CELEBRATED

Rev. A. McLauchlin Gives a Very Impressive Address at the Ceremony.

CEMETERY IS RENOVATED.

NORHAM, June 29. — (Examiner Correspondence.) — Decoration Day was held in Castleton on Wednesday afternoon, with Rev. Mr. Gardiner in charge of the memorial service.

For some time past a committee has been active in renovating the cemetery. New posts have been placed aeross the front, the grass, weeds cut and many other improvements made. On Wednesday many friends paid respect to dear departed ones by beautifully decorating the graves with flowers.

After singing and prayer by Rev. D. R. Clare, Mr. Gardiner paid tribute to the energetic work of the committee in charge and spoke of the need of improvements in many of the cemeteries of the country.

Rev. A. McLauchlin, of Grafton, spoke of the work being done on the cemeteries over the country by the government and people interested. He said there were three phases in life: First in early pioneer life when people put up a small hut or shelter, a place to eat and sleep in while they pursued the strenuous labors of life. He called this the commercial period; second, the time when the desire to beautify began, when pictures, flowers and interior decorating were introduced.

The third period was when people looked back and appreciated the value of the pioneers who labored and worked without the beautiful, and when they wished to commemorate the value of their work. He applied this to burying the dead and lauded the desire of the people to want to make the cemetery a place of beauty.

Rev. D. R. Clare, of Norham, spoke on the subject of memory. He spoke of memory as one of the greatest gifts to the individual. It is a gift which raises the man above all other animals and makes him distinctive. He spoke of the values of memory, the inspirations derived from memory and the comforts of memory. He then spoke of memorials and what they stand for. They point to the achievements of the past and inspire. The tombstone points upward to a heavenly father and his love.

CHEESEMAKERS HOLD MEETING

Many Speakers Address Gathering Held at Cook's Factory.

HISTORY OF FACTORY.

MARMORA, June 29.—(Examiner Correspondence). —The second of six monthly meetings to be held under the auspices of the Madoc District Cheesemakers' Association was held on Thursday evening at Cook's factory near Cordova. This factory built and privately owned by the late Ira Cook about fifty five years ago, is but a few yards away from its orignal site.

In 1894 it was bought by a stock company and since the year 1897, Hugh Moloney, the highly esteemed president, has continuously looked after the sale of its delicious products. The factory has twenty four patrons and Frank Nelson is entering upon his fourth term as the maker.

At the May meeting of the Association convened at Alexandria factory near Tweed, there was little business of interest to transact beyond arrangement of the remaining monthly sessions. At Thursday's meeting, with the presence of many of the fairer sex (the Association president remarked "the fairest sex") it was anticipated the session would be particularly interesting in this there was no disappointment. President W. E. Brennan occupied the chair and expressed appreciation of the goodly representation of makers and also of the attendance of ladies. The president appointed next to the prize committee to get the prize list ready for the next meeting to be held at Oak Leaf factory, Allen Settlement on the last Thursday in July.

Instructor Linn of the Stirling district was introduced as the first speaker. He touched upon a few of the difficulties met with by makers in his section during the recent hot weather. He advised patrons to take best care of milk during periods of warm weather. "They are not making many second grade cheese any place" he said, "but we can do even better."

He also touched upon fish cloth flavour. He hoped, in conclusion, that Hastings County would this year make the best grade cheese of any county in Ontario.

Instructor Bailey, of the Madoc district, next spoke. After expressing his pleasure at being so many present, he enlarged somewhat on the matter of sweet cheese, it having been reported to him that a few of the season's output had been of that nature. He called for discussion on the methods of cheese making during the hot weather.

Mr. Hugh Moloney was the next speaker. In the history of the old factory he was sure there was never so large a gathering before. "The record of the cheesemakers last year" he said, "was so good that it would be hard to improve upon it this year." He mentioned next the improvement which had come since the inception of the Cheesemakers.

E. D. O'Connor, president of Leaf factory was next called on. He said it was a hard matter to keep him away from such a gathering. The high score of last year was a sufficient proof of the worth of the Association. He then referred to the prospects of a Mild Producer's Association being in full swing in the near future. Instructor Bailey upon request, gave an outline of the objects of the Ontario Milker Producers Association.

John McCaffrey, of Madoc, told how interesting the discussions had been to him. The cheese industry was not falling behind, judging by the good attendance. The Association, he believed, was going to revive the production of cheese. The dairy industry to-day stands in need of men of action. He thought the Association would produce such men. As other speakers before him had done, Mr. McCaffrey congratulated Mr. Nathan on the cleanliness of his factory.

John Bateman, cheesemaker of the Stirling district, then spoke briefly conveying good wishes to the local association. Following a few minor discussions the meeting adjourned. Those assembled were then escorted to the residence of Frank Nathan, where assisted by numerous kind friends, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan served a most sumptuous repast.

OLD HOME WEEK.

July the First will be first
Old Boys and Girls have met;
They are coming home, they are coming home,
And don't you forget.
Mayor Denne has done the right thing
To invite them home once more;
It's up to us to let them in
When they knock at the door.

I'm afraid they'll find Home altered
Since they went away,
Streets which once were country lanes
Now re paved to-day;
But I hope they'll have a good time,
And turn up, one and all;
Summer is the best time—
It's brighter than the fall.

It will be nice to meet them,
And talk of days gone by—
The good old times together
In the Bars which now ar dry.
But the Government's not forgot them,
You still can get a nip—
Give them two dollars,
You can place it on your hip

But there you must keep it
Until you get home.
Then you can drink together,
But never start to roam.
Or else your friends will leave you
In the hands of the cop
Until he finds out who you are,
There you will have to stop

I hope they will not be mistaken
With the mainstay of the town—
The building with the wire fence
Which they've put all round.
It's not a penitentiary,
As some you will hear say;
The fence is put to beautify
And keep the rogues away (others inside).

Some we shall not know them
By their faces as of yore,
And some we shall not know them
As we have never seen before.
If not by their faces,
We shall know them by their name—
Peterborough is the place
From whence they came.

WHEN A CHANGE IS BETTER THAN A REST

It is a trite saying, that a change is as good as a rest. What could furnish a more complete change to the average city dweller than a two days cruise over Lake Huron's blue waters and the mighty expanse of Lake Superior. A cruise that touches delightful ports within easy access to popular summer resorts, and abounds in historical as well as modern interests; from the old fur trading block house built in 1797, at Sault Ste. Marie, to the huge grain elevators at Port Arthur and Fort William.

The seemingly limitless expanse of sunlit waters—the glorious sunset—the summer moon shedding a sheen of silver garnished by the myriad stars that appear in the clear atmosphere—surely the change to such beauty must be better than a rest.

You will enjoy the spacious decks, airy cabins, luxurious lounges and unobtrusive, efficient service of the Canadian Pacific Great Lakes steamers.

Any Canadian Pacific Agent will be glad to furnish you with complete information and booklet concerning the Great Lakes Cruise. Mr. J. Skinner, C.P.A., C.P.R., Peterborough, Ont.

The following paper on "Steps to Success" was given at a recent meeting of the Women's Institute and is in harmony with ideals of the Women's Institute:

"In a competition for the best definition of success, the winner of the first prize gave the following:

"'He achieves success who lives well, laughs often and loves much, who has gained the trust of pure women, and the smiles of small children, who has filled his niche, accomplished his task and left the world better than he found it, either by an improved poppy, a perfect poem, or a rescued soul.

Whatever a person's calling, personal efficiency is the first quality demanded. Efficiency is made up of certain basic qualities which should be taught to all children. It includes reliability. The dependable person is worth more than the brilliant one. The boy or girl who can be counted upon to do his task, and not come with excuses is wanted everywhere.

Next and allied to reliability is thoroughness, the doing with one's might what one undertakes, so there are no loose ends for any one else to look after.

Next and crowning every other quality is sheer industry.

Work, works wonders. Idleness is one of the greatest enemies to character, as some one has said: "The devil tempts men but idle men tempt the devil." Simple steady labor conquers all things. Business is more than mere barter of commodities, or the exchange of labor for money, it is first of all the means through which a person expresses his life.

That storied Irishman was right who put a wheelbarrow on his family crest. By the barrow he had served the world it was his sign of conquest.

Mere business is not always good business; to achieve a life of integrity and usefulness is the world's biggest business.

The size of the bank account is entirely a secondary consideration. The people who have tried to pry open a road to prosperity between the ten commandments and the civic statutes are being called sharply to book. Some have made vast fortunes only to find themselves gibbeted by the public judgment Honest output, honest work, honest dealings, and high principles, beyond all purchase, these are the bed-rock foundations of a successful life.

Cultivate friends, for friends are the rungs in the ladder of success.

Another thing is economy. Some one has said that economy is itself a revenue. The motto of the most aggressive and notable organizations is truth. Hence we see the reforms with respect to pure foods, and honest advertising. Truth in the inward parts, works out into prosperity in outward affairs. Learn well, earn well.

As closing thoughts I would say never get discouraged. When you are about to let go, hold on. Courtland Meyers tells a story in his book ("Where Heaven Touched Earth") of a woman who planted a rose bush with greatest care. She watered it, pruned it, enriched it, and gave it every attention, but no roses grew upon it. At last one day she discovered a hole in the wall of her garden, a branch of her rose bush had pushed its way through the opening and on the other side of the wall were the most beautiful roses she had ever seen in her life. Perhaps when we have toiled over our work, and been disappointed and grieved at the lack of o fthe wall, it may be in the garden of the wall, it may be in the garden of God, some beautiful results of our life's toil, and victory will be seen.

A successful life is made up of days well lived, days in which we have put our best deeds, if we fail one day and we think it below the standard of our ideals we should get comfort from J. Kebble's verses:

'New every morning is the love
Our waking and uprising prove,
Through sleep and darkness safely brought,
Restored to life and power and thought.
New mercies each returning day
Hover around us while we pray,
New perils past, new sins forgiven,
New thoughts of God, new hopes of heaven.'

If we could start the day by just repeating Robert Louis Stevenson's prayer and try to remember it when things are not running as smoothly as we would like them, we will be pretty sure of success in all our undertakings.

The days returns and brings us the petty round of irritating concerns and duties. Help us to play the man, help us to perform them with laughter and kind faces. Let cheerfulness abound with industry. Give us to go blithely on our business all this day, bring us to our resting beds, weary and content and undishonored; and grant us in the end the gift of sleep."

WARSAW.

The prize lists for the Warsaw School Fair were given out on Thursday. Warsaw Women's Institute has donated ten dollars toward prizes this year. Last year it did the same. In previous years the Institute has helped always in some way. The amount given has been nearly ten dollars. One year a first aid kilt was given for the best drill. Another year cash prizes were given for the best history of Dummer in five hundred words. Twice prizes in money were given teams of girls from each school, in good dressing, judging competitions, and of boys in bird and leaf naming contests. For one year the prize were subscriptions to boys and girls magazines. Prizes have been given for singing, driving, public speaking and various contests.

Until about thirty-seven years ago very successful fairs were held in Warsaw. For some reason about that time they were stopped. About fifiteen years ago the Women's Institute held a fair. All sorts of fun was made over the idea but the women went ahead, and a most successful fair, from every point of view, was held. Among the visitors were several who came to scoff, but remained to praise. The next year an equally successful fair was held. Then the school fairs came, the war was on, the Institute would like to have joined forces with the school fair, but it was not permitted, so the Institute dropped its fair in favor of the school fair. For a few years the trustees and teachers had the executive of the Institute attend their meetings and later they preferred it to donate prizes in cash, give light lunch on the grounds, but not attend the meetings. Other organizations helped and had nothing to do with the management, and if all came the committee would be too unwieldly. Interest has grown in the school fairs, and the children are taught they should do their best, but every one cannot win and to win there must be competition.

MILLBROOK.

The relation of rest and recreation, exercise and fresh air, to nutrition and general health; the choice of food, with the consideration of every member of the family in the homemaker's mind, keeping in mind age, occupation, and individuality; the remembrance that the nerves of a person running always in high gear will snap, just as surely as the string that is held too taut; the mental attitude while taking food, with the effects of fear, worry, anger, or jealously, which counteract the good from the diet; are some of the items which one Institute has on its program for study throughout the current year.

Keeping in mind that no home will be better than the one who is its maker, the fact stands out that it is only by experience that the head of the household learns to express her ideals of beauty and comfort in the home furnishings, and so a study of interior decoration, in connection with home economics, will wisely be included at the regular gathering of the branch.

"Just taking the things we already have in our homes, studying their possibilities, and then building such beauty and comfort around them as we learn more and more how this may be done," is a suggestion from an official head in W.I. work that may be made of practical use in any organization.

An announcement of general interest to Institute workers comes from Miss McEwen, of the Association of Canadian Bookmen, is to the effect that this association will loan to any Institute, or individual study group from among its members, papers on such subjects as, "Canadian Authors"; "What Books Can Do For You"; "Books for Children"; "Henry Drummond", and others; and also an illustrated lecture, "Back to the Book World", with a set of one hundred slides. Application for any of these helps should be made at least three weeks before they are required for use, the address being, "The Association of Canadian Bookmen, Room 116, Continental Life Building, Toronto."

If advice is needed in compiling book lists, or in forming reading clubs, the Association stands ready to give this gratis, and it has also a speaker's bureau ready to provide a speaker on some book chosen by a local organization, if the latter will guarantee his travelling expenses and an audience of not less than fifty persons. One speaker at a recent convention added this word of warning for the girls: "Remember it is just as possible to get intoxicated on bad literature as on an intoxicating drink. If you start out in the direction of good literature—and for this I would warn the older women that they have a distinct responsibility—remembering that because I say 'good' I do not necessarily mean heavy literature, it is likely you will keep on in the right direction."

The Dominion Department of Agriculture, through its Dairy Branch, now has available a set of charts, suitable for setting up at fairs, or at other education exhibits, which will be loaned free of charge except that transportation costs one way must be paid. Any Institute would add considerably to its space at the fall fairs by having these charts exhibited, attracting interest, with an educational outcome.

Canadians are steadily increasing their consumption of milk per capita and eat more butter per person than any other nation in the world; however, we have still to eat more cheese, individually, to rank with other people. The Swiss, for instance, are credited with thirty pounds per head, each year, the English with thirteen pounds, while in Canada our ratio is but three pounds. Our national health will be better, so it is said, when we raise this quantity. The Women's Institutes, through their educational programs, are looked to to make these facts known, and to help in a practical solution of the problem.

MARION'S MAIL

Dear Marion:

I don't suppose you have missed me from your neighborly page when I consider the large number who are already writing to it, but perchance you have, you would no doubt think I was away out of the city for a few holidays like so many others who are at the present time. Although I have been away from home for the past twelve days it was no pleasure trip I can assure you, as I became quite ill and was hurried away to the hospital to undergo a critical operation where I have been under treatment since.

I found the ones there who visited me daily very kind and sympathetic which I appreciated very much. I must also speak of the fine staff or nurses they have there whom I chanced to meet and particularly of the two who attended me, both lovely girls both in form and feature. My day nurse always entered my room with a sweet smile on her face which helped to cheer me considerably. I have therefore chosen for her pen name, "My Sunbeam."

Then my night nurse was a very stately and pleasing person so I have named her "Marguerite" after one of my favorite flowers. I must not forget to tell you how fortunate I was in having a very cheerful and agreeable room mate during my stay there. She made friends with me at once and proved to be a great comfort in cheering me up in my most trying days. Her nurse was also a fine and attentive girl who took a great interest in her welfare and has now selected for her pen name 'My Rosebud.'

You will be surprised to hear, Marion, I fell in love with a wee baby boy while in the hospital. It appears nurse took me for a little walk the day before I came home. We chanced to be passing the infant's ward when we took a peep in and strange to say one wee babe about six or seven months old at once drew my attention, he was evidently trying to amuse himself by kicking his little feet up. He at once noticed us as we approached his cot he immediately put out his little arms and pointed his fingers at us as if he was saying to himself, "Please take me up I'm so tired of lying here." I actually felt like doing so, but alas, I was too weak to even hold myself up.

It is needless to tell you how anxious I am to be around again before Old Home Week which is now only a few days away. And as I am not altogether strong yet I'm afraid I will not be able to indulge in many of the festivities I had looked forward too. However, I must not complain for I might have been worse. Nevertheless I will extend my heartiest greetings to all those who will be here during the week. I am, therefore, sending you this little poem as a reminder that we all welcome you home.

OLD BOYS' REUNION

We welcome you home to the place of your birth,
To have with us a week of mirth,
Come young and old, both boys and girls,
Put on your best clothes and fuss up your curls.
For a time we're to have, in sport, music and song,
And renewing old friendship the whole week long.
We welcome, we want you, we will use you well
If you'll come back home, a week to dwell.

By the way I came across one of your Whatnots, Marion since I returned home written on the fifteenth of May, the subject being pirncipally on money. You therefore deserve a great amount of credit for the splendid illustration you gave us concerning it, and how we should spend it wisely.

Now as I chance to have a poem that appears to express similar sentiments I thought you and the neighbors might enjoy reading it. Trusting those who see it will be benefitted by the advice given therein. Trusting you will forgive me for writing such a lengthy letter, but as I am making up for lost time my excuse I hope is pardonable. Wishing you and the neighbors a joyous and happy Old Home Week.

Sincerley yours,
Virgie.

I enjoyed your letter very much as usual 'Virge' but was very sorry to learn of your recent illness. Peterborough is to be congratulated upon its two fine institutions, although our stay there is not always enjoyable, they make it as cheerful as they can for us. I hope you will continue to improve and enjoy what you can of next week's festivities.

* * * * * *

Dear Marion:

Old Home Week is almost upon us and we have been reading the story of bygone days and something of the lives of those who have passed on and were at one time active members of this community. Somehow it leaves me with a feeling of sadness to realize that the places they occupied shall know them no more. Yet it is an impressive fact that for the most part these people made something worthwhile out of their lives; that they, being dead, are yet speaking and their influence is still felt.

What admirable, interesting characters these people of a bygone day were possessed of! In this age of jazz and whoopee making, it seems like getting one's feet on firmer ground to read what the ambitions and achievement of other days were. Are we worthy followers in their footsteps? Will the names of those now living be written in terms of such well deserved eulogy? Sometimes we are apt to regard people of a past generation as being old-fashioned, narrow, puritanical. Have we improved on them, I wonder?

Do you know, in reading the history of the doings of some of my own forebears in the old town, the thought occurred to me. "How proud they would be were they here to know what the people of today had to say of them." Why is it that very, often one would be dead before one is appreciated? How the flowery tributes now scattered before their names would have rejoiced their hearts when living! How often those same hearts have been saddened and disappointed to find that when they had given their best that their efforts were met with unkind criticism or indifference.

One is proud to belong to the old families that helped make Peterborough what it is and yet there is the feeling that now as Grey puts it:

"No farther seek their merits to disclose,
Nor draw their frail ties from their dread abode
There they alike in trembling hope repose,
The bosom of their father and their God."

So in the coming week when auld acquaintances are not being forgot and we meet as one huge family re-united, do not let us forget the silent comrades, with us only in spirit and pay to their memory the passing tribute of a sigh.

Yours sincerely,
Adastia.

* * * * * *

You are right 'Adastia' with all the gaieties of Old Home Week, we should not be forgetful of our silent comrades, b with the unveiling of our beautiful memorial tomorrow, I think everyone will be brought to realize what at least, our comrades who gave themselves in the Great War, did for us. There are too, many comrades who did not lose their lives on the battlefield, but who passed on from Peterborough who should not be forgotten.

* * * * * *

Dear Marion:

Here I am back again and he first thing I must do is to thank you for that lovely little congratulation card you sent me. It was just a little beauty. I am sure you are just the most busy woman in Peterborough, trying to remember us all.

I am sending in a recipe to can corn, as I see "Tillie II" would like to have it. Here is the way I do mine.

I cut the corn from the cob and pack in quart jars, real tight. When full I add one teaspoon of salt and then screw lid on fairly tight. Put jars in boiler in which some newspapers or straw has been placed in the bottom. Fill with cold water to tops of jars and then boil hard for three hours. Set boiler aside with jars in to cool a little. Then lift jars out and tighten lids again.

My corn tastes just like corn you buy. Here's wishes all success with it.

My boy is growing like everything. Just now my little girl of two thinks she is helping mudder by washing the chairs. Isn't it fun watching a child? Why don't the neighbours tell more about their children? I just love them.

Well, Marion, I am sending for more tips, thanking you in advance. Those last ones I got were splendid.

I must draw to a close now and give some other neighbours a little space. If I could write letters like some, I would be writing all the time. I am as before,
"Betty Lou."

P. S.—Wishing neighbours all success canning corn. When corn is canned this way you don't have to soak and drain, just use the same as corn you buy.

Thank you 'Betty Lou' for giving us the recipe for canning corn. I am delighted to hear that your baby boy is growing and hope you receive some replies to your request for letters about children.

* * * * * *

Dear Marion:

It's ever and ever so long since I have written to you and the neighbors. I have several times sent for helps which have always been a success. I neglected each time to write and thank you, so I do thank you now, very much and also thank you in advance for the ones I am asking for this time.

I find that last year's felt hats can be washed, if saturated in the water, but held in the hand and scrubbed with a stiff hand brush, with warm soapy water. This shrinks them at least two inches. They will just be right then, for little school girls. It saves buying the little girl a good hat and an every day hat. All that is necessary besides the soap and water is a new band and you have a nice clean hat with hardly any labor.

They can be dyed, but I find that more troublesome and not always a success. I did one that was very faded through, and turned it inside out. It looked real good when trimmed, but didn't hold it's shape.

I hope you and the neighbors have a real enjoyable week even though I know that the housekeepers get the hard part of it. Here's hoping that it will be a success from start to finish. I'm expecting six visitors.

Yours sincerely,
A. M. L.

P. S.—Pad the hats with old clothes to dry, and let dry slowly, then brush.

Your suggestion about washing felt hats is surely a good one and may come in handy for someone when school starts again in the fall. You sound as though you were going to be quite busy during next week, but even though you have to work hard I hope you enjoy every minute of it.

SMART SIMPLICITY

Paris favors this semi-sports dress for street and general daytime occasions, that is so decidedly one-sided, affecting a flare just below the waistline, to achieve a slender silhouette. It chooses navy blue crepe silk, that always finds a place in the smart woman's wardrobe. The applied neckband that is carried down each side of front, emphasizing its one-sidedness, pointed trimming pieces of sleeves, and belt tied youthfully in bow at side chooses chartreuse green faille silk crepe, the newest idea of Paris. You'll be surprised to learn how easily it is made. Style No. 3201 is a one-piece type, with flare cut in one with right front section. The cascading drape is formed by cutting through perforated line, shirring lower section and joining to upper section. It is then ready to join the front sections to back at sides and shoulders, and set sleeves into armholes, and it is practically finished. It is especially attractive made of sheer woolen in violet tones in small check pattern, with the material cut on the bias for applied band, belt and pointed sleeve cuffs, which is so entirely new and yet so practical for all-day wear. Cocoa brown dull crepe satin, with reverse side used for contrasting texture, altogether lovely—flattering—wearable and inexpensive. Printed moire a navy blue back ground in fine white scroll pattern, with plain blue silk moire trimming, is very effective and serviceable. Printed silk crepe with plan harmonizing silk crepe and lipstick red georgette crepe are extremely popular fabrics that will make up very smartly. Pattern for this graceful draped model can be had in sizes 16, 18 years 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Price 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred). IN WOMAN'S REALM.

BY JEANETTE.

"They are dead, the soldier and the sor,
Fallen for freedom's sake.
They only sleep with faces that are pale
Until the day shall wake.
They will not weep, the mothers, in the years
The future shall decree;
For well they know that these have died that the battles and the years Shall cease to be."
From Laurentian Lyrics."

In the pages of the "National Republic", chatty little magazine of American origin, the June issue contains an article entitled "Early American Society," and a picture of "An Early American Beauty," Mrs. William Bingham, an ancestress of W. McKesingham of this city.

The article says: "Philadelphia, at this time was, beyond question, the social center of the United States. The Duke de Lauzun, a good judge of such things, said that when it came to question of beauty, grace and intelligence, the women of Philadelphia could not be surpassed.' Mrs. William Bingham was the social leader. Mrs. John Adams said of her: 'I have not seen a lady in England to can bear a comparison with Mrs. Bingham.'"

In the days of the early Republic, when the struggle was on between aristocrat and republican ideals, represented respectively, in the political world by the Federalists and the Jeffersonians, the part that women play in the intrigues and cabals of the leaders was not inconsiderable. There was a social background which they wielded an immense influence, after the fashion of the princesses in old world salons. Among these social leaders, Mrs. William Bingham, in her magnificent Philadelphia home, was recognized as "the uncrowned queen of the Federalists—a woman without a peer."

When Mrs. Bingham was sixteen years of age, she married, and then for some time she and her husband lived abroad and she had wonderful success in the court circles of England and France. She was described as a woman of sprightliness elegance, dignity and distinction.

"Sparkling with wit, bubbling with vivacity, she had the knack of convincing the most hopeless yokel introduced into her drawing room by the exigencies of politics that she found his personality peculiarly appealing." The following paragraph gives an insight into the life of those days:

"It was after their return from Europe that Mrs. Bingham moved into the imposing mansion on Third street, built on the ample grounds of her childhood home. All the arts of the architect, landscape gardener and the interior decorator had been drawn upon to make a fit setting for the mistress. The garden, with its flowers and rare shrubbery, its lemon, orange and citron trees, its aloes and exotics, was shut off from the view of the curious, only mighty oaks and the Lombardy poplars visible above the wall—a magnificent house and gardens in the best English style. The furnishings were in keeping with the promise of the exterior. The chairs in the drawing room were from Seddon's in London, of the newest taste, the back in the form of a lyre, with festoons, of yellow and crimson silk, according to the description of an English tourist. The curtains of the rooms were a festoon of the same. The carpet was one of Moore's most expensive patterns. The room was papered in the French taste, after the style of the Vatican in Rome. The halls hung with pictures selected with fine discrimination in Italy, gave a promise not disappointed in the elegance of the drawing-room, the ballroom, cardroom and observatory."

It was Mrs. Bingham who introduced the foreign custom of having servants announce arriving guests, to the discomfiture of some who were not used to this innovation. Senator Monroe was one of these.

"Senator Monroe," called the flunky.

"Coming," cried the Senator, thinking he was being summoned.

"Senator Monroe", — echoed a flunky down the hall.

"Coming as soon as I get my great coat off," promised the Senator.

The layout here shows the new British Premier, Ramsay MacDonald, and his daughter, Ishbel, who is constantly by his side in the public service. Over the week-end the premier conferred with Charles G Dawes, United States ambassador to Britain, at Forres, Scotland, during which a talk on disarmament took place. A statement declared the conference to be "informal" and its result satisfactory. To-night a dinner in honor of the premier is being extended by the town of Lossiemouth, his birthplace. Our Children

By ANGELO PATRI

HELP A LITTLE.

When a child balks at doing some little chore instead of fighting about it, help him a little. And as you help, watch to see the reason of his dislike of the job. We want children to LIKE to work and the only way we can accomplish that is to make the experience pleasant for them.

First job is dressing. Many a little child cries at the thought of dressing himself. You know it is hard work? You know that it tires a little chap a lot to put on all those clothes the right way and put in the buttons?

Some children learn easier than others. Their hands are more powerful. Seem to have in them a sense of power right from the beginning while another child in the same family will have to struggle for a couple of years to get anything like the same power.

If you have a little child who weeps about dressing, who delays interminably day after day, try this: Before tucking him up for the night you and he lay our the next day's clothes, the complete outfit. Lay the article that goes on first on top, ready to slip on—and the others in order. Make sure that every button and strap is in its right place. Fold and turn the stockings so that they are little slippers ready to put the feet into, and then be stretched out into long stockings.

Then be on hand with a helping word early in the morning. If necessary help a little with the hard places. Ease on one stocking while he does the rest. Turn on the radio or the victrola while he dresses and the music will ease the tension of his body and help him along. Encourage the slow one. Boost him along. Set an alarm clock to ring at the end of the dressing period and coax him along to beat the clock. It all helps.

If you have a child who is timid about going on an errand, give him something to carry in his hand, something to deliver to the person at the other end, and arrange for him to carry something back in his hands. That will help the timid child do his errand.

If a child fears the dark, let him have a light while he experiences that darkness will not hurt him. Put a bed light handy so that he can turn on the light at night when he wakens in the dark and he will lose his fear of the lonesome darkness. Help him a little with a cheery word and a light in time of trouble.

Should you have one of those worrisome children who are afraid of being ate, afraid of the teacher, afraid of the boy with a stick, afraid of the dog on the corner, just take him by the hand and lead him past the object of his fear, talking to him about some interesting thing far away from the object of his fear. The less said of his fear the better. Help him by supporting him on your own courage remembering that it is born of knowledge. His must be born the same way nad that will take time.

WINDOW DISPLAY DRAWS ATTENTION

Interior of Old Fashioned Home Depicted in Teco Store Window.

"The Old Home" is the timely and appropriate title of the special window arranged at the Teco Store by their Toronto window-dressing expert, H. C. Edwards, who is in the city just now and has offered his services gratis to any store here that is desirous of making a special display for Old Home Week.

Hundreds of people paused for a second look at the window yesterday. Simple but very effective, it stresses the idea of old things, old furniture, old pictures, old costumes. "All things are good when they are old," says the wise-cracker, "except an egg."

A lady dominates the scene, which is that of an old-time interior. She is a blonde, of course, and she wears a gown that touches the floor all around. It is of black brocade, rich and heavy, and it has jet passementerie trimming. Its little shoulder cape is finished with deep black chenille fringe, and her bonnet, also trimmed with jet, ties under the chin with a bow of black moire ribbon. She is a striking example of the lady of older days.

On the table in front of her is a narrow stole of real seal with fringed ends, a little round muff of the asme fur, and a leather portmonnale.

The furniture, which comes from the warerooms of H. G. Rumary, antique dealer of Water Street, and also from the home of W. F. Butcher, manager of the Teco Store, is interesting in its old style and adornment.

The little round English pedestal table and the two English chairs, with their horsehair seats, are of walnut. On top of the table, which is about eighty years old, is a real old-time oil lamp with glass chimney and green china pedestal, and there is also a glass bowl filled with fruit.

A French wall settee with brocaded upholstery is of hand-carved solid mahogany, and the cushions in richly-colored needlepoint which adorn it are a century old.

A very ornamental wall desk, which is one hundred and twenty-five years of age, is of walnut wood, with slim legs and adornment in piecrust moulding. Its front bears a representation, done in colored gros point, of Bonnie Prince Charlie and his favorite dog, and above it is an old-fashioned clock with plums as decoration for its face. A bit of antique brass also adorns this interesting desk.

On the wall are examples of ancient paintings and wall plaques, in rich, deep gilt frames, and there is a piece of floral tapestry, also over a century old, screening a simulated fireplace. On the floor are the rugs that were in vogue long ago.

DO NOT NEGLECT YOUR LITTLE ONES

At no time of life is delay or neglect more serious than at childhood. The ills of little ones come quickly and unless the mother is prompt in administering treatment a precious little life may be snuffed out almost before the mother realizes the baby is ill. The prudent mother always keeps something in the medicine chest as a safeguard against the sudden illness of her little ones. Thousands of mothers have found through experience, that there is no other medicine to equal Baby's Own Tablets and that is why they always keep a box of the Tablets on hand—why they always feel safe with the Tablets.

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which by regulating the bowels and stomach banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and promote healthy natural sleep. Concerning them, Mrs. Isaac Sonia, St. Eugene, Ont., writes:—"I have been using Baby's Own Tablets ever since baby was a month old and have found that they reach the spot and do more good than any other medicine I have ever tried. I always keep the Tablets in the house and would advise all other mothers to do so." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE WAR MEMORIAL IN HONOR AND MEMORY OF PETERBOROUGH'S ILLUSTRIOUS DEAD.

The pedestal is granite and carved on it are the inscription and the names of those of our own who gave their lives in the fray. Above are two artistic and beautiful bronze figures of heroic dimensions: left figure represents the enemy, full of rage, hate and fury, destroying all in his onward path. In his left hand is a burning torch, but the sword has fallen from his right, for in his mad haste he suddenly sees before him majestic figure of the knight, typical of Canadian chivalry and the valor of our own dear dead boys. There he stands calm, strong and dignified, sword in right hand, but the left raised in warning and command to come further or take the consequences. The foe lets his sword clatter to the ground and covers his face in token of despair and the sure defeat he sees awaiting him.

O Valiant Hearts!

O Valiant Hearts who to your glory came Through dust of conflict and through battle flame;
Tranquil you lie, your knightly virtue proved,
Your memory hallowed in the Land you loved.

Proudly you gathered, rank on rank to war,
As who had heard God's message from afar;
All you had hoped for, all you had, you gave
To save Mankind—yourselves you scorned to save.

Splendid you passed, the great surrender made
Into the light that nevermore shall fade;
Deep your contentment in that blest abode,
Who wait the last clear trumpet call of God.

Long years ago, as earth lay dark and still,
Rose a loud cry upon a lonely hill,
While in the frailty of our human clay
Christ; our Redeemer, passed the selfsame way.

Still stands His Cross from that dread hour to this,
Like some bright star above the dark abyss,
Still, through the veil, the Victor's pitying eyes
Look down to bless our lesser Calvaries.

These were His servants, in His steps they trod,
Following through death the martyred Son of God;
Victor He rose, victorious too shall rise
They who have drunk His cup of Sacrifice.

O risen Lord, O Shepherd of our Dead,
Whose Cross has brought them and whose Staff has led;
In glorious hope their proud and sorrowing Land
Commits her Children to Thy gracious hand.

Amen.

The words of the hymn above, "O Valiant Hearts," were composed by Mr. Henry Arkwright, an Englishman who had three sons killed in the Great War. The hymn holds in England a similar position in war poetry as Col. McCrae's "In Flanders' Fields" holds in Canada.

At the dedication of the Empire Memorial in Westminster Abbey a few years ago, this hymn was then sung by the large gathering of statesmen from the whole Empire as the central act of united worship in the dedication. Again, at the annual visit to the battlefield by the British Legion it has become the musical feature of the ceremonies at the Menin Gate.

They March Again With Us

Once more they come our way
And through the years how quickly we forget,
Until at last we come upon their day,
To yield again one moment of regret.

To know old memories of tent and field
As haunting ghosts of vanished autumn pass,
Where they have found their peace beneath the shield
Of God's eternal coverlet of grass.

One at a time they come,
Old mates forgotten from the sombre hunt,
Where one can hear far off the rolling drum
Of cannon thunder on the battle front;

Old mates with shining eyes and welcome hand,
Who've come again from distant fields and streams,
Where they have lingered in an alien land
As we came home and left them to their dreams.

A Scrap of Paper

A scrap of paper—"Killed in Action," So
Die all the dreams of happier days to be!
And yet, thank God! you were the first to go
When Empire called for Men to keep it free.

Thank God for that pure, manly heart and true
That kept your face forever toward the light,
And lit the only path you ever knew
And made you victor still in death's despite.

Not all our sighs, not all our loving tears
Can call you back, but you whose clear young eyes
Looked on the promise of the coming years,
You never grudged the final sacrifice.

A scrap of paper? Nay, a sacred scroll,
A great and glorious treaty, signed and sealed
In your heart's blood, wherein our Empire's soul
For those who shall come after stands revealed.

Foot Transit Company Vessel Loaded With Iron Stranded Near Soo.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., June 29 (Examiner Correspondence).—The steamer F. V. Massey, of the Foot Transit Company, Toronto, with a cargo of pig-iron from the Algoma Steel Corporation yard, went aground yesterday in the No. 1 Cut Hay Lake, below the locks and is still fast though the tug Carlois, of the Thompson Towing and Wrecking Company, of the Michigan Soo, has since been working to get her. No reason for the ground has been given, and it is not known just how hard she is on, but as she was loaded only to Welland Canal draft, it is believed that she must have been off her course when she struck.

SOME GAME. CTOR

PARIS, June 29.— Robert E. Moore, of New York, has agreed to drive a golf ball from Paris to Berlin, a distance of 764 miles, in 7,000 strokes. So convinced is he that he can do it that he made a bet with Dr. Fernand Suarez Mendoza, of Paris. He must average 170 yards a stroke to make the distance. An agreement says that he can use another ball if he loses it.

HEAVY WEEK-END TRAFFIC IS EXPECTED ON HIGHWAY

Hon. George S. Henry Makes Appeal to all Drivers to be Careful.

TORONTO, Ont., June 29. (C.P.) — "Greater crowds than ever before probably will be seen driving on the highways over the coming week-end, declared Hon. George S. Henry, Minister of Highways, in issuing yesterday a pre-holiday appeal to motorists for special care in driving.

"During the next few days," Mr. Henry said, "Highway traffic in Ontario likely will be heavier than ever before. Dominion Day, the Canadian National Holiday, and the Fourth of July, the United States National Holiday, will this year come in the same week, and their occurrence is bound to result in thousands of additional motor cars using our roads. As chairman of the Highway Safety Committee, I wish to point out that this greatly increased traffic augments the dangers of motor travel."

Mr. Henry urged motorists to regard traffic patrols not as handicaps but as aids. He pointed out that all the highway traffic officers are now in khaki uniforms. "These are all picked men," he said.

PREMIER DEPLORES IDEA OF A CANADIAN NATION

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson Speaking in St. Catharines Praises U. E. Loyalists.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., June 29. (Canadian Press)—The importance of Canada's remaining in the empire was stressed by Premier G. Howard Ferguson in an address on "Canada's Place in the Empire" which he delivered after being given a public reception last night by the city and organizations of St. Catharines. He scored the "Little Canadians" who looked forward to Canada becoming an independent nation and said that he did not look upon independence as a possibility or a desirable one.

Praising the United Empire Loyalists, the Premier stated "our destiny is within the empire as these men felt." He referred to the work of Confederation and the Great War as examples of Canada's contribution to the empire. He did not suppose there was a stronger Conservative in the country. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was similarly inspired with patriotism to the empire and had carried it with him to the grave.

Walter Hagen, the British open champion finished his second round with a disastrous 81 for a two-day total of 157 that virtually put him out o fthe running. The 'Haig' was wild from the start and took a seven at the sixteenth to cap the climax of his mistakes, requiring 42 strokes for the last nine.

Al Espinosa, veteran Chicago professional with a chance to take an undisputed lead, slipped a bit on the last nine to score even par, 72, and go into a tie with Sarazen at 142 for the 36 holes. These two set the mark for Bobby Jones, yesterday's leader with 69.

Every track was favored by nice weather and they should also show something on the right side of the ledger.

They were a little tougher picking at Dufferin this spring, perhaps it was because a better class of horses performed there than they have had in recent years. At that a few of the old favorite parked down once in awhile.

Mericher was the best plater to sport silks at the meeting. Foden and Slate were the best of the riders.

The two-year-old Sydney W. found it a little tough making the short turns at Orpen's oval. This colt is in keen shape right now and will bear watching wherever they ship him to.

Blue Bonnets had a successful meeting and the game should continue good all summer down east.

The Seagram stable uncovered a likely looking juvenile in Merry Girl. This miss was purchased in Maryland this spring and is a well-bred filly. She showed a nice turn of early speed in her initial effort and should improve as she goes along.

And just when Mrs. Glassco's star performer tails off a bit along comes Miss Gaiety II. with a remarkable improvement in her racing. The latter won over a good lot of home-breds her last two outings and it looks she might do even better when you figure how easily she scored her two recent victories.

Pandora has been the victim of interference and bad riding her last three starts and should make amends for her last two defeats as soon as she gets good handling.

J. A. Parsons will campaign quite an extensive string over the Canadian circuit starting with the Hamilton meeting. The English-bred Quick Return and Seth's Hope are in the lot and reports are that this pair are in keen shape after their long rest since the Tia Juana meeting closed.

Quick Return was a long while coming to hand in this country, but he showed plenty of class this winter across the border in Mexico. His last effort was in the rich Coffroth Handicap, when he finished fourth to Golden Prince. In the field of twenty-two that faced the starter that day, Quick Return was next to last to leave the gate and afer overcoming all sorts of interference he was only beaten about seven lengths for the heavy money.

Seth's Hope turned in a few fair efforts and should garner a few purses before long. The son of Soth is a superior mud performer but can show to good advantage over a fast track.

The good handicap horse Boom is being shipped from Montreal to Hamilton to fill his engagements at that point. The Bell Farm stable crack is at the peak of his form now and will be a tough horse to whip in any company.

BROWNS CROWD LOOP LEADERS

Win 7-2 Decision Over White Sox To Increase League Position.

INDIANS WIN OUT.

CHICAGO, June 29 (C.P.).—Alvin Crowder held the White Sox to five scattered hits here yesterday as his mates pounded Chicago pitchers for 13, and the Brown won easily by 7 to 2.

The victory increased the Browns' lead over the third-place Yankees to one and one-half games, and reduced the Athletic's margin over St. Louis to ten contests.

Both the Macks and the champions were idle to-day.

ERRORS COSTLY FOR TIGERS

DETROIT, June 29 (C.P.).—The Detroit Tigers literally threw away a ball game yesterday, two wild throws giving the Cleveland Indians, a 5 to 4 victory.

John Miljus was touched by the Tigers for 15 hits, but kept them so distributed that 11 Detroit runners were left on base.

SOX WIN SECOND STRAIGHT

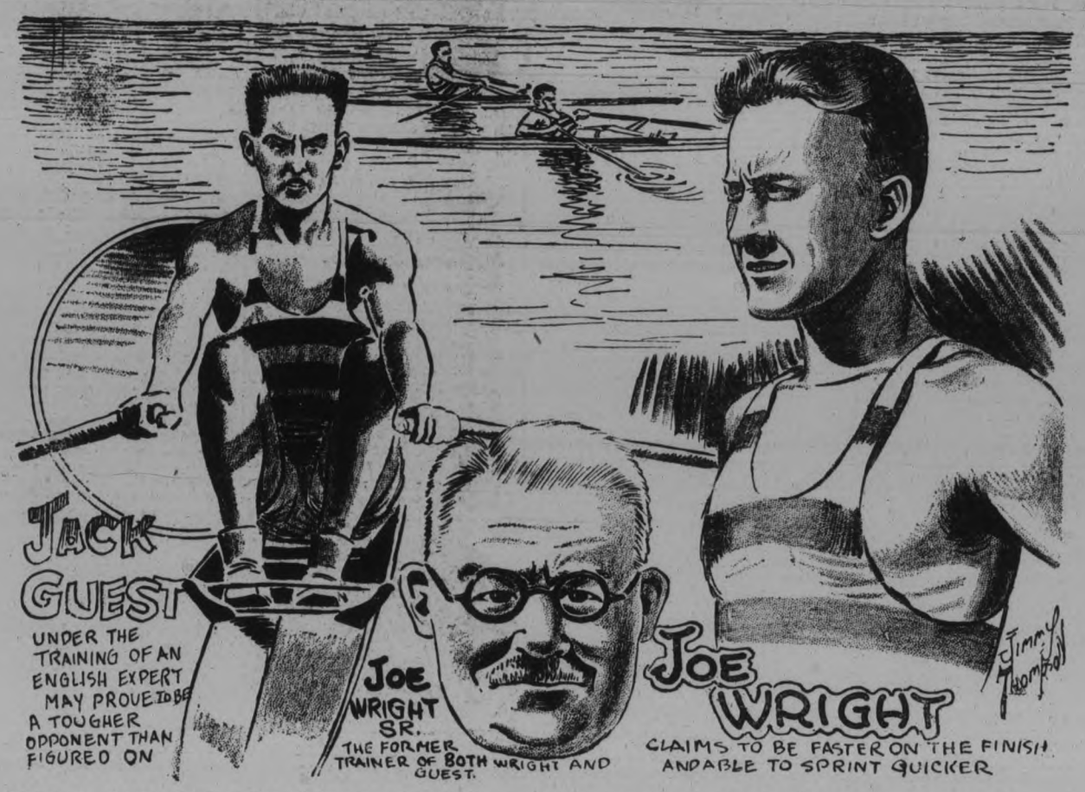
BOSTON, June 29 (C.P.).—The Red Sox won their second straight game from the Washington Senators here yesterday, 5 to 2, with Jack Russell holding the visitors to eight hits. Myles Thomas, in the box for Washington, was touched for 9 hits, totalling 15 bases.

Two Boston runs came in during the fifth inning when "Goose" Goslin dropped Bigelow's fly in left field.

WIMBLEDON, Eng., June 28. (C.P.) — Bill Tilden in the British tennis championships at Wimbledon, today defeated Christian Boussus, one of the French invaders, in straight sets, 6-3, 9-7, 6-4, to-day

As Big Bill was downing the Frenchman, John Hennessey was forced to admit defeat at the hands of another Frenchman, Henri Cochet. The ace of the French Davis Cup team took the first two sets easily but was forced to play his best before annexing the third and match. The score was 6-4, 6-4, 9-7.

CHUMS, CLUB-MATES, RIVALS AT HENLEY



Joe Wright, Jr., holder of the Diamond Sculls, and Jack Guest, both of the Argonaut Rowing Club, are leading favorites to win the Diamond Sculls at the Royal English Henley early next month. For the first time in the history of the much-sought-after cup two Canadians are favored.

Since winning the race last year Wright has improved considerably. He is smoother, gets off the mark faster and finishes with more speed.

Jack Guest, whom Wright beat last year, has been on the course since February, has been trained by Jack Arlett, famous English coach, has a new shell and has almost completely changed his style. Whether he has improved enough to beat Wright will be seen when the regatta starts next month.

The only English sculler who is conceded a chance to win is Lee, who won the race two years ago when Young Joe caught his oar in a boom.

The situation as the regatta nears is an unique one for Canada.

ATTRACTIVE PROGRAM PLANNED FOR TUESDAY'S WATER REGATTA

Arrangements Completed For One of Liveliest Sport Events Ever Held Here.

LARGE ENTRY LIST.

Sportsmen From Toronto and Oshawa District To Take Part in Sea-flea Races.

The roar of motors ,the flash of oars, and the dip of paddles—sport for everybody's taste, will be offered at Tuesday's regatta ,the big aquatic event of Old Home Week. The waters of the Otonabee in front of the Government dock at Rye's Boathouse will hum with life on the big afternoon when sportsmen from near and far will match their skill at the throttle, the paddle, on the greasy pole, and even at the old-time game of rolling the log.

All manner of contests there will be, for young and old and big and little.

Arrangements have been completed through the untiring efforts of the Water Sports Committee of Old Home Week, for one of the liveliest regattas ever staged in Peterborough. Forty excellent cups and cash prizes amounting to $490 ,that will induce a host of sport-loving people to take part in the varied list of events, have been provided. Already many from distant points have signified their intentions of partaking in the sport on the big day.

Feature on Program.

The feature of the day will be the races of the popular sea-fleas. These little craft that skim the water with such lightning speed, executing their hairpin turns at the hands of skilful drivers, never fail to give the spectators a thrill.

At 12 o'clock Class A outboard motor swill race away from the starting line opposite the Government dock. They will travel over a course to a point five miles down the river and back . This course will be covered twice, making the race twenty miles. At 1.30 B Class will follow over the same course, and at 3 o'clock C Class.

The free-for-all event is scheduled for 4 o'clock. It will be over a course from the Government dock at Rye's to Gore's Landing on Rice Lake and back, a distance of forty-eight miles. The course, as in the case of those for the other classes, will be marked off with white flags.

For the motor boat races, prize money has been provided. These races are the only ones in the regatta for which prize money is being offered instead of cups, it being decided that greater outside interest would be taken in these events if money were provided. Three prizes are offered for each of the classes. The prizes are: For B and C Classes, $50, $35, and $25; and for the open event, $75, $50, and $35. A Class prizes unannounced.

Many drivers and boats of fame in the sea-flea world are scheduled to take part. Lou Marsh, the Toronto sportsman and sports writer, has entered the famous 'Pick 'n Shovel" to be driven by Tommy McClure. Also for Lou Marsh, Wes. Kelly, the local lad of such promising ability, will drive ,operating for Marsh his recently acquired boat, "Canada Flyer." Bill Landrigan will be at the wheel of the "I'm Alone" and the "Miss Cadilla" will be handled by Don Wood, Peterborough's young daredevil of Frenchman's Bay fame. It is also expected that Ardiel, the youngster who showed up so favorably at Clear Lake last week, will be on hand.

Between the sea-flea races, the other events of the regatta will be run off. This phase of the program is made up of a varied assortment of sports. Varieties of swimming and paddling and other numbers designed to make the affair lively have been arranged.

This part of the program is as follows:

Boys' swimming—15 and under.
Girls' swimming—15 and under.
Crab race.
Start of tilting contests.
Ladies' single canoe race.
Start of log rolling contest.
Men's single canoe race.
Ladies' swimming race.
Men's double canoe race.
Ladies' double canoe race.
Men's swimming race.
Mixed double canoe race.
Old Boys' canoe race (50 years and over).
Hurry scurry.
Greased pole.
Gunwale race.
Boys' swimming race—18 and under.

LOG ROLLING.

The log rolling event is expected to provide much excitement among the spectators. The committee is offering cash prizes for this contest and it is understood that several of the best log rollers in this section of the country will be on hand. Tilting is another sure-fire thriller, the struggles of the adversaries to upset each other's canoe making a real sport specfor the onlookers. The hurry race, the crab race and tilted pole will undoubtedly the amusement for which they designed.

Mister Sitor:

Down Tom Potts' hostelery in Marmora where the Petes dre p.m. for their game with Deloro they was a sign advertisiming of a noted eye specialist to Marmora on July 5. I is coming too late, Mac, to do the Petes any good, but of been there Wed. the boys woulda sure wanted him to rs. Alex. Kay and Alan Meagher the once over. Honest Br Sporting Editor, them officials missed more in that gamy rum guard working on the U. Anaink this is a mere yelp to alibi a losing ball club, Mac, you goofey. I ain't given to jockeying umpires and I'm willinit they all do their best and everybody misses 1 now andich is why they put rubbers on lead pencils, but at the sawhen a pair of birds what is being paid real jack to handleme does so much bad guessing as was seen Wed. in Deloro to howl.

At Host a ball game that oughta been a shutout, the dean tura swell brand of pitching. The 1st run scored again higgistered on a Kay to Meagher play, and errors was respor the other 2. The Petes started out like they was goinl Mister Woods from the hilltop, but the help he got on 2 succession in the third frame when he was hanging on t gave the Deloro ace a chance to recover, and from thetossed fine ball.

Righister Swanston's athaletes is down in the basement, but theyilimb outa that lowly berth before long. They can't always rithe same kinda brakes, and the stuff is there to round oming machine.

Sincst, Mac, they have dropped 2 more games, Deloro beating re last Sat. after a tussle that for a while looked to be in so far as the Petes was concerned. They laced into thiThey hard enough to get a early lead of 5 to 1, and that aplenty, even if Mister Woods was a mystery for the rest of ime. Errors at a critical moment lost the decision for Miss Macdonald in the 8th, but they was some excuse for thers, for young Mister Hollingsworth, our very capable shoas been battling a attack of old John B. Influenza for a wthe kid was just playing on his nerve out there Sat.

The loop is just starting on its 2nd leg, and they ain't no reasthe Petes can't have themselves outa the cellar before lony're 2 games back of Oshawa and Deloro, but a spurt win put them up with the others, and the Swanston lads hatuff to do it.

Well suppose you're all set for Old Home Week. Provided Sir brayton's staff don't have no nervous brakedown in the nexays and all the rest of the plans goes through, it looks fr distance as if they oughta be a fairly live time here next wairly lively time, mates. NOT ENTERING RUNNERS AT DELORO

The C.G.E. Track and Field Club was planning to enter runners i nthe big sports program to be held in Deloro on Dominion Day. The runners are all in good shape and were anxious to go down east and get into the stiff competition. It was not to be however. The sports at Deloro are reserved for Hastings county's athletes only. One of the features of the program there, and one to which the locals would have added much color, is the long race from Deloro to Marmora and return.

E.P.L. RACE NARROWS DOWN

Well, Bethany did it. Crescents went into the Mountain Village last evening expecting a battle, and they got it and were snappily trimmed by Doc Hamilton's athletes in one of the best games of the E.P.L. season. What the result of the game did to the team standings is to complicate matters in a tighter fashion than in any league in the district. Bethany and Hastings are now tied for first with four wins and two losses, Cogs are right on their heels with four wins and two losses, Cogs are right on their heels with three wins and two losses, and Hastings are way down with five losses.

The Cogs-Hastings game scheduled for last evening here was postponed so the Cogs missed the opportunity to make it a three-way tie.

CLARKE WELL-KNOWN LOCALLY

"Big Bill" Clarke, the Hamilton detective, shot by a thug in Hamilton, was well-known in Pe rough as he had lived here for several years. Speaking of Dectective Clarke, the Hamilton Spectator says:—"In the death of William Clarke, who was shot by a bandit, the Hamilton police force and the Hamilton Olympic Club lose a sterling all-around athlete.

"There was no more popular man on the force than "Bill" and none with the same athletic ability. There was little in the line of athletics at which he was not proficient. He was a good sprinter, and won many races for the local association was above the average as a pole-vaulter, could throw the discus, put the shot and clear the bar in the high jump.

He was to have been present at Scott stadium this evening to try for a place on the Olympic Club's team, which meets the Oxford-Cambridge students here on Saturday of next week. He has been in training for some time for the police championships, which will be staged in Hamilton next month. He was always a point winner for the local police at athletic meets and was counted on as one of the leading contenders for the individual championship at the coming Dominion police competiton.

BUNNY AUSTIN GREAT BRITAIN'S HOPE

Great Britain has developed a sensational tennis player in T. W. "Bunny" Austin victor of Francis Hunter and Jacques Brugnon in the present Wimbledon tournament. Austin came to the fore last season with surprising victories over leading British experts of the net game and his triumphs over such famous players as the above respective stars of the American and French Davis cup teams established for him the reputation of one of the world's outstanding tennis exponents. His remarkable development has aroused hope in Great Britain's chances to end the French reign in world-wide tennis competition. What strengthens the hope is the achievement of eight of the British players sweeping through to obtain places in the final sixteen to compete for the Wimbledon singles crown.

VARSITY COACH HERE WITH TORONTO REGIMENT

In his own Varsity days he was star middle wing and later he captained and played the same position for Toronto Argonauts Three years ago he took the job of coach of the Varsity junior squad and piloted them to the championship. Last year he tutored the Varsity "Orphans" recognized as the left over from the Big Team. But under his tutelage the lowly "Orphans" trimmed the great Balmy Beach team and he instilled them with such fighting hearts that they were the sensation of the season of 1928.

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

By James J. Montague

COUPONS

The coupons I've collected since
Some twenty-five years back
Would stock the palace of a prince
With jars and bric-a-brac;
They'd bring in trade, as like as not
Gold watches, diamond rings
And dinner sets, I must have got
A million of the things.

When they were given me I'd say,
With a contented smile,
I'll have enough of these some day
To make the things worth while.
And when my funds were running low
And heavy grew my debt
It always comforted me to know
I had those coupons yet.

I dreamed of things that they would buy—
All sorts of useful stuff—
When I had gathered a supply
I felt was large enough.
But though I tucked them all away
In many a secret place
When I went seeking them today
They'd vanished into space.

I cannot get them any more,
The man with lofty brow
Who clerks in the tobacco store
Says "Nope. No coupons now."
So life has lost its zest and lift
No hope lies on ahead
My only chance to practice thrift
Alas, for me, is dead.

PRETTY TOUGH

Today a movie actor can't get any publicity out of his marital trouble much before the third divorce.

PEACE AT LAST

The war department has decided that in the event of war the soldiers will be billeted in first class hotels That will make war impossible by making it too costly.

HOT HUES

Those ties designed for Mayor Walker which were spilled out of a plane on Iceland must have pleasantly raised the temperature of the island.

Babe Ruth and his wife have been spending several days outing at Cedarhurst, Maryland, and Chesapeake Bay. The photograph here shows Mrs. Ruth and her husband on the last day of their visit before the latter returned to the Yankee line-up. As may be seen "Babe" seems to be as successful with the rod as the bat and the catch here represents a few pleasant hours on the waters of the bay.

BETHANY GAINS LEAGUE LEAD

HEAVY SLUGGING FRAY.

Hammering out long clouts that cleared the fence and richotted off the boards in deep centre, Bethany smashed their way to the top of the E.P.L. by defeating Crescents 5 to 3. Bethany only smashed out five hits off Homes' curves but two of them were circuit drives and the other landed in deep right for three bases.

The home of Ryley's, demon second sacker for Doc Hamilton's crew, was the longest hit ever made on the Bethany diamond. It cleared the fence, landing easily thirty feet on the far side, a regular Ruthian wallop. Phillips' homer hit on this side of the fence, and then bounced over it.

It was the smartest and best exhibition ball yet seen in the E. P. L. Ralph and Holmes were both in great form and they received perfect support. But against the batting cast of the Bethany troupe, even the smart fielding of Manager Brioux lads could not withstand.

DAMPER IS THROWN ON CONFERENCE

indicate the United States unqualified approval of an immediate conference between the five powers. Washington official circles are described as anxious that such a conference should not be called before sufficient preparation has been made lest it result in failure and a consequent setback for the whole cause. It was stated the United States had been informally sounded out by Great Britain on its attitude toward a conference of the principal naval powers and in consequence had suggested the question should be approached with caution in view of the present uncertain status.

Premier MacDonald, in a public speech here last night said the British government was actively working on its task of International peace but significantly added: "We are not going into a peace conference without such preliminary preparation as will avoid the failure of 1927," referring to the breakdown of the tripartite conference of that year.

"Every minute of our time is now being devoted to this preparation which when it is accomplished will give you a sense of national and international security," the Prime Minister added.

PICTORIAL GOLF

By H. B. Martin.

Recovery Shot Requires Wrist Movement.

The average golfer finds a lot of trouble in getting out of long grass or short tangled undergrowth to be found along the fairways of most of our courses.

One should not attempt to hit the ball a great distance in this case but make absolutely sure of getting out safely on the fairway. To accomplish this use a niblick or a heavy mashie and above all things send the club head through. This is usually a wrist shot and the body should not be permitted to take any part in the short swing. When the body acts with the club the leverage is removed and the shot is spoiled nine times out of ten.

Chief Gimblett Warns People Against Fires

Old Home Week brings with it joy and festivities that have been unknown to Peterborough before, but some one who is careless or some thoughtless action on the part of the crowd will mar the whole week. Fire Chief Gimblett wishes that the public exercise a little caution and try to keep fire escapes from being overcrowded, not to park near fire hydrants, and to exercise general sensible care.

DARK OUTLOOK.

MULBERRY, Ind., June 29. — Things didn't look so bright here recently. The town was in the depths of darkness—and all because the funds in the town's treasury were so low. Citizens couldn't find enough money to pay for current to operate street lights.

KNEW IE NIGHT POLICEMAN BTER THAN THE DAY STAFF

Says Joe clere of Busy Hours g for The Exer.

POLITIEPISODES

By Joe Beaucith The Examiner from 1925 ti, Now Telegraph Editor with Daily Sun-Times, Owen Sound... ... ...

I have reallxcuse for butting in on this Old Number of The Examiner, havardly been away from Peterborong enough to call it anything bume," not the Old Home Town, s"Home." My connection with xaminer was of such recent yhat my reminiscenes are commemory to everybody around tace.

My first thg as I look back over my days The Examiner, are of hard wor I came on the scene when thi was at its lowest ebb in some and two of us had to attend ically all the assignments of thest season of the year, the montween Christmas and Lent. There the usual large number of comeetings as the work of the got under way, plenty of hockames, concerts, lectures, etc., pecial services at the churches to Sunday as much a day of laboany day of the week. In betwimes we kept up the morgue aner routine duties, and the rest cime (usually Saturday evening had to ourselves.

Of course, id not last long Recruits took share of the burden and sumrrived to lighten it further. Thenpoliticians had to disturb our pe life, making it worse by calli election in September so th had to go to a lot of dry meen the hottest part of the year. Saturday evening, sacred holidaywspapermen, had to be devoted tendance at local rallies when tty workers cheereach other telling how scared the other side etting. With thre elections insideen months, and all the routink thrown in for good measururely had a busy, time.

This all sodike a wail about hard work, bwasn't as bad as it sounds. Life's little comedies cropped up in the newspaper offices, as elsewhere. There was a political meeting which nearly resulted in a split of the party and the running of two candidates when one faction charged the other with packing the convention. Reportorial pencils flew fast while the debate on this accusation was going on. There was a campaign gathering at which the National Anthem was not sung, and, following the office axiom, (When they sing "God Save the King" it's not news; when they don't, it is) the fact was recorded, to the annoyance of those concerned.

A cooling thought at midsummer concerns a certain hockey game, or rather the journey home afterwards. The scribe was the thirteenth member of the party, so got the blame for the joyous trip. First off, we had a reckless youth driving us from the rink to a station four or five miles away, where we were to catch the midnight train, stopping on special orders for the large party. His joy was to skid around corners and when he ended up facing back the way we had come, with the rear of the truck against a post in the ditch, he heard all about it. Then, after a short wait all hands lined up on the platform as the train showed up over the hill, waiting expectantly for the grinding of brakes which indicated a stop. There wasn't even a whistle! Gathering speed after coming up the slope, the long row of lighted cars swept grandly through the station and disappeared into the night. Some one had blundered! "The mixed will be along in an hour or so," was the station agent's heartening word. So, after a long wait in the cold we boarded the "Hog Special", which seemed to stop at every farmhouse to do a little shunting and grunting, and pulled into Peterborough at 7:15 a. m.

Those were the glorious days when we knew the night policemen better than the day staffs and possessed the sailor's facility of going to sleep at any hour, day or night, to saw off two or three, or eight or ten hours of refreshing slumber without counting sheep or using other devices to woo Morpheus. Regular hours on the telegraph desk, with regular times for eating and sleeping, may be more scientific, but not nearly so much fun.

Salieints of Bidding.

Auctionth makes an introductory Club North, holding stoppers in three suits other than Clubs, andouble stoppers in two of them, one No Trump, concluding bidding.

Contractth bids two No Trumps the South to bid three if holding strength additional to the strein Clubs shown by his bid, or a established Club suit. South rest by bidding three No Trumps.

e Play.

East opens stronger four-card suit, leading the Jack of Spades the correct card to lead from K-J-10 against a No Trump contract. North, winning with the Queer, puts Dummy in with a Club in order to take the Heart finesse. Declarer leads Dummy's Queen of Hearts and the finesse loses to East's King. East leads the King of Spades, the King and 10 being now of equal value, in order to show clearly to his partner that his original lead of the Jack was from the King-Jack-10 combination and not from Jack-10 and small cards. North wins the Ace and takes three Heart tricks, East discarding a Diamond on the last Heart lead, and North a Spade.

North can now count ten positive tricks, two Spades, three Hearts, two Diamonds and three Clubs. He therefore plans first to make sure of his contract by taking two more Club tricks and a Diamond trick, which would make nine tricks in all, with a trick in Diamonds in reserve. On the third round of Clubs, East discards a Spade, which practically marks him as holding the Queen of Diamonds twice guarded. Declarer therefore leads a small Diamond from Dummy and, declining the finesse, takes the game trick with the King of Diamonds. Then, with game made, he tries for an extra trick by throwing East in with a Spade. East must then lead a Diamond, permitting Declarer to make both the Jack and Ace and therefore five-odd on the hand.

ALL FIRST THINGS CENTRED AROUND OLD MARKET SQUARE

BUTTER AT 12 CENTS

The market square of Peterborough was, in the early days of the village and the town, the very hub and centre of the life of the community. All the first things centred in or around or about it. The very first house ever erected in Peterborough, the log dwelling of Adam Scott, its first citizen, was built on what was then a portion of the market square and is now the site of the Peterborough Club. From George street to the river extended that old gathering-place of the village fathers and there the first Government House stood, where Sir Peregrine Maitland came to view the district and stayed to hold a public reception. The first post-office, the first store, the first playhouse, the first religious edifice, stood on this square, and here too the first murder occurred, when, during the visit of a circus, an employee of the show became enraged at an Indian who was tormenting him, and shot him dead.

The first child born in the village was cradled on the market square, for Jeanette Scott, child of Adam Scott and his wife was born in Peterborough, its first native citizen, in the year 1820, several years before the Robinson immigrants landed in the place.

It has ancient and enduring memories, this wide square.

Dr. Poole says of it: "This part of Water street contained the residences of the principal persons in Peterborough, and was for many years, the leading thoroughfare. Dr. Hutchison lived in a cottage built by Adam Scott, which was the oldest house in Peterborough. He was the fourth doctor here, after the immigrant doctor, Dr. Reade, Dr. Dowsley and Dr. Roddy. Dr. Hutchinson practised in Cavan and came here in 1830. Later, Dr. Taylor was his partner. Elias Burnham, the first lawyer, lived in a large frame house on the river bank here."

Among the first buildings on the square were the rude tavern erected by one John Boates in 1825, on the south side of the market square. Adjoining it, on the east side, a log house was erected, in which lived Captain Armstrong, who was engaged by the Hon. Peter Robinson, along with one Wesley Ritchie, in dispensing rations to the immigrants.

In a little house of logs, immediately opposite the south side of the market square, and a little way from the corner of Charlotte and Water streets, a Mr. Stewart kept store in 1825. This man was not of the best business capability and his books were wont to contain such entries as "a bar of soap to the woman in the red cloak", when he neglected to get a customer's name. Eventually, his stock was purchased by George Grey Bethune of Cobourg and managed by Green McDonell and later by Thomas Valentine Tupper.

In this store was the first postoffice. James B. Ferguson was subsequently appointed postmaster and the office was kept by him in a small square frame building with a cottage roof, just south of the store, to which it was attached.

Later, this postoffice was transferred to "Government House", the largest log building on the market square, and was kept by Ephraim Sanford who suicided in 1843 at the American Hotel, where he lodged. In 1867, S. J. Carver was postmaster.

Of the first houses here, Dr. Poole relates: "These were erected by the Hon. Peter Robinson for purposes of immigration, and were, as well as being the first buildings, the most important also. These were all built of logs, with square gables and shingled roofs. Four of them stood in a row on the southeastern portion of the market square, fronting upon Water street. The largest of the four, which was also the most northern, occupied very nearly the site of the front portion of the present market house. (Written in 1867). Its size was about 18 by 20 feet, while the others were somewhat smaller. This one was used as a residence by Dr. Reade, surgeon to the immigrants, and as a temporary church, in which Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father Crowley. The two central were used as storehouses for the provisions of the immigrants, and probably for other purposes. The one nearest the south was Mr. Robinson's general office, where accounts were kept and business transacted by himself and his chief clerk, Mr. Richard Thornhill. The fifth and largest of these buildings was long known as the "Government House", and as being the residence of Mr. Robinson, his assistant, Colonel McDonnell, and Mr. John Smith, surveyor, who assisted in locating the immigrants, and for a brief time the resting-place of Vice-Royalty itself, is worthy of a fuller description. Like the others, it was built of logs, was forty feet long by about twenty feet wide. It stood on the eastern side of the lot now occupied by the Bank of Montreal on the southeast corner of Simcoe and Water streets (now the Peterborough Club, 1929), about thirty feet from the former and forty from the latter, very near the southern end of the brick stable now belonging to those premises (1867). It fronted towards the south, with a door near the center of the building, partly concealed by a wooden porch in front.

There were two windows in the front, and three in the rear. The interior was divided into three rooms, of nearly equal size, by two partitions of logs, erected with the walls. Into the middle of these the front door opened, and here was the chief reception room, from which doors opened into the other apartments on either hand. The western room was used as a kitchen, while Mr. Robinson slept in the eastern apartment, which also contained sundry books, papers and maps. The logs, both of walls and partitions, were hewed to a level surface in the interior, and the interstices, both within and without, carefully secured with "chinks" and mortar. A considerable portion of the ground, extending across and north of Simcoe street, was fenced in as a garden, while some small out-houses occupied a position near the bank of the river."

In 1867, the dwelling house of Adam Scott, the first settler in Peterborough, still remained in existence. It was described as a low, square, cottage-roofed, frame building, close to the edge of Water street, on the western side, about midway between the market square and "Parnell's Mill." In 1867, Dr. Poole writes: "The right of way for the extension of the railway track, now in process of construction, impinges upon one corner of the old house, and it will doubtless soon be demolished to make way for this great agent of modern civilization."

An old theatrical building known as Hill's Musical Hall occupied a position for many years on the market square, but when Bradburn's Opera House, (now Victoria Hall)) took its place as a theatre, it was used as a butter and egg market by the women, who sat upstairs in the premises which resounded formerly to the applause of enthusiastic patrons of the shows.

In 1850, a prize of $100 was offered for plans and estimates for a new town hall and market house, also for a uniform series of buildings to occupy three sides of the Market Square. Plans were submitted by Mr. Thomas, of Toronto, and by Mr. Kivas Tully; those of the former gentleman were accepted, not without suspicion on the part of many, that the council had been unfairly biased in their decision.

The corner-stone was laid with much ceremony on September 25th, 1851, by the Mayor, Charles Hudson. The following inscription, on parchment, was deposited in the corner-stone:

"On the 27th day of September, A. D., 1851, Charles Hudson, Esq., Mayor, laid the foundation of this building, erected by order of the Town Council of the Town of Peterborough. Members of fthe Council: Charles Hudson, Esq., Mayor, James Harvey, Joseph Spenceley, John Reid, Thomas Chambers, Clark Spaulding, James T. Henthorn, Edmund Chamberlin, Egerton Perry, M.D., Thomas Hutcheson, Robinson Rutherford and John Haggart. Members of the Building Committee: Edmund Chamberlin, James T. Henthorn, Thomas Chambers, John Reid and James Harvey, Esquires. Walter Sheridan, esq., architect; Mr. David Taylor, contractor. (Signed) W. H. Wrighton, townclerk."

Great were the rejoicings at the ceremony of laying the corner-stone. They included the good old custom of roasting an ox whole for the free entertainment of the public. And it was this ox, left overnight during the roasting process, with only one guardian, that was spirited away in such mysterious fashion that the perpetrators of the deed, probably a group of sly jokers, were never discovered. However, the ancient fathers were not down-hearted. A sumptuous dinner was served by Thomas Chambers at his "Commercial Hotel", which was followed by speeches and much conviviality.

These buildings were burnt down in 1857, and soon afterwards the present market block was erected on the ruins. Dr. Poole says of this block: "Its tasteful front is creditable to the town, while its capacious shops, of great depth, afford ample accommodation for the extensive business carried on within their precincts. These buildings were erected, not by the corporation, but by private individuals, under a ground lease of twenty-one years; the town being then bound to either renew the leases, or pay for the improvements at an estimate of their value."

A branch of the "Saved Army", led by a Mr. Munt, used to hold meetings on the square in the early days, while the market hall was also used for the services of the Free Church of Scotland, which took place in Canada in 1844, but in Peterborough not until 1857, the congregation used the town or market hall for services.

The old meat stalls in the arcade are well remembered by many present residents. On May 6th, 1864, the Town Hall bell was placed in position in the Market House tower. Its weight was 902 pounds, and its total cost to the town was $400. On its being placed on its supports, Chief Engineer Helm ascended the belfry, and, amidst the cheers of the bystanders, broke upon it a bottle of wine, and in the name of the Fire Brigade called it "Protection."

The market-place had a grandiloquent mention in the account given in the Peterborough papers, issued on September, 1860, the day following the visit here of the Prince of Wales, later King Edward. There were three arches erected in different places, in preparation for the Prince's visit.

One in Ashburnham was of Roman design, and the Review said of it: "The view, in approaching this arch, is very fine. The Town Hall, Market Block, and Caisse's Hotel are seen in the distance impinging upon the bright shrubbery of Clonsilla Hill in the rear, and giving the impression of a large city across the river."

The route of the procession started from the station in Ashburnham and made its way across the bridge to the town proper.

That the market, like the rest of the town, was in gala attire for the occasion, is evident from the account, which goes on:

"Further down, the market block had around the roof, above the cornice, a chain of evergreens, with posts every six feet, surmounted by flags. Across the street from the building to the opposite side were hung flags, one very fine one with the Prince of Wales' plume on it. From every window a flag was suspended, and on the top of the building a couple of large flags were raised on tall flag staffs.

"Caisse's Hotel ... the street from the market ... the Grand Central Ap... located), had a flag from every window, and a couple on the roof. Going around the market square, the Town Hall was wreathed with evergreens, and along the verandah, at intervals, were placed flags.

"In the evening, Caisse's Hotel was brilliantly illuminated, and fireworks were set off from the building. A large cowd of persons were in the streets to witness the display, which lasted until about ten o'clock, after which all went quietly home."

On this market, through the early and later years, up to the present, produce of all kinds has been sold. But it did not constitute the first market of the village.

The grist mill, built in the spring of 1827, the accompanying dam having been built in 1826, was the first important building undertaken in Peterborough, and was built through the wise liberality of Sir Peregrine Maitland, acting on the advice of Colonel Talbot and John Beverley Robinson. This gentleman was a brother of the Hon. Peter Robinson. At the time of his visit here with Sir Peregrine Maitland, he was Attorney General and was later made a baronet. He was Chief Justice of Upper Canada at the time of his death.

At the completion of the grist mill, after its erection had been accomplished by all the able-bodied men of the district, giving more than a week's labour, it was put up for public sale by the Government, and was bought by John Hall and Moore Lee in partnership. (The contractor was Horace Perry.) It became more and more the center for the sale of farming produce. It was the club, the dry goods store and the general market, the resort of the ladies for eager gossip and tacit mutual criticism and the tavern where all might refesh themselves from the well-replenished whisky bottle which stood on the counter, free to all.

In 1828, five thousand bushels of wheat was sold to the merchants of Peterborough through this market.

In those days, a pint of whisky sold for a quarter and a can of beer cost a dime. There were forty saloons in Peterborough.

Butter was 12 and 13 cents a pound, eggs were 9 to 12 cents a dozen. In Harry Winch's meat shop in the Arcade, later on, 25 cents would buy three pounds of lamb chops and a twelve-pound turkey cost $1.

In 1825 and later, $1 a day was paid for harvest wages and 50 cents a day was the ordinary rate for spring and summer work, while $12 an acre was paid for chopping, clearing, logging and burning forest land, and preparing it for seed. It was the custom to thresh grain with a "flail" for evey tenth bushel. Men cut hardwood for 45 cents to $1.50 a cord. Cows sold for $12 each, and calves and lambs were $1 apiece.

On the market, some of the prices obtaining in the year 1881 are very interestng as compared with today's quotations. Wheat was $1.12 a bushel, peas 62 and 63 cents a bushel, oats 30 and 32 cents and barley 60 and 80 cents, in varying quality. Butter was 18 to 20 cents a pound, eggs 18 to 20 cents a dozen. Turkeys sold from 60 cents to $1, geese at 45 to 60 cents and chickens were 40 and 50 cents a pair. Sugar was 12 and 13 pounds to the dollar, currants, 10 cents a pound, and tea anywhere from 25 to 75 cents a pound, according to the quality.

Pork was $6.00 to $6.75 for the hundredweight, lard 10 and 11 cents a pound, tallow 5 1-2 and 6 cents. Apples were 60 to 90 cents a bag and $1.50 to $1.75 a barrel, potatoes were 35 and 40 cents a bag, and turnips 12 1-2 to 15 cents a bushel. Cabbage sold at 40 to 45 cents for the dozen and parsnips were 50 cents a bushel. Mutton on the market sold for 6 to 7 cents a pound and veal for 5 cents a pound.

TEACHER'S ANNUAL SALARY WAS FIFTY-FOUR DOLLARS

Building Leased for Separate School Use Cost Only $70 a Year

Notes regarding amounts paid in the early days for tuition are interesting. In 1863, when the old Separate School was burnt down, the building leased from the late Mr. Bertie Morrow, at the corner of Hunter and Sheridan streets, cost $70 a year, while in an old building at the corner of Aylmer and Simcoe streets, also used as a temporary schoolroom, the initial salary paid was $14 per annum. The scale of Halifax currency was used then, which gave only $4 to the pound.

In 1856, when John Curvin, one of the earliest teachers in the old school on the present St. Mary's Convent grounds, was obliged to leave because of eye trouble, a Mr. O'Hara was engaged for the balance of the year, at £6 per month. In 1864, Miss O'Callahan, teaching in the same school, received $240 a year and her assistant, Miss Hogan was paid $96 for the same period.

TORONTO CONTINGENT ARRIVES IN CITY

MAMMOTH PARADE UNSURPASSED IN BRILLIANCE AND ORIGINALITY DRAWS MUCH HEARTY APPLAUSE

MILITIA OUT IN FORCE.

Historic, Industrial and Mercantile Floats Form Big Part of Parade.

Scintillating with colour, music, pomp, and fun the great Old Home Week parade passed majestically before the delighted thousands who thronged its whole course yesterday morning. For splendour, number, diversity and beauty of its floats; for its brilliant and inspiring military aspect; for the music and number of its bands; and for its funny clowns and grotesque figures it far eclipsed anything that has been seen in the more than one hundred years of the city's history.

For more than an hour its ever changing panorama of sound, music and colour exhibiting this city's great wealth of industry, business and citizenship swept past a given place. The amount of thought and painstaking labour represented in the construction of the fifty-odd floats and the co-ordination of its every section spoke of whole-hearted co-operation, energy and vision. The city of Peterborough and the character of its people were graphically unfolded to the eyes of the returned old boys and visitors who eagerly watched.

Mayor Denne Leads

Mayor D. Denne, chairman of the Old Home Week committee, led the parade riding behind a spirited team of horses driven by George Graham.

Marching to stirring music the military portion followed, making the largest parade of soldiers seen in the city since the Great War. Led by the skirling pribrochs of the pipe band of Toronto Scottish it was most impressive. Lieut. Col. W. H. Watson, O.C. of the Scottish, Lieut. Col. M. H. Park, O.C. of the Peterborough Rangers and Lieut.-Colonel R. I. Moore, O.C. of the Lindsay Regiment, marched behind the pipe band. Then came the Lindsay Regiment.

The Peterbough Rangers were headed by the Rangers brass bugle band and they passed by with noble bearing as though on review. Major Dodds was in command of the Machine Gun Company which was followed by the Toronto Scottish brass band at the head of its regiment, smart in their kilts and tams and rythmic swing, creating a deep impression.

Cadets Out in Force

The glory of the city's youth was reflected in the upright, soldiery bearing and smartness of the Collegiate and Public School Cadet Corps and the troop of Boy Scouts.

A small float with the initials J. H. pulled by a team of great black Newfoundland dogs and driven by a happy youth, rolled by. A clown band in fiery hued paint blared and thumped, making hilarious music the first hint of the many more clowns and jumping shimmying grotesque figures that interspersed the floats.

2nd Battalion Float

A real scene taken from one of those historic hunts in France moved along. The float was decorated to represent the hut and inside around the piano with jew's harp, mouth organ and accordion several members of the famous Fighting Second Battalion made merry with songs and ditties as in those years ten years and more ago.

Other bands in the parade that enriched and enlivened it were the large Salvation Army Band, the Caldonian Pipe Band, the shrill-toned fife and drum band and the orchestras from Melody Inn and Rye's Pavilion.

The Curve Lake Indians, riding in a horseless carriage, in full national dress with feathered headdress took a prominent place and attracted much notice.

Hamilton Well Represented

The Old Boys had a share in the parade. There were fifteen cars decorated in the orange and black of the "Tiger" carrying a part of the Hamilton delegation, twelve cars carrying some of the Detroit contingent and nine representing St. Catharines.

TWENTY-SEVEN LIVES LOST OVER WEEK-END

Nine Were Added to Long List on Canada's National Holiday.

TORONTO, Ont., July 2 (Canadian Press). — Nine lives were added yesterday to the toll taken by fatalities throughout Ontario over the week-end, making a week-end total of 27 lives lost through drowning, motor car and other accidents.

Two Toronto men were drowned yesterday at Rice Lake in the Peterborough district. A woman was killed by a motor car at Port Dover, and another woman at Exeter. A Sarnia man was killed in a grain elevator there, while a little girl died at Hamilton from burns received while playing with matches. An unidentified sailor was drowned at Windsor when he dived from a lake freighter. A boy was killed at Oshawa when struck by a train.

BIG MOTORCADE ADDS NEW COLOR TO GREAT WEEK

In a Procession of 150 Motor Cars 400 Peterborough Old Boys and Girls From Toronto, Headed by T.T.C. Band, Arrives in the City.

FRANK P. O'CONNOR CHAIRMAN OF COMMITTEE LAY WREATH ON MEMORIAL IN CONFEDERATION SQUARE

Complimentary Luncheon is Tendered Mayor Denne, Members of City and County Councils, City Officials and Members of the Old Home Week Association By Visiting Old Boys.

"Toronto Day" of Peterborough's Old Home Week, picked up the celebration this morning with a fresh burst of color and enthusiasm and a large contingent to increase the city's crowd of "Old Timers," who had flocked home over the week-end and the holiday.

A long column of automobiles, led by the Toronto Transportation Company's concert band, and including many of the floats from Monday's memorable procession, paraded up George street, just at the noon hour. Their rendezvous was at Scott's Corners on the highway, where they gathered their motor forces, escorted by the provincial traffic officers, who had accompanied them from their starting place on Fleet street, Toronto.

Charlotte and George streets were lined with people, visitors and the home-crowd, who joined in cheering the loyal native sons and daughters who now live in the Queen City. It was a splendid demonstration of fidelity and love of the town they still regard as home.

Heads Procession.

Frank P. O'Connor, chairman of the committee that arranged the Toronto Day invasion and its program, headed the procession with Mayor Denne. Others in the immediately following cars were W. J. O'Brien, W. H. Campbell, Wilfrid W. Stratton, who were all active promoters of to-day's arrangements and the home-coming: also E. R. Wood, Sir Joseph Flavelle, Judge D. O'Connor, Peter Campbell, Dan Burritt, Allan Ray, George Hall, J. W. Garvin, Frank and Martin Kenneally, Spence McIntyre, and his father, A. A. McIntyre, Art Bennett, Bob Long, Bert Everett, and hundreds of others in the long motorcade.

Their splendid share in the Old Home Week and Centennial celebration, proved that "Toronto Day" was no mere program pretension, and the procession was simply the opening act

Endurance Flight Ends When Big Motor Stalls

Metropolitan Airport, Los Angeles, Calif., July 2. (C.P.) — The endurance flight record attempt of the Cessna monoplane piloted by Leo Nomis and Maurice Morrison ended abruptly after 42 hours was smashed. Their injuries were day, when the motor stalled and the craft crashed at the edge of the airport.

The injuries of the flyers and damage to the plane were reported as slight.

The two flyers were slightly cut about the face and head, and the landing gear of their plane was smashed. Their injuries were dressed at the field, and immediately they announced that as soon as the plane could be repaired they would take off on another attempt.

What caused the motor to quit was not immediately ascertained. A high fog which had shrounded the landing field was blamed for the crash.

The plane took off Sunday at 7.30 a.m., and had been circling the airport at about 5,000 feet above the fog bank, when the motor went dead.

Two Toronto men were drowned in the centre of the widest stretch of Rice Lake at 11 o'clock yesterday morning. Alex. Cruickshanks, 36 Sutherland avenue gave up his life in a brave attempt to save his friend, A. E. Bannister, 45 Winthrow road. P inister was sitting in the bow of the boat and accidentally fell into the water. He was unable to swim and was struggling desperately when Cruickshanks leaped over the side to save him. Both were drowned, and their bodies have not yet been recovered.

A party of four Toronto people, composed of the two drowned, Frank Pettus, 366 Lippincott road, and Mrs. Mabel Kennedy, 36 Sutherland avenue, had set off from Bewdley, a popular summer resort on Rice Lake, at nine o'clock in a small motor boat to fish. They had reached the widest stretch of the lake when their motor stalled. None of the party was familiar with the engine, which had been rented from C. Sidey, general merchant of Bewdley. Several attempts were made to start the motor without success.

Fishing From Bow.

The party had prepared themselves to wait for a passing boat to obtain aid, and Bannister got up on the bow to fish. He had only gained his position, when suddenly, in some unaccountable manner, he slipped over the side and into the water. He struggled, shouting that he could not swim.

Alex. Cruikshanks, himself not an expert swimmer, unhesitatingly rose from his seat and sprang into the water to aid his friend. On approaching Bannister the drowning man seized Cruickskhanks around the neck in his mad struggle. Cruickshanks was unable to break the grip and both disappeared beneath the surface.

Finally about one o'clock a party of Americans in a motor launch passed near them and they were able, by shouts, to acquaint them of their predicament. The Americans towed them back to shore.

Search Made for Bodies.

HOUSE OPENED WITHOUT POMP OR CEREMONY

First King's Speech Prepared By Labor Premier Read By Lord Chancellor.

MIGRATION PROPOSED.

New Government Is Co-operating With Dominion For Naval Reduction, Speech Said.

LONDON, July 2 (By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent). — The formal opening of the new Parliament to-day was quiet, even dull. The Lords Commissioners in scarlet and ermine robes lent a touch of color to the great Chamber of the House of Lords. But almost gone entirely were the glitter, pomp and circumstance of a state opening of Parliament, with the absence of His Majesty.

As the Lords Commissioners took their seats in front of the two empty thrones there were only three persons in the front Government bench, behind were the empty spaces. The Opposition benches, however, were pretty well filled, though none of the peers wore state robes. All were dressed alike in morning dress except for a couple who gave a still more business-like appearance by wearing lounge suits of dark grey. Not since 1900, the latter part of the reign of Queen Victoria, had the British Parliament been opened before a Lord Commissioner.

Summons Gommons.

Lord Sankey, the Lord Chancellor, leading the five Lords Commissioners took their seats on their right with the Archbishop of Canterbury and six other lords spiritual. "Let the Commons know," said Lord Sankey, raising his three-cornered hat, "that the Lords Commissioners desire their immediate attendance in this House."

The Black Rod departed with his message, and even in that there was a difference from a state opening, for in the message from the Throne the King "commands" the Commoners to attend. A few moments and the members of the Lower House were at the bar of the House of Lords to hear Lord Sankey read His Majesty's "most gracious speech."

History is Made

The first king's speech in British history prepared by a Labor government was then read, occupying just 10 minutes. A feature of it was the almost insistent way in which it was emphasized that the new government was working in consultation with the dominions. It expressed the hope of securing, in co-operation with the governments of the dominions, of India and of foreign powers, an early reduction in armaments. The government was consulting the dominions on the signing f the optional clause of the world court at The Hague, providing of the optional clause of the the court of international justice of international questions.

The government was also consulting the other empire governments on resumption of diplomatic relations with the Soviet government, the speech declared.

"In co-operation with my governments in the dominions," the speech continued, "measures are being considered with the object of providing greater opportunities for overseas migration."

The speech indicated wide schemes to find employment for slum clearance and for housing. Reorganization of the coal industry is under consideration, not only the question of miners' hours but the possibility of the state acquiring some measure of control over the mines being considered. Another domestic item was the announcement the government proposed to examine the whole field of legislation to the sale and supply of intoxicating liquor.

Inquiries will be made in the steel and cotton industries as to discovering means for [illegible] with them "to improve the position in the markets of the world," the speech continued.

The speech closed with [illegible] tion that the government was proceeding to forestall the exp[illegible] Liberal

THOUSANDS GREET KING GEORGE AS HE RETURNS TO CITY OF LONDON

APPEARS ON BALCONY.

Is Welcomed By Shouts of Joy and Tears of Affection.

LONDON, July 2. — (Canadian Press).— Welcomed with echoing shouts of joy and tears of affection, the king, thin, but bronzed, returned to London yesterday, signalizing recovery from his long and dangercus illness. His Majesty, confident in renewed health and vigor, rested last night again in Buckingham Palace, from whence he was borne in an ambulance five months ago to Bognor, Sussex, a pale and enfeebled man.

Uncounted thousands cheered the king wildly as he, the queen by his side, rode in an open carriage from Kensington through festively-decked historic thorcughfares to the palace. He had been driven by motor car from Windsor Castle to Kensington, where the change to the state carriage was made. Moving slowly through two miles of packed humanity, His Majesty received a quiet smile the cheers and fragrant flowers offered by his people. Occasionally he waved his hand or swept his hat around in acknowledgment of the fervid shouts and waving flags.

Tremendous Ovation

An ovation almost overpowering in its testimony of profound affection was tendered his majesty as he reached the palace at last. Here he returned a few solemn words of thankfulness. "I wish to express my heartfelt gratitude," he said from the palace balcony, "for the affectionate and enthusiastic welcome I have received on returning after long months of illness to the capital of my empire."

Then the King held up the baby Princess Elizabeth, daughter of the the Duke and Duchess of York, to share the deafening plaudits of the multitude which pressed against the palace railings. The band and the tens of thousands joined in the national anthem, and other members of the royal family appeared with His Majesty on the balcony. Then the king turned back to greet the members of the royal household.

On Sunday His Majesty will be present in Westminster Abbey for the official service of thanksgiving for his recovery.

His Majesty appeared thin in the face but he looked well. He wore morning clothes with a silk topper. He took evident care not to respond too much to the excitement of the notable hour, and often seemed to restrain himself in his acknowledgements.

JURY FINDS DEATHS WERE ACCIDENTAL

Three Are Drowned Near Kingston When Car Strikes Bridge.

KINGSTON, Ont., July 2.—(Canadian Press).—Accidental death was the verdict returned by a coroner's jury here last night investigating the triple drowning accident at Brewer's Mills Saturday night. Edward Murray, Kingston, sole survivor, who was the principal witness at the inquest said Miss Myrtle Howgill, who was driving the car at the time swerved and struck the bridge before toppling over into the water, had had experience in driving cars but had never driven this particular machine before. They were travelling at about 18 miles an hour when the crash occurred, he said, but neither he nor two other witnesses could give any reason for the car striking the bridge abutment.

Miss Myrtle Hewgill, 26, and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hewgill, Kingston, were trapped in the car when it sank in the water and were drowned when brought up. Murray escaped by climbing through a window.

10,000 People Watch Funeral Procession in Hamilton.

MANY FLORAL TRIBUTES.

HAMILTON, Ont., July 2.—(C.P.)—Paying tribute to the valor of Detective William Clarke, fully 10,000 citizens yesterday thronged the route of the funeral procession and bowed their heads as the cortege passed. Clarke was shot and killed by Chas. Long, Aldershot farmer, who robbed a branch of the Provincial Bank here last Thursday.

Hamilton, Toronto, London and Brantford police departments were represented at the service. Every man off duty and as many on service as could be spared safely marched in a body with the Hamilton Department.

Flowers came from many organizations and from several outside points. Five motor cars were requisitioned to carry them to Woodland cemetery.

Rev. Dr. C. T. Scott, Hamilton, conducted the service.

The body of a full grown sea-elephant contains about 70 gallons of pure oil.

U. S. ADMINISTRATION OPPOSES MANY INCREASES IN TARIFF

LUMBER RATE EXCESSIVE.

Interests of Country at Large Must Be Protected, Members Are Told.

(By Kenneth S. Clark, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 2. — The administration is bringing pressure to bear upon Senators and Congressmen to prevent increases in tariff duties which would be detrimental to American foreign trade, well-informed circles here believe. It is understood that Canadian trade is the particular concern of the administration.

The President is represented as feeling that some of the increases made by the House are extreme, and calculated to hurt American trade with Canada. Among the schedules mentioned are those on shingles and cedar lumber, live cattle and dairy products. The word is that the president is keeping in touch with developments in the Senate Finance Committee, now holding hearings on the bill, and that he will continue to seek, as the bill comes through the Senate, and goes to conference between the two Houses, to protect the interests of the country at large by keeping the tariff wall down to reasonable levels.

Representative Bacon, Republican, New York, after a conference at the White House, issued a statement in which he characterized the proposed duty on shingles and lumber as an excessive rate.

"If this suggested rate on lumber becomes law," he said, "it will seriously affect our trade relations with our neighbor, Canada, which is incidentally our best and largest customer. The suggested tariff on hides and leather and shoes is also open to serious doubt."

Fuji-Yama, the famous Japanese mountain, is more than two miles high.

Attempt Is Made To Burn Parliament Buildings In Capital Of Saskatchewan

REGINA, Sask., July 2.—(Canadian Press). — Police, both mounted and local, were last night searching the capital city of Saskatchewan for a person or persons who made an attempt early Sunday morning to burn the parliament buildings, but who only succeeded in doing extensive damage to a couple of massive oak doors at the main entrance of the legislative building.

A local doctor returning to his home near the buildings shortly after midnight Saturday noticed a glare at the entrance to the buildings, and upon investigating found flames shooting up from the doorway.

The prompt arrival of the fire department soon disposed of the trouble and it was then found that a can, filled with coal oil and surrounded by oil-soaked waste and sacks, had been set on fire.

a result of the fire, now stand a result o fthe fire, now stand charred, blackened and utterly ruined. On the stonework near the door-way the words "Gardiner and Crime—get out", were printed in red chalk characters.

The Weather

The highest temperature yesterday was 82 degrees. It was a perfect day for a perfect celebration, with the exception of the slight shower that occurred late in the evening. SCHOOL DAYS ARE RECALLED BY 150 OLD BOYS AND GIRLS

Central School Corridors Again Echo With Once Familiar Voices.

SHORT ADRESSES GIVEN.

All Go To Collegiate Institute Where Hearty Welcome is Extended.

Happiest of days, "school days" were brought back vividly this morning as over 150 Old Peterborough Boys and Girls congregated at the Central School to hold once more a morning session with old masters and chums amid scenes dear to every heart.

Promptly at 9.30 o'clock, a trifling half-hour late, in groups of twos and threes the old pupils began to saunter into the halls that once rang with their laughter, and it wasn't long till the corridors echoed again to hearty greetings as hands were shaken and backs thumped by enthusiastic "kids."

No, in former days the boys didn't smoke their cigars on the front steps, nor drive to school with their chauffers, but these Old Boys did, that is a lot of them did, and it was a happy rollicking crowd that gathered about the old school. Starting about nine o'clock they strolled about the building, looked over old class rooms, pointed out old seats to each other and swapped yarns of how many "lickings" their teacher gave them or how many they "sneaked" out of; with every now and then an old school mate coming up to shake hands or clap each other on the back and do a little war dance out of sheer joy.

Several attempts were made to get order, but for once in their lives they weren't going to be subjected to hard and fast rules of a teacher, and come in they wouldn't. The old school bell rang and rang, each time enticing a few more of the merrymakers into the entrance class room where the meeting had been called for, and finally at 9.45 o'clock the room was crowded with boys and girls who filled, and more than filled, the tiny seats they used to carve their initials on secretly many years ago. Those seats that

KITCHENER, Ont., July 2 (Canadian Press). — Half an hour after Kitchener's eighth annual military tattoo got under way at Victoria Park here last night, a sudden wind and rainstorm struck terror into a crowd of 6,000 people, and but for the prompt action of the police and splendid order maintained by the officers and men of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders of Hamilton, a panic would have ensued.

The Ninety-first Highlanders' Band was just starting its musical selection when the storm broke, and thousands of people rushing from the drenched bleachers in the baseball park in which the event was being held swarmed into the grand stand and scrambed for the seats, which were partially covered. Hundreds of grandstand spectators sought to leave but there was a conflict of incoming and outrushing people.

The police were powerless to realize the situation, and for a few moments had the park quieted and in order. Thousands of people milled to the gates in the pouring rain, while those who had to remain found quick refuge, and were drenched as they sought shelter on nearby verandahs.

City And County Honor Their War Heroes

TRIBUTE IS PAID 717 MEN WHO DIED IN THE GREAT WAR

Archdeacon Scott, of Quebec, Beloved Padre of Canadian Soldiers, Unveils Memorials To Peterborough City's and County's War Dead.

MAYOR AND WARDEN ACCEPT THE RESPONSIBILITY CORPORATIONS TO PROTECT AND PRESERVE MEMORIAL

Beautiful Program Is Carried Out Without a Hitch and By Use of Microphone and Broadcasting Instruments Every Word Was Distinctly Heard By Vast Assemblage.

The sublimest hour in Peterborough's long century of community life and progress ticked and tolled its solemn, glowing minutes on Sunday afternoon in Central Park during the ceremony of the unveiling and dedication of the heroic memorial to the men of the city and county who died in the great war of 1914-1918.

It was virtually the last day of the city's first hundred years, the end of a cycle of pioneering that has closed in a flame of glory whose price is perpetuated in the symbolic bronzes and their personification of Canadian sacrifice and valor and victory that was never more profoundly realized and acknowledged than in the permeating spirit of Sunday's reverent demonstration.

Behind this week of Peterborough's first centennial celebration extends the history of one hundred years of struggle, for a long time against nature, and on a few occasions against principalities, requiring and producting stout men of sturdy hearts, unflinching wills,none of them greater than the 717 men of this city and county whose names are engraved in the new granite in Central Park.

Declaration of Gratitude.

Observed in this long perspective, Sunday's assembly was confirming testimony of the material expansion of the old community on the Otonabee, of the enduring courage and loyalty of its men, and of the abiding faith and gratitude of the entire populace.

Regarded as an ambitious spectacle it was an engaging and gripping drama, directed by some master of stagecraft.

But viewed and comprehended as the last episode of Peterborough's epic years, and of her people's full-hearted contributions to success in the war, the ceremony unfolded itself as an unforgettable act of homage to our soldier dead, who with all their comrades were promised on their departure that they and theirs would not be forgotten.

Peterborough Remembers.

And the gentlemen of the Canadian Legion, who attended in such strength on Sunday afternoon, will no doube agree that Peterborough is cherishing the memory of those others who did not return. It was this aspect of keeping faith that reflected so radiantly upon the huge crowd of people themselves, and of their remembrance of a debt they can never repay.

A Memory of 1914.

Only a few of the great assemblage could have recalled that official promise on a September morning, in 1914, when the 2nd Battalion contingent marched off from almost the same spot on Central Park where the memorial shrine has been erected. Only a few could remember it, because only a few persons were there, when Canon Davidson in a voice that nearly broke with feeling, invoked a benediction upon that smart company, and Mayor William H. Biller pledged the honor of the citizens and the corporation of Peterborough to the care and welfare of the men's dependents, and of the people's solicitude for the soldiers themselves.

A clipped command, and they were gone, swinging around the Y.M.C.A. corner, Col. Clegg in command, and Major Bennett, the upstanding George Bennett beside him. Col. C. H. Ackerman was with the contingent as a Lieutenant; his brother Arthur was a "Non-com," and there was Peter Victor, Ernie Mesley, George Minorgan, Bill Gibson, and Odeley (Scoop) Tayor, a Review reporter and a keen "news-digger," and George Howarth, Heber Rogers, and so on, men who at a nod had left the field and the workshop and the bank cage; many of them Old Countrymen, it is true, but many another were Canadian-born.

That scene, and others like them, as on the April day of 1915, when those first Peterborough men were almost wiped out at Langemarck, the recruiting of the 21st, the 39th, the C.M.R. and the 93rd, these scenes were almost perceptibly woven into Sunday's pageant of remembrance. They were the shadowy background of that gathering of thousands of men and women from the city and all parts of the county, they infused it with significance even as they seemed to transform into brawn and blood the stern figure with the upraised, fending and repulsing arm.

Arrangements Perfect.

The afternoon's order of ceremonial was arranged and performed al-

OLD PASTOR PREACHES AT MURRAY STREET

Rev. J. R. Webb Expresses Pleasure at Being Able to Return to Congregation

Preaching a friendly sermon to a most friendly congregation composed of former and present members of the church, Rev. J. R. Webb told of the great love and friendship of God for his people as exemplified by Christ at Murray Street Baptist Church, Sunday morning.

Rev. Webb, was the minister at Murray Street Church for over sixteen years and it was greatly due to his efforts that the splendid new church was constructed. He was assisted in the service by Rev. H. C. Wright, pastor of Highland Park Church, New Brunswick, N. J., an old Peterborough boy and worker at Murray Street. Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, the pastor, also assisted in the service.

Expressing his pleasure at being again in the pulpit of his old church, Rev. Webb said that to address the home-coming family of Murray Street was a great privilege. He spoke of the friendliness and co-operation of Murray Street people and the happy years that he had spent among them.

Somewhere in Chapter 61 of the Prophecy of Isiah it tells with fiery words of the day of vengeance of God, said Mr. Webb in beginning his sermon. Seven hundred years later Jesus was asked to read this Chapter of Isiah; this incident is told of in Luke, Chapter 14, verse 16. Jesus read the chapter to his congregation, but he closed the book and sat down without reading of the vengeance of God as proclaimed by Isiah.

"My word is the last word regaring the disposition of God," Christ has said, and the speaker went on to state that Christ told of God's great love and compassion for his people. "God's love for us is greater than our love can ever be for one another" said Mr. Webb.

With a full choir the musical part of the service was of a splendid nature, for both services. Miss B. Wainwright of London and Miss Lillian Eastwood of Toronto sang beautiful solos.

WITH LOWER DECK ON FIRE SHIP STEAMS INTO NEW YORK

480 PASSENGERS ON BOARD.

Grease Overflows On To Hot Stove On Steamer Deutschland.

NEW YORK, N.Y., July 2 (Canadian Press). — With the skyline in sight, and the ship's band playing merrily, the Hamburg-American liner Deutschland steamed up the bay yesterday with a savage fire running through her.

The fire, which sent a cloud of flames and dense smoke pouring out of a ventilator on the boat deck, started in the ship's galley a few minutes after the Deutschland had left quarantine.

A cook had thrown too many potatoes into a bubbling cauldron of grease.

The grease ran over the hot stove and in a moment the galley was filled with choking black smoke and flames. The cooks ran for their lives, slamming the fireproof doors as the flames ate along the insulation of the electric wiring in the galley and ran up a ventilator leading to the boat deck.

The smoke billowing from the ventilator caused a slight flurry of alarm among the 480 passenegrs aboard. The ship's band turned to, and the lively military marches played by them eased the tenseness aboard.

The damage, confined to six cabins and the galley, as well as some slight injury to the woodwork and deck surrounding the ventilator, will be repaired in time to permit the Deutschland to sail on schedule.

CITIZENS ARE THRILLED BY BIG MILITARY PARADE

Old Home Week Is Opened With Impressive Parade of Militia Units

Peterborough's garrison and militia visitors to the city gave the citizens a real military parade on Saturday night when they marched from the armouries to the Exhibition park. It was the opening of Old Home Week and the soldiers with heads erect and arms swinging represented the finest type of Canadian manhood.

Hundreds of people lined the streets and gave the boys a hearty handclap as they filed by. The 5th pipe band of Toronto under the command of Drum Major W. Smith, headed the parade. Lt. Col. Watson, Lt. Col. Powell and Lt. Col. M. H. Park headed the units which included the Peterborough Rangers, 4th Machine Gun Company, Toronto Scottish and the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons.

SHAM BATTLE IS WELL DEPICTED BY TORONTO UNIT

Large Grandstand Is Filled To Capacity To View Fight.

TAKING OF SHANGHAI.

Spectacle Will Be Long Remembered By Citizens and Old Boys and Girls.

Grim warfare, its stark truths unmitigated; bursts of high-powered explosives; the deadly staccato of relentless machine guns; men falling in their tracks to be trodden on by their onrushing comrades; the costly advance; then overwhelming victory was the scene unfolded before the thousands who thronged the exhibition grandstand last night by the Toronto Scottish Regiment aided by a local section of machine gunners.

Vivid memories of actual war days were recalled to the crowds of spectators for whom the epic being enacted before their eyes assumed the garb of reality rather than that of a ficticious piece designed solely for amusement. Explosions rent the night air ,their flashes casting a weird light over the awe inspiring scene. In the dim light the orderly lines of infantry, firing from a prone position could be seen, the bayonets on the rifles gleaming in the sight of a still figure ,his arms the sight of a still qgure, his arms outflung, his face upturned, added a touch of pathos to the already grim scene. Smoke from the flares, shells and grenades floated lazily over the whole scene. The drone of airplanes lent an air of realism that will cause the spectacle to be long remembered. Devastating fire, as it engulfed the tents of the invaders completed the effect of the entire scene.

The narrative on which the sham battle was bassed was entitled "The Defence of Shanghai." In the narrative as enacted the International Settlement of Shanghai was threatened by countless numbers of crazed coolies who had pitched their tents a few yards from the border line. These masses were known to be be working themselves into a frenzy and an attack was imminent.

A British force of 200 officers, men and N.C.O.'s strengthened by one section of machine guns and one section R.A. 18-pounders, was ordered to take up a position on the border of the International Settlement where an attack had hitherto been thought impossible, and consequently, no artificial defence works had been built. The British were outnumbered ten to one.

Marched Out Joyful

The detachment marched out of camp singing, jesting and chattering as is the habit of men on the march, and advanced to a position near the centre of the field where they encamped, piling arms and posting sentries. The section R.A. and the machine gun section took up position. Scouts were sent out and the men lay down and went to sleep.

Shooting soon began from the side of the field occupied by the coolies and scouts hurried to the British with reports that the coolies were massing for a rush. The British decided that the best defence was a strong offensive in that case. The alarm was spread by a bugler and the men sprung to their arms taking a position along the general line previously chosen. Stirring pipe music accompanied the movements of these men. Obeying the signal of the advance guard the force advanced to the field of battle. They deployed into three lines, each a short distance apart. The artillery attachment and the machine gunners took their position behind. The platoons piled arms and lay down.

Beside their ghostly tents, the lurking forms of the hordes of coolies could be seen. They were making hasty preparations for the oncoming attack.

At last zero hour arrived for the waiting British attackers and the bugler blew his alarm, the men springing to attention in their positions. Two scouts, running in mad

MAN DROWNED IN MOIRA LAKE

THREE ARE SAVED.

MADOC, July 2.—Rough water and a tippy fat-bottomed boat figured in an early Sunday morning tragedy when William Bisset, aged 29 years, of 61 Woodycrest avenue, Toronto, was drowned, and his three companions thrown into the chill waters of Moira Lake.

Although only about seventy-five yards from shore the three men who managed to cling to the partly submerged boat had a hard struggle to propel themselves to shore, where they collapsed exhausted.

The party, which was composed of the three Bisset brothers, Robert, also of Woodycrest avenue, James of 387 Hillsdale, and a brother-in-law, James Smith, of 40 Manor Road East, had left Toronto early on Saturday and were preparing to spend the holiday in fishing.

Clung To Gunwale.

As the boat sank, swamped by rough water, the four men clung to the gunwale and were making some progress towards the shore when suddenly Bisset, apparently seized with cramps, sank, and failed to rise. His three companions, almost exhausted, dared not let go the boat, and finally dragged themselves to a lonely part of the shore.

Body Is Found.

An alarm was spread and about three hours later Kenneth Connor of Madoc, found the body with grappling irons.

Upon communication with Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, of Belleville, Coroner Dr. S. Eagleson decided an inquest was unnecessary.

The deceased, commonly known among a large circle of friends as "Bill" was to have been married on July 19 to Miss Theressa Low, 347 Leslie street, Toronto. He was also a great soccer enthusiast, being associated with the Maple Leaf and Caledonian teams. He had been with the Imperial army in France since he was 16 years of age, coming to this country with his parents from Aberdeen, Scotland, about seven years ago.

The body was conveyed by hearse to Toronto on Sunday evening. Before it left the veterans of Madoc showed their sympathy by placing a beautiful wreath on the casket.

SIX INJURED IN COLLISION

TORONTO, Ont., July 2.—Six persons were injured here last night in a collision between an automobile and a trolley car on Queen street. They were William Dennis and Mrs. Dennis, Brantford, and their son Vernon, 22, driver of the car, Mrs. W. Cook, 22, Harwood, Ontario, Phyliss Cook, 4, and baby June, four months.

All were conveyed to a hospital where their injuries, with the exception of Mrs. Dennis, were found to be slight.

The total annual receipts of building societies in Great Britain are more than $500,000,000.

JUDGMENT IS DEFERRED IN COURT ACTION

$270 CONTRACT PRICE.

Judge O'Connor Decides To Consult Similar Cases Before Giving Decision.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 2.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence).—After hearing evidence for almost all of one court day, Judge O'Connor decided that he would be better advised to withhold judgment for a few days till he consulted certain points of law. The case before him was that of Hall vs Town of Campbellford. It was a matter of $270 for the construction of a sewer and water main on Ranney street north from Second street, one-hundred and eighty feet. William Hall was the plaintiff and was represented by Charles Payne, Belleville, D. J. Lynch, town solicitor, was present in the interests of the corporation.

In the beginning of the proceedings, Lynch read an amendment to the statement of defense which was admitted in evidence when Payne neither objected nor consented. William Hall, the plaintiff, was the first witness called. He described himself as a contractor and admitted that he had never had any other contract but the one for the sewer. His brother John, was engaged as a contractor along certain lines. He pleaded that he had agreed to construct the sewer for the sum of $270, and that he had not received his money. He had been unwilling to sign an agreement which called for him to pay for the Ranney street sewer at the same rate as the Second Street sewer. He admitted owning the property at the corner of Second and Ranney streets. He claimed that he was not connected with the Second street sewer but was assessed for it regardless. He had heard no agreement read in the council chamber. Wesley Stephens had attended the meeting with him and addressed the council. This was in 1926. The request had been refused, and they had gone again in 1927. That year he had been given permission to proceed with the work. He said that he was to dig the trench and install the tile for $270 and the town was to lay the water main in the same trench. He knew nothing of any resolution till after he had started to work on the sewer.

Wesley Stephens

Wesley Stephens was the only other witness for the plaintiff. He said he owned lots fourteen and fifteen on Ranney street. He and Hall had often talked over the matter of a sewer and when they went to the council, he had addressed the meeting. The first time, 1926, the question was refused and in 1927 the permission they requested was granted. He thought that there was only one way to get a sewer and that was to pay for it. He was willing, personally, to pay for it.

J. F. McGregor, town clerk, was the first witness for the defence. He produced documentary evidence from the minutes of the council meetings and also gave evidence regarding the actual digging of the sewer. J. J O'Sullivan was the second defence witness. He said he was a councillor since 1926 and had been present at all the meetings when the Ranney street sewer had come up. He claimed that the resolutions regarding the sewer and its construction had been read and re-read in the presence of Hall and Stephens. He himself, had asked Hall to sign the agreement at once and Hall had said that he would sign. Later he refused to sign because he was being charged two frontage taxes. He also claimed that he and three other members of the council went to where the work was going on and said that Hall must either sign the agreement or else cease work on the sewer.

G. A. Kingston, ex-mayor and holder of that office during the period in question, agreed with the evidence of Councilhor O'Sullivan. He did not see the sewer under construction since he was on his holidays at the time. It was nearly completed when he returned. He admitted to Judge O'Connor that he had not seen Hall or had any communications with him. Mayor Davidson, then deputy-reeve, Reeve Bygott, Deputy-Reeve Stone, Councillors Abernethy and MacDonald all told the same story.

After hearing the evidence, His Honor said that he believed the way was still open for the defendant to make the plaintiff pay for the use of the sewer. But he was not going to give judgement at once, since he wished to refer to certain similar cases before making his decision. He said he would advise the counsel of his decision in a few days.

BISHOP SWEENEY PREACHES AT ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

His Lordship Described the Three Features of Old Home Week

(By Joe Beauclerc, Owen Sound Sun-Times, formerly of The Examiner)

An Old Home Week sermon was delivered in All Saints' Church on Sunday morning by His Lordship Bishop Sweeny of Toronto, speaking from the eleventh verse of the 32nd Psalm: "Be glad in the Lord and rejoice, ye righteous; and shout for joy, all ye that are upright of heart." His Lordship spoke of the three features of Old Home Week, emotions, memories, and contrasts. Every person coming home feels emotions of sadness or gladness, joy or sorrow. He remembers the scenes and faces of his chilhood, and he contrasts them with scenes and faces of to-day.

The speaker mentioned the development of Peterborough from the hamlet of 1829 to the flourishing city of 1929, through the work of its citizens under God's good guidance. He also spoke of the progress in All Saints' Parish since its separation in 1902, under the Rev. Messrs. Armitage, Major, Trumpour, Grobb and Paterson. The Old Home Week when former residents come back to this their former home is also an example of the great home coming when all will meet in their Heavenly Home.

The lessons were read by Charles E. Sisson and Herbert A. Mowat, former members of the Church and Sunday School now resident in Toronto. The choir sang a fitting anthem. At the evening service the preacher was the Rev. Canon Sawers of St. Matthew's Church, Toronto, a former Sunday School scholar of All Saints' and for several years rector of St. Luke's Church.

TWO DROWNED IN RICE LAKE

spread along the shore, and natives and visitors formed a large party, which set off to seek the bodies. Provincial Constable N. Storey, of Cobourg, was summoned, and he also formed a party and searched the waters. Dragging operations are being held up for lack of proper instruments.

Frank Pettus left for Toronto in an effort to secure the help of the Toronto Life-Saving Crew.

Rice Lake is a large, shallow lake, stretching about eight miles long and in many places it is thick with weeds. It has always been known as the most dangerous of the Kawartha chain. At the place of yesterday's double drowning the water is thirty feet deep and is clear of weeds.

The search for the bodies is hampered by the fact that neither Pettus nor Mrs. Kennedy can locate definitely the tragic place.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 2.—Sensationally bad crop reports from Nebraska, the Dakotas and Canada brought about sharp upturns in wheat values yesterday, but the gains failed to hold well. Big receipts of wheat in the South-West, together with heavy deliveries of wheat here on July contracts, were largely responsible for setbacks from the day's top prices.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 1-8c to 5-8c above Saturday's finish. Corn closed ½c to 1 1-8c off. Oats, ¼c to 5-8c advance, and provisions unchanged to 15c down.

July Deliveries Curtail Gains.

The wheat market showed an early upward trend and prices averaged higher throughout the day, but at times undergoing material downturns because of large deliveries here on July contracts, 3,374,000 bushels early and 1,602,000 bushels later.

Corn prices showed a downward tendency, owing a good deal to moisture and warmth favorable to corn growth. In addition, there were liberal receipts of corn here and in the South-West Chicago arrivals of corn yesterday aggregated 413 cars, compared with 319 cars a week ago and 102 cars last year. There were also heavy deliveries of corn here yesterday on July contracts, 1,766,000 bushels. Oats displayed independent strength, with dry weather reports from the North-West a factor.

A feature of the provision market was liquidating sales by holders of July lard.

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES ATWELL.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 2 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — The funeral of the late Mrs. James Atwell was held from her residence, Inkerman Street, on Sunday afternoon at two o'clock. The services were conducted by the Rev. R. C. Tait, minister of St. John's United Church. There were a large number of friends present to pay their last respects to the deceased. Interment was made in Mount Pleasant Cemetery. The pall-bearers were Thomas Varcoe, William Ashton, S. A. Maguire, James Hicks, William Stanbury and John Plumpton.

The late Mrs. Atwell was born in Belleville. She was seventy-seven years of age, and had been a resident of Campbellford and vicinity for several years. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Pashley. Her death occurred at Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, where she had been ill for about ten days. Previous to that she had been in failing health for several months. She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Samuel Jones, of Tweed.

SHAM BATTLE IS WELL DEPICTED

haste, were discerned in the dim light. One fell under the rifle fire of the coolies but the other reached the front line. Firing began. A British signaller semaphored back for artillery co-operation.

The incessant firing of machine guns and the bursting of shells far to the front afforded a degree of protection when the front line began its advance. There were considerable losses on their first advance. Reaching their objective, they hurled grenades while the sound of airplanes in advance of their position was effected. The tents of the coolies burst into flame under the fire of the incendary bullets of the attackers.

Re-inforcements for the British front line arrived and another advance of many yards was made. Machine gun fire, artillery activities and grenade bombardments became more intense. Another advance was made.

In panic the defending coolies deserted their burning tents and guns and fled before the rush of the invaders. A victory for the British. But the victory was not without cost. A mopping party followed the path of the victorious troops giving assistance to the injured trying to crawl out of the danger zone and bearing away those who had been killed in action.

The members of the staff of the Scottish regiment deserve commendation on the realism of the whole affair made possible by smooth co-operation and organization. The troops and officers that took part in the spectacle were:—Artillery, half section, R.A., Colonel S. D. Lawrie; Infantry, defence, twenty men (including two signallers, one bugler, five bombers and one section of stretcher bearers), Captain E. Douglas; B. Platoon, sixty men (including five bombers, two signallers, one piper and five bombers), Lieutenant E. Stephan; C. Plattoon, sixty men (including five bombers.

In staging the great spectacle, the Toronto Scottish were assisted by a section of 4th Canadian Machine Gun Battalion under the command of Captain J. Turnbull with Lieutenant H. J. Devey, in second command. Special ammunition for the machine guns was procured from the arsenal in Quebec for the Vickers guns that were used last night.

WELCOME, TORONTO OLD BOYS!

To-day Peterborough welcomes hundreds of her former citizens who now claim Toronto as their place of residence—even if their visit on this occasion indicates that deep in their hearts this happy city beside the Otonabee is still regarded as their home.

To the Toronto old boys and girls, The Examiner says, on behalf of all our citizens, Welcome, old friends!

We are proud of you all, proud of the contribution of service you are making in many fields of endeavor in the capital city of the Province, and prouder still of the fact that you still cherish Peterborough in your hearts and are glad to join with our citizens in this great home-coming festival.

Your contribution to the joyousness of the re-union is appreciated by the whole community—but even if you had come without bands and banners and fireworks, the mere fact that you came would have been enough to delight Peterborough citizens.

Welcome, old boys and girls from Toronto!

THE GOOD OLD SCOTTISH!

The thanks of the citizens of Peterborough and of the thousands of visiting old boys and girls is due to Lieutenant-Colonel W. H. Watson and his very fine regiment, the Toronto Scottish, for the important and colorful part taken in the events of the first days of the Old Home Week celebration.

The Scottish with their splendid pipers and excellent brass band, the fine conduct and bearing of the officers and men, and their general air of smartness and efficiency contributed materially to the initial success of the re-union program, and their visit to Peterborough has been enjoyed by citizens and guests alike.

The marching of the kilted soldiers, the effectiveness with which the picturesque ceremony of trooping the colors was performed, the stirring sham battle staged last evening and the other military features made possible through the willingness of the officers and men of the Toronto Scottish to co-operate in the program have made the three-day sojourn of the regiment here a memorable event.

In fact, Peterborough has capitulated to the Scottish without the least sign of resistance, and this city will always henceforth have a warm spot in its heart for Lieutenant-Colonel Watson and his unit.

AN ASSURED SUCCESS.

Old Home Week has already justified the faith of those who sponsored it.

The in-pouring of former sons and daughters of Peterborough from every Province of the Dominion and many of the States of the Union has been on a scale that surprised the most optimistic.

Never in the city's history has there been such a re-union—never such a joyous home-coming, such a telling of old yarns, such a renewal of old acquaintances.

The program, complete as it is, really takes second place alongside the thrill that is being provided by the meeting of old friends, some of whom have not seen each other for many years.

The old history of Peterborough is being lived again in reminiscences as former citizens come together and recall the events of yesteryear, and this phase of the re-union transcends in interest every other feature of the program.

The local committees are to be congratulated upon the thoroughness of their preparations and the smoothness with which registration, the reception of visitors and other important details are being accomplished.

The celebration is an assured success—and will long be remembered by the stay-at-homes, as well as their guests of the week.

THE WAR MEMORIAL.

It was a most happy thought that made the unveiling of Peterborough's war memorial the opening event in the Old Home Week program, and allowed Peterborough citizens, past and present, to pay tribute to the memory of the city's glorious war dead before embarking upon the festivities that would have never been possible had it not been for the courage and patriotism of those gallant soldiers and their comrades.

The ceremonies, carried through without a hitch of any kind, were impressive in their sincere dignity, and the committee, the Canadian Legion, the police department and the militia deserve general congratulations for the smoothness with which the affair functioned and the manner in which the huge crowd was handled.

A source of particular satisfaction was the references made to Peterborough's war memorial by Colonel Henry Osborne of the Imperial Graves Commission, an authority on all matters pertaining to keeping green the memory of the unreturning brave.

Peterborough, he said, deserved to be congratulated upon refusing to follow the easy way of adopting some conventional design.

The committee, in securing the services of a great artist and in waiting patiently until he could execute the task, had made a valuable contribution to Canadian art and achieved a memorial that would be increasingly cherished as the years pass.

This tribute from an authority of Colonel Osborne's capacity must have been most pleasing to the members of the War Memorial Committee and to citizens generally.

POPULAR SERMONS.

Colonel E. S. Wigle, speaking to members of the Essex Deanery of the Anglican Church, expresses an interesting opinion on a subject that has for many years past caused much discussion in church circles. Colonel Wigle comes out flatly in favor of the preaching of sermons of a more popular type.

The colonel is right in advocating this type of sermon, but he will probably be misunderstood, as so many others have been. The trouble is that people find it hard, or do not try, to distinguish between the so-called popular sermon and the sensational bombast which is used by some clergymen.

Preachers have been arraigned by the public on the rather strange charge of preaching sermons simply designed to fill their churches. It all depends on what accent is placed on this utterance as to whether it is a charge or a meed of praise. After all, is it not the duty of a clergyman to fill his church if at all possible? Of course, the end does not always justify the means, but sermons on popular and modern topics, delivered in a reverential and thoughtful way, cannot be honestly condemned.

Preachers to-day are preaching for modern people. It is not only their privilege, but their duty, to deliver themselves on great moral problems which confront the present age. The morality of ages past may be interesting, but it carries little in the way of a message to the people of to-day. And, after all, the minister should have a message that will be useful to his congregation.

The strange part of it all is that the minister who is generally accused of preaching sermons designed only to draw the crowds, has no such object in view. The sensationalists, of whom, fortunately, there are very few, aim mainly at personal fame and even notoriety.

Colonel Wigle astutely remarks that it is a good thing to try to fill the churches. Perhaps a lot of people will come simply to be entertained by a brilliant sermon, but it is a poor church indeed which cannot benefit the people, however slightly, after it once gets them inside.—Border Cities Star.

WHO WILL RUN IT?

As the time approaches when the Hudson Bay Railway will be completed, one question, requiring decision by the Dominion Government, becomes acute. This is, the question of who will operate the railway? At the present time the Hudson Bay Railway is under the jurisdiction of the Department of Railways and Canals. There seems to be an assumption on the part of certain of the officials of the Canadian National Railway that when the Hudson Bay Railway is completed it will be turned over to the Canadian National Railways, at least for operation purposes, and will thus become part of the Canadian National Railways system. In fact, many people will consider this the logical method of dealing with the new railway line.

But is it logical? The Hudson Bay Railway was built by the Dominion Government for national reasons, and having been built for national reasons, it should be open for use by the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian National Railways—the two large continental railways of Canada—on identical terms.

There is only one logical alternative to joint use of the railway by the two larger railway companies. This is, that it should become in fact as well as in theory a part of the Canadian National system. If the Hudson Bay Railway becomes a part of the Canadian National Railway system, the Canadian National Railway should assume the interest charges on the investment that has been made in the line. The people of Canada, represented by the Dominion Government, should not carry the bag as far as interest on capital account is concerned, allowing the Canadian National Railway to take all the revenues and pay only operating expenses.

At the present time, the Intercolonial Railway and the Transcontinental Railway are part of the Canadian National Railways system, but the Canadian National Railways system does not pay the interest charges upon them. This was pointed out in a recent editorial in the Financial Post when it was shown that the present system of accounting used by the Government and the Canadian National Railways is highly misleading, because it either charges the Canadian National Railways with too much or with not enough.

If the Hudson Bay Railway is turned over to the Canadian National Railway to become part of the National system and the entire cost of the railway is not charged to the National system, then a great injustice will be done to the Canadian Pacific Railway. Obviously rates on the line will have to be set with costs in mind and these rates are distinctly of interest to the C. P. R. which operates competitive routes. A great injustice will be done also to the public for apparently satisfactory earnings will be shown in the Canadian National report, and for this the Government of the day will take credit and attempt to gain political advantage. Yet unless all the proper charges are made against the National system no real idea of the actual trend of Canadian National finances either in this connection or generally will be had.

The Canadian National balance sheet should show accurately the whole investment by the Government in all the railways comprising the system. The splitting of accounts is only confusing and the annual statement of the National Railways is incorrect to the extent that it does not show the whole investment and the results therefrom.

When the time comes to recapitalize the Canadian National Railways some of these items will no doubt be written down, but in the meantime we should not fool ourselves by letting the taxpayer pay the interest charges on important railway investments, while the Canadian National Railway pays only the operating expenses and thus makes a pretense of a better showing than is actually present.—Financial Post.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Well, the old boys came back—and how!

Incidentally, yesterday was also Dominion Day—but this year Peterborough people were thinking mostly in terms of Peterborough.

The answer of Peterborough's sons and daughters to the home-coming call of their old home city has been amazing in its completeness.

General Currie was absent from Sunday's ceremony, but his inspiring message will re-echo wherever ex-service men live.

Remember to make it a safe as well as a joyous week. Don't take chances by reckless driving under abnormal traffic conditions.

Old Home Week has gone over the top with a vengeance, and it looks as if every objective will be attained. Congratulations all around!

To-day is Toronto Day—and what a home-coming ex-Peterboroughians living in the Queen City will stage!

What To-day Means To You.

JULY 2nd

"Cancer."

If July 2nd is your birthday, the best hours for you on this day are from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m., and from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. The danger periods are from 5 a.m. to 7 a.m., and from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m.

The planetary aspects on this date are not uplifting, and only the most confirmed optimist will be able to keep up his faith in the atmosphere of discouragement and hopelessness. A change for the better may be anticipated during the early evening, at which time, life will assume a more roseate color.

The child born July 2nd will possess a very active mind. It will be a quick, but not a deep student, and will be able to pluck a great many mental treasures, without much effort. It will not have either the patience or perseverance to seek those things which are only obtained through continued effort.

You were born with considerable initiative, and it is to this characteristic, more than to anything else, that you owe most of your success in life. It places you in file for those rewards which are only given to those who can go ahead on their own. When others hang back, waiting to be told what to do, and how, you find your job and proceed unaided.

You dislike supervision or taking dictation, and you only do things well when left to your own individual resources—you are a "washout" as anybody else's tool. Your self-confidence is not a product of conceit. It is justified by your exceptional ability. You are not willing to take a back seat, and why should you? You have a perfect right to the orchestra seats in life, as you are able to fill all the requirements. It can be said of you, however, that you never try to "air" your brilliancy, nor in any way try to lord it over your mental inferiors.

You know how to win modestly and you can also do a much more difficult thing—lose graciously. Failures only put you on your mettle, and they are never the cause of permanent discouragement. There are many roads to success, and you are afraid of none of them.

OLD BOY OCCUPIES PULPIT AT ALL SAINTS'

Rev. Canon Sawers Delivers Inspiring Address Sunday Night.

Rev. Canon Sawers, M.A., rector of St. Matthew's Church, Toronto, delivered an inspiring sermon to the congregation of All Saints' Church on Sunday evening. He is a former Peterborough boy having been at one time a choir boy at St. John's Church and later the rector of St. Luke's Church.

"What is life?" was the question on which he based his sermon. In opening his address on this subject he stated his belief that the only place in which that question can be answered is in the greatest book in the world, the Bible. Several outstanding ideas are borne out in a study of the Bible with this question in mind, of which the ephemeral nature of life is the most outstanding, was the thought expressed by the speaker.

Continuing, he outlined five divisions under which the Bible answers the question, "What is life."

"Life is first of all a battle," he stated. It is a continual struggle. Secondarily, we are weaving a pattern." Rev. Sawers brought out his point by referring to Mexican weavers, which he had witnessed at work making patterned fabrics. The object of their work was suspended in such a manner that they were unable to see the pattern which they are weaving. Their work appeared a maze of tangled threads to them but to one on the other side, the pattern was visible. "In the same way, we are weaving a pattern," was the contention of the speaker. "It is not revealed to us until the after life," he declared.

In opening his sermon, Rev. Canon Sawers spoke of his days spent in Peterborough, saying that he was one of the first scholars in All Saints' Sunday School. He stated that lessons he learned then still remain with him. He congratulated the present congregation on the progress made in the parish since his last visit to Peterborough.

Rev. J. D. Paterson, the rector, extended a hearty welcome to visitors. Lessons were read by Herbert A. Mowat, of Toronto, the general secretary of the Canadian Brotherhood of St. Andrew. Mr. Mowat is an old All Saints' boy here for the Old Home Week celebration.

The Tule Marsh Murder

By NANCY BARR MAVITY

Story of a Missing Actress and the Taxing of Wits to Explain Her Fate

THE STORY THUS FAR:

Don Ellsworth's wife, formerly the famous actress Sheila O'Shay, disappears, leaving no trace. Dr. Cavanaugh, the great criminal psychologist, learns that their married life has been very unhappy.

Peter Piper a reporter on the Herald tries to see Dr. Cavanaugh. Instead he meets Barbara Cavanaugh, the attractive daughter, and finds that she was engaged to Don Ellsworth before his marriage.

An unidentified body is found in the tule marsh outside the city. It is burned beyond recognition, but from a small patch of scalp, Dr. Cavanaugh identifies it as the body of Sheila O'Shay. Barbara faints when she hears him tell this to Peter. Peter, already half in love with her, is convinced that she knows something about the murder and his instinct is to protect her.

Mrs. Kane, Sheila O'Shay's waiting woman is arrested and admits that her mistress forced Don Ellsworth to marry her by threateniug a breach of promise suit.

Peter and Dr. Cavanaugh search the boudoir of the murdered woman. The breach of promise papers have been taken, but they find a threatening letter signed "David Orme". Peter goes on the trail of Orme. He runs him down at an automobile tourists' camp. Orme is an irresponsible, temperamental, artistic and refined man who does not seem capable of committing murder. Finding Orme so helpless, Peter asks Dr. Cavanaugh to help him out at the trial.

CHAPTER 33.

"My grief!" Peter's hands were flung out in a gesture of despair, strewing ashes from his half-burned cigarette headlessly over the doctor's Pekin rug. "That jig's up then. The jury won't understand half of what you say, but they'll believe all of it, because you say it. I wish you'd waited for me," he added reproachfully.

Dr. Cavanaugh wafted three smoke rings into space before he answered.

"I did," he said at last.

"You—did?"

"That is, I waited for everybody. I am quite willing to examine Orme—his case, from what I hear, presents some interesting features, but I am not willing to go into it with any more definite bias than I would have if he had come as a patient to my office.

"The district attorney was rather heated in his comments on the 'insanity dodge' as the current fashion among criminals of the present day—but after all, we are not sure that Orme is a criminal, any more than we are sure that he is insane. By the way, how did he take the transformation of his captor into a good Samaritan?"

Peter leaned back in his chair and lighted a fresh cigarette from the stub of its predecessor.

"The police were'nt allowing any newspaper interviews. They didn't want to run the risk of having Orme start something with the reporters before he'd talked to them. But my position was what you might call strategic."

"You have a way of putting yourself in strategic positions," Dr. Cavanaugh commented with a briefly quizzical glance in Peter's direction.

"Oh, it was nothing to crow about," Peter hastened to assure him. "Only you see, if I'd chosen to play myself up in the 'Herald' as the intrepid amateur who discovered and caught the man who wrote that threat, before the police even got rightly started to search for him, it would have made them look rather silly.

"It wasn't like that, of course, really. I just happened to light on a tip and followed it; and capturing Orme was about as heroic as picking up somebody's strayed kitten. But they couldn't help seeing the possibilities of the other treatment—when they were tactfully pointed out. I merely turned Orme over to the sheriff and beat it back to the office—giving the police due credit for the arrest in a story that was on the street before the other papers even knew that anybody's been arrested. That little scoop was quite enough for me, in the way of glory, But naturally, when I suggested that I'd like a word with my pet tame prisoner, rules or no rules—well, I got it."

"Naturally," Dr. Cavanaugh agreed so suavely that Peter looked up with sharp scrutiny; but the doctor was intent on extinguishing the burning end of his cigar against the side of the ash tray. "And what did he say?" he asked without looking up.

"I told him I'd see that he had a lawyer, and he said, 'That's very kind of you, but you oughtn't to bother,' just as if I'd offered to call a taxi. I honestly do think there's something queer about him—nobody has any call to be as philosophical as all that, when he's about to be tried for murder."

"But then, you see, you've never been on trial for murder—perhaps you are not in a position to judge," Dr. Cavanaugh reminded him.

"Well, I think I'd at least manage to be interested." Orme's indifference to the fate of his own neck was becoming a point of acute grievance to Peter, despite his part in bringing that neck within reach of danger. "He didn't look up at all until I told him we were going to try to get you to come and see him. Then he stared, like somebody that's just been shaken awake But all he said was, 'Oh! I've heard of him.' Still, the idea seemed to impress him. Whatever you decide about him, I'm glad you're going. You haven't got any advance theory—I suppose—in other words, a hunch?"

"If I had, it wouldn't be worth expressing. Still, your impressions are helpful; they give us a little background—a starting point. And I may be your witness, not the district attorney's, after all, you know."

"Whoop-ee! I'll bet two doughnuts you will!" Peter beamed. "By the way, I found out how he withstood all that grilling by the detectives. 'I simply withdraw my attention,' he said. 'I just turn my back mentally, and trace out the development of some theme in music—a Beethoven symphony, for instance.' Just 'withdraws his attention,' mind you, while they take turns trying to sweat a confession out of him! Can you beat it?"

"It's a good method," Dr. Cavanaugh said. "But it will never become widely popular because most criminals don't know enough about Beethoven symphonies. Do you realize that you've uncovered the very first objective fact we've been able to gather about David Orme? Anybody who can lose himself in mentally following an elaborate musical composition while being subjected to the third degree must take music with more than ordinary seriousness—must, in fact, be a real musician."

"Suffering cats!" ejaculated Peter. That's so—and he's lost two fingers of his hand," he added in a tone of awed sympathy. "No wonder he looks as if he'd been thrown into a world where he can't find his way. Music was his own particular world, and he was pitched out of it, without money, deprived of the only way he knew of making any—cast into the society of auto camp bums——"

"Still," Dr. Cavanaugh brought him down to earth, "that hardly explains why he should forthwith walk out and murder a rich and rather famous lady of the stage."

"No," Peter assented glumly, "it doesn't."

"You have gifts, young man, but you're too easily disheartened—too mercurial. In the language of psychiatry, if you ever went off your balance, it would be the maniac-depressive type of disorder.II

"Great Scott!" Peter looked very blank indeed.

Dr. Cavanaugh leaned back and abandoned himself to one of his rare and hearty laughs. It seemed to shake itself upward from his toes, rumbled mightily in his diaphragm, and ended in a series of throaty chortles that left his eyes suffused with tears.

"You see how easy it is to terrify mere normal folk," he chuckled, All insanity is only an intensification of normal impulses, so you needn't worry."

Peter still eyed the doctor with some discomfort.

"I shouldn't have teased you." Dr. Cavanaugh's face had resumed its customary gravity. "You must have noticed one thing: Though Orme was making every conscious effort not to give himself away in any particular, he did reveal something significant without knowing it. All of us are likely to do the same thing. He hasn't given us a motive for killing Sheila O'Shay, but we have at least the suggestion that he has come to regard the loss of life—his own or anybody else's—as a mere scratch compared with something else which he has already lost."

REV. A. J. LANGFORD PREACHES AT TRINITY

Former Minister Conducts Sunday Services in United Church

Rev. A. J. Langford of Toronto, who was for four years pastor of Trinity United church, conducted the services in Trinity Sunday morning and evening. The morning service was celebrated as Flower Sunday, the children of the Sunday school each brought a bouquet of flowers and laid it on the chancel in front of the church.

The Conservatory Symphony Orchestra under Rupert Gliddon added to the impressiveness of the service and solos "Home Sweet Home," by M. Park, and "O, Lord be Merciful," by S. Kennett were ably rendered, while the choir was heard to advantage in the anthem "And the Glory of the Lord." Miss Mabel Clarry, was director of the music.

MANY TAKE PART COMMUNITY DANCE

Rain Does Not Deter Revellers From Dancing—Gather in C.N.R. Freight Sheds.

The light-footed devotees of the dance were not a bit down-hearted last night when a light rain that proved to be quite constant, also deterred them from dancing on the pavement, as scheduled, in the block extending from Aylmer to King streets, where strings of colored lights overhead were in preparation for the event. It only deterred them to a certain extent at that, for under a mild shower, a few score couples went through the mazes of several square dances, much to their own apparent amusement and the gratification of the onlookers, who sheltered under the eaves of the C. N. R. freight sheds, and gathered in the doorways of the Aylmer street buildings.

Later, through the kindness of C.N. R. officials, the crowd moved into the big freight sheds, and danced there—about five hundred of them—to the strains of excellent music furnished by Sammy Perkins and his New Yorkers, a five piece orchestra that arrived yesterday from an Oshawa engagement

UNITED STATES PAIR DROPS TENNIS SETS

Mrs. C. G. McIlquham and Miss Ermyntrude Harvey Winners in Women's' Doubles.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 2. — (C..) — Mrs. C. G. McIlquham and Miss Ermyntrude Harvey of Great Britain, sprang a surprise on the tennis fans at Wimbledon to-day when they trimmed the favored United States' team of Helen Wills and Edith Cross, 6-4, 8-10, 6-3, in the women's doubles in the famous Wimbledon tennis championship. The highly rated United States pair were the favorites for the title and their defeat was a decided upset.

CHICAGO WHEAT.

CHICAGO, Ills., July 2 (Canadian Press).—Stimulated by unexpectedly steep upturns in Liverpool quotations and by continued rainless weather north-west, Chicago wheat prices scored material early gains to-day. The Liverpool advance was ascribed to realization of irreparable damage to the American wheat crop and to expectance of lower estimates of yields. Opening ¾ to 1 5-8 up, Chicago wheat rose still higher and then re-acted somewhat. Corn, oats and provisions were also firmer, with corn starting 3-8 to ¾ higher and afterward keeping near to the initial range.

LIST GAINS DESPITE HIGH MONEY RATES

U. S. Steel Common and Some Railroad Shares Reach New High Record.

FIND SUPPLY SCARCE.

Heavy Currency Demand Predicts Little Hope of Lower Call Rates.

NEW YORK, N.Y., July 2 (By Stanley W. Prenosil, Associated Press Financial Editor). — Fifteen per ent. call money which sent a speculative chill through the stock market yesterday and brought about a reaction in prices, made its appearance again to-day, but the market moved steadily upward, with U. S. Steel Common and at least a dozen of the leading railroad shares touching new high records for the year. There were several soft spots scattered throughout the list, particularly in the public utility group. But they had little influence on the general market.

Call money was scarce at 15 per cent. for a time, and the rate threatened to go higher, but New York banks freely supplied funds when the stringency became apparent, and the rate was held at the level. Out of town banks began calling loans from the outset, but these funds were replaced. Ther was no change in the time money. Commercial paper or bankers' acceptances, with the July 4 holiday invariably creating heavy currency demands and more stock purchase "rights" expiring this week, there appears to be little hope of any marked easing of call money rates before next week.

TORONTO HOP IS DELAYED

Adverse Weather Conditions Necesitates Late Departure of Planes For Local Airport.

CONDUCTING TOURS.

The ceremony of carrying greetings from Mayor McBride, of Toronto to the city of Peterborough by air that was planned for Saturday afternoon was disrupted by bad flying conditions when the planes which were to carry the Peterborough representatives, were forced to remain on the ground at the Leaside Airport, Toronto, till a late hour in the day.

Hundreds of local people awaited the arrival of the flight at the landing field on Millburn's farm on the Chemong road until late in the afternoon, but returned to the city disappointed when the machines failed to arrive.

James Dutton, president of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, and vice-chairman of the Old Home Week and Centennial celebration with Art. Blade, of the Horse Race committee arrived at the Toronto air field at 2.30 to make the journey to Peterborough, but a strong, gusty wind prevented the take-off. Captain Earl Hand, in charge of the flight, after consulting the weather reports, decided that there would be a slight risk in taking his men to a field with which they were unfamiliar, so waited for a diminishing of the wind which the weather reports promised later in the afternoon. He stated that, although for flying between large airports the conditions were ideal, the wind happened to be in the wrong direction to be suitable for using the airport at Peterborough.

Take Off at 6 O'clock.

At six o'clock the passengers embarked and the planes took off, the squad consisting of three De Haviland Gypsy Moths and one Buhl Airsedan, a five-passenger cabin machine. Captain Hand decided to leave the other large cabin plane in Toronto on account of the adverse winds. About forty minutes later the machines hove over Peterborough, and after circling around the city in formation, made a landing at the Old Home Week Airport.

Captain Hand, in conversation with the Examiner, declared that a city the size of Peterborough should have a regular airport of a size to permit the largest planes to land and take off without the necessity of waiting for winds in the right direction. It will be only a matter of time, he believes, until such a field will be a necessity. At present the large mail planes that ply between Montreal and Toronto are unable to extend the service to Peterborough on account of this lack of a suitable airport.

Mr. Dutton and Mr. Blade for whom the journey on Saturday was the first air flight, expressed great satisfaction with regard to air as a method of travel. They were impressed by the fact that a business man on such a trip as they made Saturday afternoon no longer has to spend several hours of valuable time on the journey when forty minutes will suffice. It is their opinion that the time when Peterborough will have to provide a regulation airport is not far away.

Pilots on the flight were: Captain Early Hand, N. Irwin, W. T. Wrath- and C. W. Dingwall. They are remaining at the Old Home Week Airport during this week conducting sight-seeing flights and taxi service. Captain Hand states that more planes will be brought down during the week if the interest of local people is great enough to demand it.

BLOOMINGDALE BROTHERS INC.

Bloomingdale Brothers, Inc., began originally as a partnership in 1872. It operates a large department store in New York at a point near one of the main arteries leading to Long Island suburbs. It carries a diversified line of general merchandise. It is expanding and has acquired a store site in Newark. In addition to its main store it has warehouses and other buildings in Manhattan and Long Island City. The store employs about 2,500 persons. It has a plan to enlarge its present store gradually so as not to interfere with business.

While sales were smaller than in 1926 or 1927, the net income for the 53 weeks ended February 2, 1929, showed a gain of 74 per cent. over the year 1927 and 10 per cent. over 1926. Net in 1928 was $1,384,986. The drop in 1927 was attributed to a more drastic credit policy in the piano department which reduced sales.

There is no funded debt. Capital stock outstanding includes $3,340,000 in 7 per cent. cumulative preferred shares of $100 par value and 300,000 shares of no par common. The preferred has no voting power unless 4 quarterly dividends are in arrears in which case it has exclusive voting power for the election of directors. An initial dividend was paid on the preferred in May, 1926, and has been maintained quarterly since. No dividends have been paid on the common.

As to February 2, 1929, total current assets were $10,451,565, current liabilities amounted to $1,118,841 and net working capital was $9,332,724. Book value applicable to the common was $23.02 a share.

PRICE STEADY TORONTO CURB

OIL SECTION FIRM.

TORONTO, July 2. (C..) — Despite a general dullness which prevailed at the Toronto stock exchange to-day, there was no evidence of liquidation, and price changes were not sufficient to indicate any particular trend.

There were a number of marked changes, however, but these were confined to stocks for which there was little demand. International Nickel in very light trading, got down as low as 50 1-2 and then clung to the 52.00 mark, off 1-2 point; Hamilton Bridge came out 2 1-4 points higher at 54 3-4 while Brazil gained 1 1-2 to 59, and Standard steel appeared with a 2 1-2 point appreciation at 86 1-4.

With the exception of Canadian, which slumped 2 1-2 points to 45 1-2, oils were generally firm. Abitibi Power and Paper eased a further 1 3-4 points, to 41 1-2, while Massey Harris sold off 1 1-2 to 58 and Canadian Industrial Alcohol dipped 1 to 24.

STANDARD LIST IS IRREGULAR

Prices Sag After Indicating Strong Tone in Opening Session.

TORONTO, Ont., July 2 (Canadian Press).—A slackening in activity resulted in a mixed price trend on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day, after prices had indicated a strong tone at the opening. Stocks with little trading, however, were mostly unchanged and even the more active ones recorded mostly minor differences. Newbec and Big Missouri were responsible for a good deal of the morning's total sales, the former easing one to 55, while Big Missouri shot up 7 points to 1.45. Noranda came out strongly at 59.50, and then re-acted to 58.90, up 15 cents, while Lake Shore weakened 25 to 26.25, as did Pend Oreille to 6.50 and Chemical Research to 18.75. Sudbury Basin and Sherritt Gordon were both firmer, but Falconbridge Nickel eased fractionally to 13.05.

NEWBEC.

TORONTO, Ont. July 2. — Newbec Mines has some ore in the cross-cut on the 250-foot level, but it is not yet into main zone, according to a Toronto mining man who visited the mine on Sunday and reached Toronto this morning. The situation is considered very favorable, with probabilities that the main ore body may be on its dip at any moment. Specimens of ore brought back show clean, massive chalcopyrite.

of two days' activities which the Old Boys in Toronto so generously sponsored in their desire to co-operate in making this week a success that will be long remembered.

After a sumptuous banquet, in the new Collegiate gymnasium, speeches and toasts were proposed by various members of the Toronto delegation replied to by the Peteroorough men. G. B. Van Blaricom, editor of Canada Lumberman and a former editor of The Peterborough Review, acted as toastmaster.

In a word of welcome, Frank O'Connor remarked on the new Collegiate Institute, saying that education must go ahead and the men who were behind this work must have devoted many hours to the task. "I hope that they continue to make the sacrifices that they must have made in the past in order to carry on the good work that has been accomplished in the past.

"It is a great pleasure," he continued ,"to return and see the boys again and to experience the fraternal feeling of the city. It is a real pleasure to see the faces of an old and honest friendship again.

"You in Peterborough are graced with a n enthusiastic Mayor and good city officials who have worked together untiringly to make this week a success and to make the city grow. It could not grow as it has if the principle of 'Let George do it' had been followed.

"I wish to express my thanks to the Toronto Committee who have made this visit a success so far, especially Will O'Brien, Wilfred Stratton, and Charles Sisson. I also wish to express my appreciation to the press, The Examiner of Peterborough, for the publicity which could not be duplicated or purchased now at any price.

"All I have to say is to express my heartfelt thanks, and I am glad to be here to-day."

G. B. Van Blaricom then proposed in a very fitting and brief manner a toast to the King and then to the City of Peterborough, to which Mayor Roland Denne of the city replied, by thanking the Old Home Week Committee in Peterborough for their co-operation. "Not one man fell down on the job," he said. "That is one reason why this has been such a great success. It was team work that accomplished the outcome, and it could not have been done in any other manner."

"We have in Peterborough," continued the Mayor, a real town and it is just as good as ever, if not a little better. I wish to thank the men who have gone ahead of us who made Peterboro'ugh, those with the foresight and vision to build up such a city.

"We wish to thank you from Toronto for the trouble and the expense that you have incurred to make this visit and I also wish to thank the president, Frank O'Connor, for all his work.

"The work of the press is to be greatly appreciated and to them also the thanks of all is extended. R. M. Glover is a dynamo in himself and he has a real staff grouped around him.

"I wish to thank you, gentlemen, on behalf of the citizens for your wonderful showing. It is good to have you back.

Wreath Laid On Memorial.

The laying of a wreath by Frank O'Connor on the memorial was a most impressive ceremony.

The returning folk paused long enough in their celebration to remember the boys of their native town who fought for freedom and laid down their lives for their beloved country in the World War.

Four sentries with bowed heads and inverted rifles stood on guard at the monument. The music of the Toronto Transportation Band under the leadership of Bandmaster Haywood was in accordance with the ceremony and added much to the impressiveness of the laying of the wreath.

Mr. O'Connor placed the beautiful wreath bearing the inscription, "Peterborough-Toronto," on the base of the monument. After laying the wreath he stood for a moment with bared head and in reverent attitude, in memory of those who laid down their lives for the City of Peterborough.

Welcomed By Mayor.

Immediately after the ceremony, Mayor Roland Denne, of Peterborough, spoke a few words of welcome, saying, "It is a pleasure and a privilege to welcome you home, because we wanted you home. Your heart is in Peterborough, and you have brought honor to us by organizing the Toronto Old Boys, one hundred per cent. strong. It is also a pleasure to realize that the Old Boys and Girls who have left Peterborough have made good in Toronto, and not only in your city but all over the continent from coast to coast.

James Dutton, president of the Chamber of Commerce, stated that he would like to echo the words of Mayor Denne and extended a very cordial welcome to the Toronto contingent.

Frank O'Connor, president of the Toronto delegation, replied to the speakers on behalf of the returning Peterborough folk, and said: "On behalf of Toronto I am glad to accept the warm words of welcome and we are a million times glad to be here to-day. The reception as we entered the city simply overwhelmed us, and I know that our stay will be most enjoyable."

BRITISH ARMY TRADITION OF TROOPING THE COLORS IS ABLY DEMONSTRATED

Toronto Scottish Perform Ceremony Before Grandstand.

GRIM REMINDER OF BATTLES

Name of Many Battles of the Great War is Embazined on Flag.

A ceremony most sacred to the soldiers of every regiment and a scene that is enacted, once only each year, the Trooping of the Colors, by the 75th Battalion, or the Toronto Scottish, was witnessed in front of the grand stand on Monday afternoon by several thousand Peterborough citizens and Old Home Boys and Girls.

British Tradition.

Time honored, the trooping of the colors is a ceremony most sacred in the British Army. In days not so long ago when fighting was more in the open, the colors were carried through every battle and shot to pieces in most cases.

During the late war all colors were placed in cathedrals or churches for safe keeping.

The Toronto Scottish colors were kept in Westminster Abbey, and when trooped yesterday, were a grim reminder of the battles the colors went through, even though only in spirit, and of the 1,082 officers and men left behind in Flanders Fields.

The name of every battle is emblazoned on the colors, and include Ypres, Somme, Vimy Ridge, Hill 70, Arras, Lens, Paschendaele, Amiens, Droucourt Line and Valliencens.

Four hundred pairs of feet trampled, kilts swirled, the band played, and officers paraded as the boys of the Scottish drew up on the green in front of the stand, amid rounds of applause from the crowd.

Turn Over Battalion.

Lieutenant Stewart Pepler, Adjutant, gave the order to fix bayonets and turned the parade over to the commanding officer, Colonel W. H. Watson. On the O.C.'s command, "Troop," the band struck up "Comin' thru the Rye," and, headed by Drum Major Smith, paraded in slow time in front of the troops which were drawn up in file. The return march was made in quick time, to "The Drummer's Call" by the Pipe Band. During this time the colors, held by Sergeant Watson, were being guarded on the left flank of the battalion by two non-commissioned officers. The escort of the colors composed of number one guard, led by Regimental Sergeant-Major Baker, then went forward and received the colors.

Escort Parades Back.

Following the receiving of the colors, the escort, preceded by both brass and pipe bands, paraded back through the ranks, to the slow time of "Comin' thru the Rye." This gave every man a chance of seeing the colors, which he is only afforded once a year.

Color-Bearer Lieutenant Earl Douglas received and had charge of the regiment's most sacred possession during the rest of the all too short "Trooping."

To draw to a close the grand spectacle, the entire regiment, preceded by the Pipe Band, marched past the grand stand, while Colonel C. C. Harbottle, C.M.G., D.S.O., Bar, late commander of the 75th Battalion, now commanding the 4th Division, took the salute, standing at attention until the Battalion had marched the colors off the parade ground with a general salute.

Probably the only one feature of the entire proceedings that failed to make the show a grand success was the lack of courtesy shown by a large number of citizens who, when the colors were trooped, failed to rise or bare their heads. As this ceremony is the soldiers' most sacred, only the boys in the files and their officers can tell just how deeply this unthinking act of an otherwise appreciative and enthusiastic audience, cut.

"Auto polo" is the name of a decidedly novel and very vivid game that had its inception here on Saturday evening, during the program presented at the Exhibition Grounds. It is filled with swift and vivid action and the performers do some spectacular stunts that display a high degree of skill and agility.

The other items on the program, which was witnessed from the grandstand by over five hundred people, were the historic ceremonial parade which is called "Trooping the Colors", and another innovation to the city, in a whistling platoon in which the military commands are carried out by means of whistles alone. Both were received with intent appreciation.

The better part of an hour was occupied by the impressive and dignified ceremony entitled "Trooping the Colors," which the four hundred men of the Toronto Scottish Regiment carried out in splendid style.

On the green sod, they stood in their suits of Burns tartan, in the "hodden grey" of their famous regiment, the bandsmen with their long shoulder shawls and be-ribboned bonnets, their kilted skirts and heavy sporrans, their leather bandoliers and white spats. The effect of these twinkling white clad legs under the bare knees, as they advanced and retreated in the slow and swift movements of the historic parade, was quite extraordinary under the half light of the gathering night.

The ancient tunes of Bonnie Scotland ring out in the skirling pipes and the rat-tat of the drums, as the men advance and retreat. "Blue Bonnets over the Border", the Regimental March, "The Hundred Pipers", "Highland Laddie" and "Comin' Thro' the Rye", send their clarion call to the Gaelic blood in the onlookers.

The whistling squad or platoon which presented the final military item on the program, was a snappy affair in a novelty that included a rifle arm drill, marching and forming squares, firing a volley and also firing the "feu de joie' 'or "fire of joy", with each man firing in succession, forming into columns sections and finally saluting with the rifle and breaking a tiny flag at the same time, on each gun.

Auto Polo.

The game of auto polo, presented by members of the Hoblin Hippodrome Circus, playing here all this week, was a decided novelty and also a decided dust-raiser. The little skeleton cars, darting about the track at breakneck speed, colliding with each at the slightest opportunity, resembling spiders in their swift motion, were in and out of the game at furious intervals. The quartette of cars, two in silver finish and two in gilt, underwent numerous casulties which left them out of the game frequently, but waiting spares took their places and the vivid affair progressed to a vivacious finish.

Two little red flags at one end and two white flags at the other end, of the track, mark the limits of the game. Equipped with a driver and with a player who bears a mallet in his hand, the cars bear down on the large white ball which is tossed into the arena by an attendant.

This attendent, by the way, a chocolate-visaged small gentleman with a white suit and red cap, had a startling time of it. Bearing a white and red flag in either hand, he escaped with his life in a great many instances, as the frantic tiny cars bore down upon him, or piled up on each other in a fashion that sent them head over heels in a somersault and tossed their drivers out onto the roadway.

There is plenty of life and action about this game.

Between presentations by the Regiment, the amplifier in front of the grandstand provided plenty of music of old-time, popular flavor and some of the newest hits of the "Talkies." The official fun-maker of the evening, the gentleman with the cow-breakfast hat and large spectacles who provides amusement for the street crowds these days, whistled tunefully in accord with the strains of "The Broadway Melody" and the crowd listened appreciatively.

Overhead, a busy aeroplane buzzed back and forth.

ARCHDEACON SCOTT PREACHES AT ST. JOHN'S

Padre of First Canadian Contingent Delivers Fine Sermons

An inspiring sermon was delivered to a large congregation by the Venerable Archdeacon Scott in St. John's Church, Sunday morning. Taking for his text, "And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost", (Acts 2:3), the Archdeacon drew a vivid picture of the twelve Apostles on that first day of Penticost when the mystical power of the Holy Spirit descended upon them in the Upper Room.

"That occasion," said the Archdeacon, "was the birth of the Christian Church." He then traced the growth of Christianity through the years to A. D. 313 when Emperor Constantine embraced the faith of Christ and Christianity was proclaimed to the world. "This was a direct result of that first descending of the Spirit to the Apostles," the speaker continued, "and the consumation of God's promise to the Apostles that right would prevail and that victory would follow the adherence to the word of Christ. We cannot weigh or measure the power of the Holy Spirit but we can feel its presence illuminating our hearts and ordering our lives. Our outlook on life is affected; our conscience is quickened and our sense of brotherhood with our fellow men is strengthened by the presence of the Holy Spirit."

In conclusion, the Archdeacon urged his hearers to obey that voice of the Spirit in their daily lives and in their hearts and so fully consumate God's promise of a heavenly kingdom.

Rev. Dr. Blagrave, in charge of the service, extended a very warm welcome to all the old members and friends of the congregation who were present. Rev. Canon Baynes-Reid, rector of St. John's Church, Toronto, who is down with the Toronto Scottish and Mr. Parker of Ottawa, a former lay-reader of the parish, also assisted in the service.

One hundred thousand enumerators will be required to take the United States census of 1930.

Millbrook

(Examiner Correspondent)

MILLBROOK, July 2.—The large and hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dawson, Seventh Line, Cavan, was the scene of a very enjoyable social gathering on Tuesday evening, when approximately one hundred of their relatives and neighbors assembled for the purpose of honoring the fifteenth anniversary of their wedding day.

The event was a complete surprise for the host and hostess, who were guests for the tea hour at the home of his brother, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Dawson, Millbrook. This arrangement was previously made with the committee in charge, so that, upon their return, they found the self-invited guests already in possession. With characteristic courtesy and hospitality warm greetings were extended by Mr. and Mrs. Dawson, and all entered heartily into the spirt of good fellowship and whole-hearted enjoyment which featured the evening throughout.

Midway in the good time being enjoyed, the bride and groom of fifteen years' standing were given seats centrally located among their guests, when I. W. Larmer, who acted as chairman, called upon James Roddy, an intimate friend of the family, who read the following address, Mr. and Mrs. Dawson being presented with a 'shower' of gifts, including two handsomely upholstered, wicker chairs, a wicker fernery fully furnished with three daintily-fronded ferns; an oak service tray, carrying one dozen cut glass tumblers; a cut glass sandwich plate, with attached handle; one half dozen silver dessert spoons, and three silver table spoons, in the Cromwell pattern; while, as a happy climax, little Audrey Lewers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lewers, brought in a beautiful sheaf of orchids, shyly offering the fragrant gift to Mrs. Dawson.

Taken by surprise, Mr. Dawson made suitable acknowledgement on behalf of his wife and himself, the guests insisting, however, that Mrs. Dawson also add her own message of gratitude, the demand being indicative of popularity and esteem, and all joined in singing, "For They Are Jolly, Good Fellows".

Others who spoke briefly in addition to the chairman, were: F. Lewers; O. Pue; W. Moncrief (Omemee), and James Roddy.

Music throughout the evening was furnished by the Byam orchestra, with Kenneth Skitch as an additional member, and recitations were contributed by Ruby Cunningham and Audrey Larmer.

The committee in charge looked after the service of refreshments, a feature of the supper hour being the bride's insertion of the knife in the handsomely-decorated wedding-cake, which was also among the gifts brought by friends, and which properly had a place in the 'shower'.

Games and dancing rounded out happily a most enjoyable occasion, and it was long past midnight when the final good-nights were said, accompanied by reiterated good wishes for 'many returns of the day.'

An interesting program of instrumental music was presented in the hall of the Conservatory of Music on Friday evening, when pupils of Miss Elizabeth M. Webber were heard in a piano recital. MAMMOTH PARADE UNSURPASSED IN BRILLIANCE AND ORIGINALITY DRAWS MUCH HEARTY APPLAUSE lens Company graphically displayed the transformation of the sheep's wool to the best modern cloth, a real woolly ram and the turning spools and spindles of a model loom effectively showed this.

A beautifully conceived and executed irea was that of A. Brown. It was one of the most striking in the whole parade. An old-fashioned lady in a large flounced and fubelowed dress. The large dress covered every portion of the car.

The American float, conceived by a number of American residents in the city, brought out the ideal of close friendship and harmony existing between United States and Great Britain. It was built on the lines of a cruiser, draped in red, white and blue streamers. On the bridge stood two youths dressed as Uncle Sam and John Bull, who shook hands in the warm clasp of friendship.

Cottage Scene.

A scene in the cottage of the first hardy settlers was depicted by the float of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E. The group of ladies, dressed in typical costumes of the period one hundred years ago, were busily engaged on the homily duties of that day, knitting, spinning and quilting.

One of the most striking floats in the industrial section was that of the Canadian Packing Company. This disclosed a flower garden gaily bedecked with roses in profusion. In the centre was a marble-effected bower in which sat four beautifully gowned and pretty girls.

A beautiful pagoda shaped float, cunningly and exquisitely draped in green and yellow streamers, surmounted in the front by a Jersey cow, made a most effective display for the De Laval Company.

The Beatty float, in two sections, displayed the old and new way of ridding clothes of dirt. In the old was a man-like girl who energetically rubbed women's unmentionables on the washboard, while in the other section one of the modern Beatty washers hummed and purred, doing the washing in jig time.

Big Ben Kept Time in Parade.

A giant Big Ben that kept perfect time during the whole parade was the novel contribution to the industrial section of the Westclox Company. This massive clock was a perfect replica of the new type of Bens both in color and shape. It was bedecked with flowers and drew much comment from the crowds.

Goodfellow & Welch, plumbers, had a float which showed the wide change from the old and new in the way of sanitary conveniences.

Pleasingly draped in colored drapers, the Toronto Savings and Loan Company's float was most tastefully carried out as a flower garden. A giant urn in the centre carried out the effect.

The Examiner float carried one back to scenes as pictured in that happy land of the East, Japan. Japanese flowers in gay colors were arrayed upon it and three girls dressed in the Japanese national costume with vari-colored parasols completed the picture.

A float with a punch was that of the Raybestos Company, which displayed a grave-stone and grave-yard. Inscribed on the stone were these sad words, "Brother Neglect, death caused by faulty brakes."

Harkening out of the past from the old days of the hot box-stove and old iron to the modern day of comfort and electrical appliances was the float of the Canadian General Electric Company in two sections, displaying the old and new. The comfort of the modern displayed a modern electric range, toaster, carpet sweeper, etc.

A Most Beautiful Float.

Richard Hall's float, showing the Lavender Line, was one of the most beautiful in the whole parade. The whole color scheme of this large float was carried out in lavender and white. A group of girls becomingly gowned sat on a throne-like dais beneath a canopy of flowers, and flowers decked the whole float.

"Bear in mind" was the slogan of Barries' Limited float. In the hot sun it gave a cooling picture of scenes in the polar regions of ice and snow. The entire float showed a large cake of glistening ice on which stood in life-like posture three white Polar bears. At the base several white skins of Polar bears added to its appearance.

A comic presentation of original conception was that of Walter Howden, "The African Old Boys' Reunion of December 32, 1936." The car was hidden beneath straw, which was cleverly woven on its entire surface, even to the wheels. Six negroes, two in the native costume with straw Hula skirts, wearing giant nose-rings and with evil looking spears, two jazz singers and two porters, walked beside the car, driven by a dusky brother.

Furs from the trapper to the finished product were displayed in the fetch float. This fur store had arranged a very artistic setting of a trapper on his line and traps, with a birch canoe laden with muskrat skins and furs, while the other half of the float was composed of three beautiful girls wearing the finished product.

Mooseheart Represented.

Contented aged folks were depicted in the Loyal Order of Moose float, such folks as are seen in Moosehaven, for the old, in Florida. Their two little girls, having just graduated from Mooseheart School in Indiana, are there in graduation costume, while nearby are the three figures, which are the Moose standards—Truth, Purity and Progress. The whole setting is against an attractive background of beautiful pink, white and yellow roses.

Thoughts of when streams used to turn the water-mill and the creaking old water-wheel are recalled by the William Hamilton Company float. Then one turns to the modern day, when the whirring turbine and the efficiency of modern machinery is needed, as the model of a modern mill passes by in contrast to the old days.

Queen of Service.

What would one do without the telephone? The service that covers the globe and affords opportunities that are golden to the business man. A huge globe surmounted by a golden telephone in the Bell system float tells of this, while the "Queen of Service" in her royal robes dwells in her shell throne on the float. The blue and white color scheme of the float was carried out in a very attractive manner.

The hardships that our pioneer ancestors suffered when chased by wild animals that surrounded their camp were brought back to memory when the Teco Stores float passed by. Here two campers had pitched their camp for the night and their guide was busy preparing the evening meal, while the forest dwellers roamed around the outskirts of the camp. Like every true hunter or pioneer, they had their pet bear that seemed to give them no end of trouble by always getting into mischief. The special horses and attendants that were sent to Peterborough for the occasion drew a great deal of admiration from the spectators.

How one loves an old-fashioned garden! Memories of gladiolas and hollyhocks in full bloom, with borders of thyme, were recalled when the float of the Peterborough Typographical Union No. 248 passed by. Two people who lived many years ago were depicted as sitting in just such surroundings, while the little tots played among the flower-beds. Canopies of roses and swans all made this a very effective presentation.

It is a great relief to get away from the hot dirty stove, the woodbox, smoking coal-oil lamp and the untidy kitchen of old! When contrasted to the spic and span modern home made cosy with an electric fireplace and phonograph, as depicted in the Peterborough Utilities float, the modern home-dweller wonders how the old people put up with such hardships and were happy.

Fine Postoffice Float.

What would the country be without a postal service that connects all the countries of the world with our native land? The postoffice float is one that tells in picture form the service rendered by this department. A huge globe surmounted by an airplane shows the extent which the postal service is carried on, and the model aircraft shows the more modern means of carrying the letters, to assure service that is fast and certain. Letters symbolic of the postal work and postoffice slogans giving advice to the user of the mail are shown on the exhibit, while bunting of many colors make the whole story bright and cheerful. The postoffice float was one of the most suggestive in the parade, carrying with it a real message of advice.

The two service organizations of Rotary and Kiwanis combined to make a float, which was carried out in the colors of the clubs, while the emblems of the two organizations were scattered on the presentation. The Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes were also on the float, showing that both of the clubs were international in their scope.

Had Striking Appearance.

It is usually thought that rugs were merely meant for service in the home, but when a decorative scheme such as the Brinton Carpet Company displayed on their float was seen it was heartily agreed by all the spectators that wonders can be wrought. A huge map of Canada, carried out in rug designs, surrounded by huge pillars in descending order, all of rugs, gave this presentation a striking appearance. The exhibit was drawn by four horses with attendants in livery that blended with the unusual scheme that was used in the decorations.

Rochester old boys, from the Flower City, gave expression to their joy at being home in a very beautiful float that represented a flower garden, typical of their adopted city. Pillars surmounted by baskets of flowers and a huge central flower-bed, surrounded by cool green grass on which were placed two reclining chairs occupied by beautiful girls, completed a very striking effect.

The happy boy of to-day is the man of to-morrow, and those who attend the Y.M.C.A. in their younger years are sure to learn the value of play as well as work. A Y.M.C.A. building was the float of this organization, through the windows of which the boys could be seen listening to the merry strains of a phonograph and playing games with their leader.

Millers galore, in spic and span working clothes, pure white in color, upheld the slogan, "A miller makes a good husband." This was portrayed by the Peterborough Cereal Company in the parade. Bags of flour and pictures of the mill testified as to the company, while pretty girls on the side of the car were typical of the delight that one received from the use of such a fine product.

Britannia was the outstanding figure in the Quaker Oats float. However, the float was chiefly made up of huge Quaker Oats boxes and the ruler of the seas held sway from her elevated throne.

Thoughts were turned back two years when the float of the Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham passed by. The year of Confederation and the Confederation celebration was displayed by nine beautiful girls, representing the Provinces of Canada as one big unit, under the guiding hand of Britannia, who holds sway over the fair Dominion. The colors of red, white and blue all gave this float a very patriotic atmosphere. This was one of the outstanding historical floats of the parade.

The blue triangle, the symbol of the Young Women's Christian Association, was featured in the float of the Y.W.C.A. The Canadian girl who is all around proficient in sport, was depicted by a beautiful young lady standing in front of a huge blue triangle. Carried out in pure white, interspersed by the blue triangles, this exhibit was very effective.

Douro Well Represented.

Douro sent an aggregation with decorated cars that attracted a lot of attention. The first car was laden to the mudguards and bore the slogan, "Welcome all you old boys." An old buggy with old-timers carried the sign, "In those good old days." The Douro old boys were on a car, which depicted them as architects of that township. An old Ford body mounted on a buggy bore the sign, "Keeping up with the Jonses," while an old Irish gig, carrying an old couple, recalled the days "When you and I were young, Maggie." Another was a couple in a buggy, with numerous babies in arms, bearing the motto, "Holding our own." The final car bore the age old advice, "There is no place like home."

Two men and a girl mounted on beautiful and well kept horses and a wire wheel surrey driven by a lady was the presentation of the Humane Society. The horses, well cared for and looked after, showed how the work of this society is progressing. It was a very suggestive exhibit.

Stock's bakery had a very attractive float, representing Peter Pan bread. A huge loaf of this dainty food was displayed as the central portion of the exhibit, while four Peter Pans were around the loaf and added to the suggestiveness of the demonstration. Yellow, green and red bunting made this a pretty exhibit, which was completed by the four very smart horses which drew the float.

Evangeline Pale Dry Ginger Ale contributed to the color of the parade with a brightly decorated car, as did the Singer Sewing Machine Company. A model house with Sur-Kote shingles attracted a great deal of attention as it passed along the line, and four "whoopee" girls called the attention of the crowd to a huge can of Koloral paint on another float.

MOTHERS now learn value of MAGNESIA

Because it is so helpful in keeping babies and children healthy and happy, every mother should know about Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

This harmless, almost tasteless preparation is most effective in relieving those symptoms of babies and children generally caused by souring food in the little digestive tract, such as sour-belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, colic. As a mild laxative, it acts gently, but certainly, to open the little bowels in constipation, colds, children's diseases.

A teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia does the work of half a pint of lime water in neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding, and preventing hard curds. Its many uses for mother and child are fully explained in the interesting book, "Useful Information." It will be sent you, FREE. Write The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., Windsor, Ont.

In buying, be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 50 years.

The average American home uses artificial light seven hours per day during December and only two and one-half hours during the month of June.

TRIBUTE IS PAID 717 MEN WHO GAVE LIVES IN GREAT WAR

most to perfection of detail. Only one disappointment arose in the absence of General Currie, who was Commander-in-Chief of the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

His illness was generally known, and his indisposition was not entirely unexpected. But the veterans of the war had a fine old pal with them for the occasion in their padre of the first division, and subsequently Director of Chaplain Service, the manly and lovable Canon F. G. Scott, now Archdeacon Scott, C.M.G., D.S.O., of Quebec.

The dignified Bishop Sweeny, of Toronto, assisted in the dedication and the presence of the Staff Officers of this military district lent color and military sanction to the proceedings. The City and County Councils were fully represented, and at length the memorial was formally unveiled by Archdeacon Scott and presented by W. G. Morrow and George A. Macdonald, as representatives of the Peterborough Citizens' Memorial Committee, to the City and County of Peterborough in their chief deputies Mayor Roland Denne and Warden Frank Breckenridge.

Eloquence in Brevity.

This culminating moment of the ceremony was eloquently brief and impressive. In presenting the memorial, Mr. Morrow said: "On behalf of the Peterborough Citizens' Memorial Committee, we hereby grant and deliver to you this memorial to be held in perpetuity by the corporation you represent upon trust that you protect and preserve the same as a lasting memorial to the blood of brave men shed on behalf of us all."

And Mayor Denne, replying for the City and County, said: "On behalf of the municipalities we represent we gratefully accept the gift of this memorial to be held in perpetuity upon trust that it shall be properly protected and preserved as a sacred memento of those it commemorates."

Thrilling Music.

The concluding incidents of music were also thrilling in their military associations and significance, the rolling of the drums of the Toronto Scottish pipe band, the sounding of the Last Post with the great crowd all facing the west in memory of the soldiers' farewell, then the playing of the lament, "The Flowers of the Forest," on the pipes; Handel's "Dead March" in Saul by the massed bands of the Toronto Scottish, the 57th Rangers and the Salvation Army. Again the roll of drums and the blowing of Reveille by the Toronto buglers, with the citizens and soldiers, men and women all turned toward the east in hope of resurrection. And finally "God Save the King," followed by the placing of flowers on the memorial.

The committee in charge of the unveiling events won the warmest congratulations upon the fine appropriateness and unity of the progress, its adequacy and at the same time its restraint of sentiment. By the use of the microphone and broadcasting instruments every word from the platform was clearly heard throughout the park. And the people filled it from street to street, and on the west almost to the line of the Armouries entrance.

Disposition of Park.

On the north side the Toronto Scottish and the Lindsay battalion were placed, with the Male Voice choir nearby, on the west of the memorial were the massed bands, on the east the next of kin, and on the south side the Canadian Legion whose members did themselves justice Sunday by a large turnout. Deeply fringing these preferred positions, which included places for the members of the city and county councils, were thousands of citizens and visitors, a scene that will endure in Peterborough's history as long as the bronze and granite remain in Central Park.

Only the names of the dead, etched into the monument, could suggest the emotions of that silent company toward this expression of Peterborough's pride and affection and gratitude, but their surviving comrades by their large numbers gave a hint of answering approval that was one of the most striking affirmations of an afternoon Peterborough shall never forget, because it inscribed a felicitous finis to Peterborough's records of the war and incidentally marked the turning of a new country, and lastly the re-union of a community whose fidelity to its friends and kinsmen is as deep as its loyalty to the land of their common birth.

Message to Men.

This message of Sir Arthur Currie was read by Colonel C. H. Ackerman, president of Provincial Command of the Canadian Legion. It carried a clear-ringing call to the veterans to carry on in the same brave spirit that carried triumphantly through the mud and terror of Flander's Fields.

General Currie's message to his men was as follows:

"I deeply appreciate the opportunity of sending through a word of greeting to the veterans gathered in Peterborough. I only wish that it were possible for me to be with you and to grasp again the hands of those whose friendship and devoted efforts must ever remain a treasured memory and a cherished inspiration.

"In all such gatherings as this it is borne in upon us that the principles which guided our corps must ever remain a potent force in the life of our homeland. In those happy but arduous days of war you asked nothing for yourselves; you sought only the privilege of serving your country, and of protecting it from the foes that threatened it. Your only reward was the consciousness of duty well done, and of tasks heroically performed.

How Can We Serve?

"The question we are asking to-day is: 'How can we serve our country best, and perpetuate in Canada the ideals for which we fought and for which our comrades died?' In our war efforts, before making our final attack we first decided on our objective. On that final objective there was no doubt, no difference of opinion, no hesitancy, no fear. It was clear and decisive. And failure to reach it was never thought of. To that objective we move forward with confidence in our own power, and that confidence was never once misplaced.

"In these times of peace, we should be just as clear and decisive as we were in war days in our aims, in what we are trying or hoping to do, and in our ways and mean of doing it. It seems to me that there are three or four paramount objectives to which we should all devote our efforts. There is the perpetuation of the principles and ways of life which characterized our units during the war. Friendship and comradeship were there, with a warmth and glow never known before. The old code of the sea, 'Stand by,' was part of the day's work; not something extraordinary or unusual. Comrade 'stood by' comrade, even unto death, and lives were gladly laid down for friends. Unselfishness was a way of life in the Canadian Corps. Mutual trust, the bearing of one another's burdens, fidelity and loyalty to each other, to the unit, and to the Corps, these were the supports by which men lived in the brightest and darkest hours. There was never a time in the history of our country when these qualities of character, these ways of life were so urgently needed as now. This is our first objective. Let us move forward to it with confidence and hope.

Welfare of Disabled.

"Then there is another objective—the welfare of our disabled comrades, of our comrades who find life difficult, of wives and children of the men who died. Adequate care for disabled comrades, and for the dependents of those who fell, adequate employment for those whose careers were broken by four or five years of war—that is an objective from which there must be no retreat.

"One of the great problems of our time in the unity of the British Commonwealth of Nations. During the war we were an Empire unit, cooperating under one flag and one leader, in the cause for which the Empire has always stood, the cause of freedom and equal rights for all. We retained our identity, it is true, as the Canadian Corps, but we were proud to be associated with our kindred from other Dominions in one vast organization of Empire. That organization still exists; it did not vanish with the war; it still calls for the clasp of hands across the sea; it still demands the interpretation of one part to another, and it still requires unity of effort in its forward march to world service.

"Perhaps the greatest contribution to the peace of the world can be made by the veteran of Canada to the peace of the world. We hape the unequalled advantage of having known and experienced the meaning of war. We are not speaking from theories only, but from actual practice. We know its horrors and its heart-aches; its privations and its wounds and tears; we know its days and nights of arduous anxiety and cruel toil, and we know its aftermath and all the sorrows that followed in its train. We speak then of peace, with the authority of service.

"There is a new spirit abroad. Once upon a time we thought we were fighting in a war to end war. That thought strengthened us and inspired us and carried us through our most bitter trials. But after the Armistice, for a time at lease, we felt that the fates had played with us, and that our dream was not to come true. Bitterness and hate and mad competition and arrogance seemed still to be present with even greater force. We were inclined perhaps to be pessimistic, or to smile with cynicism at what we thought the pranks of time. But to-day we have no place for pessimism. There is a whisper of peace throughout all the world. Towards that objective we must confidently set our faces. Our dreams of the war to end war must soon come true.

Keep Faith With Dead.

"Last of all, we must keep faith with our absent comrades who sleep in honored graves. They gave their young lives gladly that the country of their birth or adoption might be a better place in which to live, a more fortunate land in which the children of the future might first see the light of day. This is the real meaning of their struggle and their death—that the thing we call justice might not vanish from the earth but might ever be present in our country and in our world.

"Canada is a better land, a land of ordered freedom, of equality, of opportunity, of justice to all, because of their struggle and their death, and it is only by directing all our energies to keeping it so that we can keep faith with them and perpetuate their spirit. From the undiscovered country their voices still call us to service for Canada, the homeland which will ever keep them in remembrance."

Darling of Canadian Army.

Archdeacon F. G. Scott, C.M.G., D.S.O., M.A., D.C.L., LL.D., director of chaplain service, was introduced in glowing terms by Judge Huycke, as "the darling of the Canadian Army."

"I cannot express the emotion that wells up at this time," said Mr Scott. It is unfortunate that Sir Arthur Currie is not here as he is loved by all, and is one of the greatest men in Canada, with the interest of all the soldiers at heart.

"It has been the proudest moment in my life to unveil a memorial with seven hundred and seventeen names inscribed on it. When I heard the acceptance by your mayor I wondered if the people of Peterborough realized just what it meant.

"This common ground has become the most sacred spot in the city, and a place of vision. This monument will become an inspiration for years to come where many a young man in time of stress will look and read the names inscribed and will receive visions to inspire him, urging him to imitate the deeds of those who are remembered here.

"People will come here and see what courage can do—the voice of those who have passed are still calling to us and for us to trust in God."

Visions of France.

"It is a great trust that the mayor has taken on the city. This place is a place of vision—as I look around and see my old comrades with their medals and marks left by wounds, and see before me the people who have been bereaved by the war, visions of France appear before me.

"Valcartier, with its hills tinted with the colors of autumn, appears—the memory of that camp never fails me. The flotilla of ships that bore the sons of Canada across the sea, carrying men to war who were untried in battle, men who were to meet the greatest armies in the world, the armies of Europe.

"I can remember the thrill that went through the hearts of men banded together. We did not know then, the dreary years of war that were to follow, the hardships and bereavements that were the outcome of it all.

"We did not know then and hardly know now the privileges that were won for Canada by those men who gathered to the flag in the time of stress.

"The great vision of the second Battles of Ypres when the gas was turned on at St. Julien, the troops drawn up in the moonlight for the charge when at the end of the salient German flares threw an uncanny glow over the field, the rattle of rifles and the gallant charge appears before me.

"I remember Hills 60 and 70 the Somme, Regina Trench—what a terrible toll was taken at the Somme, but the victory was indirectly as the Germans did not break through the French Line and capture Verdun."

People Fail to Realize.

"At Vimy Ridge, one of the most strategic points on a nine mile front, and at Hill 70 the people at home did not realize what was taking place there. The gas flooded the artillery, the infantry were crying for the guns to get into action, but the gunner were hindered by their masks, so to give support to the men up in front they threw off the masks and faced the gas, dying and struggling to keep the guns in action.

"Amiens, where the Canadians broke through, Canal Du Nord, and Cambrai all appear before me as wonderful events and examples of courage, discipline and sacrifice which were performed and that will never be known.

"All the magnificent deeds of the war are brought near by this moment—those scenes of Canadian triumph and glory. It has brought our dear ones who have been lost very near.

"You people of Peterborough, the names of your boys are here, though their frames may be broken in France and remain there, they are not dead—their souls live on. They still live on as an inspiration in your home and private life. Surely they have left us a lesson of such noble quality that we shall not lose them.

Recall Heroic Sacrifice.

Colonel Henry C. Osborne, C.M.G., of the Canadian and Imperial War Graves Commission, in an eloquent address, described the deep significance of the Memorial. "It is meant to recall the heroic and sacrificing part played by this city and county in the titanic struggle of the greatest of all wars. The memory of a noble company of men who have passed out of sight, laying down their lives in the accomplishment of their high vision of duty."

Continuing, Colonel Osborne said that it was significant and fitting that the Memorial should be dedicated on the eve of July 1, and at a time when Canada's place in the British Empire is being more clearly understood.

In reviewing Peterborough's readiness to serve in the hour of our country's need, he said: "Ever since the first settlers landed at this place, now called Peterborough, their patriotism and willingness to aid their country has been evidenced. Peterborough men have been in every battle for Canada since its founding. In 1837-38 a company of Peterborough volunteers participated, in 1860, in 1885 and again in the Boer War a Peterborough company was in the Canadian contingent. During the Great War a Peterborough man was to be found in every division of the Canadian forces.

"A company of Peterborough men, No. 1 Company of the Second Battalion, took one of the most dangerous machine gun nests in the whole war. They were led by Major G. W. Bennett, and he with many of his men laid down their lives in the brave charge.

Name Is Carried On.

"It is only fitting that the great fighting unit, the Second Battalion, has become the Peterborough Rangers, the city's own regiment, and has the privilege of carrying on its regimental colors the names of all the great battles of the war, beginning at the Second Battle of Ypres, 1915.

That the citizens of this city are patriotic in service is no vain boast, as this afternoon will testify. The men rallied to the call, and this memorial, though silent, will speak to men's hearts of the valiant sacrifice of those 717 men whose names appear upon its base."

Colonel Powell, in complimenting the city on erecting such a unique memorial, said that it had been conceived by the greatest Canadian sculptor, Walter S. Alward, who is now working on the great Canadian memorial at Vimy Ridge.

"The noble chivalric figure seen here which opposes himself with such calm serenity to the brute force of the enemy, exemplifies the spirit of the men in whose memory it is erected. Canada is enriched by such a memorial, and the men with the foresight to plan it are to be congratulated. It symbolizes the moral over material and brute force."

Colonel Powell described the cemeteries on the battlefields of France in which rest so many Canadian heroes. In all, there are 14,188 British war cemeteries throughout the world. These cemeteries are permanently and artistically arranged. Their uniformity of stone crosses, row on row, flowers in beds and borders, green turf like that of old England, is striking. Somehow the perfect order of these soldiers' graves makes one think that some day they will arise and go marching off again in platoons and regiments. Nothing disturbs the noble rest of these brave men except the sweet song of the birds.

Feeling of Exaltation.

"One has not the feeling of sadness when entering one of these cemeteries," continued Colonel Osborne. "Rather it is a feeling of exaltation for the great deeds of these men. We judge the men of ancient times by the relics that we dig up. When many centuries have passed away these cemeteries will remain and speak to other races of the kind of men who lived and died in our day. What an epic this memorial will disclose, what a chapter in the world's history, telling of 717 men from this city and its neighborhood who willingly marched away and died for their country. I am proud to stand in front of this memorial, and the pride of my British heritage thrills me when I look upon it and think of what it represents.

"The deeds of these men are linking the Empire closer together. Deeds which signify suffering mutually accepted, sufferance mutually endured to bind the Empire in closer bonds."

Among those present on the stand at the base of the Memorial, besides the speakers, were: Sergeant Bayfield, V.C., of Pontypool; Brigadier Anderson, General Officer Commanding Military District No. 3; Colonel R. Vanderwater, of Belleville; Colonel L. T. McLaughlin, C.M.G., D.S.O., V.D., O. C. the Second Battalion in France; also present were Captain E. Nicholls, Regimental-Sergeant-Major of the Second Battalion; Colonel T. D. Boggs, of Cobourg; Lieutenant-Colonel Everett Birdsall.

Bridgenorth

BRIDGENORTH, July 2 (Examiner Correspondence).—The regular meeting of the Gilmour Memorial Mission Circle was held at the home of Russel Darling of Wallace's Point on Wednesday.

The topic for the meeting was "Leper Work," Mrs. J. Mann, Mrs. A. McGregor, and Miss B. Young being in charge of the meeting.

Splendid papers were given on the progress of the work among lepers in India.

A duet was beautifully given by Misses Lillian McGregor and Marion Blewett.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served to about sixty guests.

OLD SONGS

THAT PIECE OF SONG, That old and antique song we heard, last night.

MONEY

(Contributed by 'Virgie')

Money is a solid thing,
Metal to the slave or King,
Stuffed into a purse it lies,
Cold to foolish and to wise,
Bits of paper, bits of gold,
Any filthy hand can hold.

Money cannot serve you well
If the other will not sell,
Money isn't good to eat,
It is neither sour nor sweet,
If you tumble in the sea,
Gold the same as lead would be.

Money, rightly understood
Can be very bad or good,
It can be the flowers you sent
To a sick and lonely friend,
Or the drug which sends its slave
To an early, barren grave.

Money talks, and plainly tells
Who in wisdom here excells,
As we use it all can see
What it is we wish to be,
Everything we pause to buy
Shows men where our fancies lie.

If you'd know a foe or friend
Watch him when he goes to spend,
You can read his thoughts and know
All his motives high or low,
You can sound the life he lives
By the things he buys and gives.
You can read his thoughts to spend,

"If Those Lips Could Only Speak"

Also goes under the name of, "It's Only a Beautiful Picture in a Beautiful Golden Frame."

He stood in a beautiful mansion,
Surrounded by riches untold;
He gazed at a beautiful picture,
That hung in a frame of gold.
'Twas a picture of a lady
So beautiful, young and fair,
To the life-like features
He murmured in sad despair:

Chorus

"If those lips could only speak,
If those eyes could only see,
If those beautiful golden tresses
Were there in reality-
Could I only take your hand
As I did when you took my name,
But it's only a beautiful picture,
In a beautiful golden frame."

With all his great powers, and his riches
He knows he can never replace
One thing in the mansion that's absent.
His wife's tender smiling face;
And each time he sees her picture
These same words he'll always say—
"All my wealth I would freely forfeit,
And toil for you night and day.

He sat there and gazed at the painting,
Then slumbered, forgetting all pain,
And there in that mansion, in fancy,
She stood by his side again;
Then his lips they softly murmured
The name of his once sweet bride;
With his eyes fixed on the picture
He awoke from his dream and cried.

That Body of Yours

(By Jas. W. Barton, M.D.)

SEA OR TRAIN SICKNESS.

Perhaps you are one of those unfortunate individuals who suffer with train or seasickness.

As you know there is always a certain amount of hurry or worry about taking a trip. Sometimes there is severe emotional disturbances at the thought of separation from loved ones and you begin your trip with a record of irregularity of sleep and meals for a few days previous to departure.

Now in addition to the theory that the balancing canals in the ear are the important factor in seasickness there is also the theory that it is due to an acidosis.

You'll remember that an acidosis means that the blood, while not acid, is more nearly approaching the acid condition than it should be. Its alkaline reserve has been lowered.

Investigators now claim and submit real proof that hurry, worry, excitement, and the roll of the boat, drive too much sugar out of the tissues into the blood, and the blood, for a time at least, is too rich in sugar. This passes away, and the blood and the tissues themselves, are actually starved for sugar.

This means acidosis, with the nausea and vomiting that we find in acidosis at any time.

Dr. A. H. Oriel, working on this idea, gave glucose (starch sugar) to more than 1000 patients (three level teaspoonfuls), with gratifying results.

"If passengers can be persuaded to eat plenty of fruit, and vegetables and to avoid fats, they are never violently sick. The common mistake is to do without food which leads to exhaustion of the blycogen or sugar reserve of the body."

There are of course the other points to remember about taking the trip.

There should be as much regularity about foor and sleep prior to sailing as is humanly possible.

And when regular exercise has not been a daily habit, which naturally establishes a daily intestinal habit, then an abundance of fruit should be eaten for a few days before sailing.

These little suggestions from one with the experience of Dr. Oriel, should be worth much to everybody, who must or wishes to travel.

LADY IS FEELING MORE SPRY SINCE SHE USES HUSKY

"That Achy, Sick, Tired Out Feeling Has Disappeared and I'm at Last Enjoying Real Health," She Says.

MRS. MARY MANN

"I feel more spry and younger since I've been using Husky," said Mrs. Mary Mann, of 169 Johns St., Toronto, when she recently told of how this wonderful medicine is making life a different thing for her.

"I was feeling so sick with my stomach and ached so much," she said, "that I didn't have any strength or energy at all before I used Husky. My digestion was very poor and most anything I ate hurt my stomach and gave me heartburn. My limbs and back were very sore and achy and I felt tired and worn out all the time.

"My daughter was taking Husky and it was making her feel so good that I decided to begin using it, too. I have only been using it a short time, but I have received great benefits already. I haven't had any more heartburn or trouble with my stomach since I first started Husky, and I have so much better appetite. That soreness and aching in my limbs and back have been relieved, too, and I have so much more energy. I am just a lot spryer. From what Husky has done for me and for my daughter, I feel like I can recommend it in the highest terms."

Begin using Husky to-day and note how soon your food tastes better, sleep is more sound and restful and you feel stronger and better in every way. It is marvelous what this medicine will do for you in a short time. Husky can always be obtained at Bond's Drug Store here and at other good drug stores everywhere.

PLAID MILLINERY

A sheer plaid straw hat, in gay greens, tans and red, topped a plaid georgette frock in the same design at a recent fashion show and made a tremendous hit. Plaid hats come in felt too

The Whatnot

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion (Copyright)

O'er the cool green meadows sripping,
Through the fields of daisies white,
Down the oozy fern banks slipping,
Wander I in sheer delight.

Silvery fish are ever darting
Up and down the laughing brook,
Pale anemones unstarting
From each damp and shady nook.

Through the trees the sunis peeping,
Flecking gold upon the flowers,
In a nest three birds are sleeping,
Mother guards in treetop towers.

Through the trees the sun is peeping,
Lured by treasures bought of gold,
Here in sylvan dells are squandered
Wealth undreamed of, peace untold.

This is the poem which some genius chose to introduce the Old Home Week official program. Many columns might have been written without telling half the spirit of Old Home Week.

The ends of the earth have called Peterborough's sons and daughters. They have wandered through the wide world, lured by treasures of adventure, wealth, and health. They have achieved, these boys and girls; they have progressed to the heights of their professions and businesses; they have made good .....

• • • • • • •

And now they have come home!

• • • • • • •

The old town has changed, in keeping with the march of progress..... but it is still HOME.....it has the same spirit of friendliness that made happy the youth of these Old Boys and Girls.

• • • • • • •

Links with the past have not been altogether lost here, as in other places, because around Peterborough there is land enough to permit expansion without the tearing down of earlier structures.

• • • • • • •

Every Old Boy and Girl will find many buildings and scenes to recall youthful days—the earlier churches, for instance, retain their old appearance, though greatly improved and enlarged.

• • • • • • •

Old factory buildings are still standing, but in several cases abandoned because the river-side location is no longer necessary since the advent of electric power.

• • • • • •

The parks have been beautified, and some have changed their names, but they are still the places where the boys and girls of former years frolicked—Quarry Park is now Jackson Park; East Inverlea is now Nicholls Oval; Central Park is now Confederation Square.

• • • • • •

Thousands have come back to renew acquaintances in scenes once so familiar, and they are meeting other thousands who have remained here through the years.

• • • • • •

It is a happy reunion, because here are home, and friendship, and memories that will renew the spirit of youth in every one of us.

The imposing motorcade from Toronto today is just an instance of the interest these old boys and girls have in their old home town; and to them the crowds that welcomed them must have given evidence of the abiding interest Peterborough stay-at-homes have in former neighbors.

• • • • • •

With them the Torontonians brought lots of pep. It is a great day, and, as was expected, the visitors are doing a great share toward making it successful.

• • • • • •

Tomorrow evening will see one of the banner events of Old Home Week—the dance at the Armories. Those who like to "strut their stuff" on the dance floor will be given ample opportunity in a magnificent setting, while others who like less strenuous entertainment on these warm evenings will be well entertained by the special features.

• • • • • •

Other events of interest tomorrow are the boat trips, which will certainly recall old times when the Otonabee was a bustling waterway. To much of the boating pleasures the advent of the automobile put an end—but tomorrow the Otonabee will come back into its own for the day.

The program for Old Home Week has been very complete up to now, and there is promise of many pleasant days to come.

Among the most pleasant recollections of this reunion will linger the handclasps of reunited friends, and the interest taken in reminiscences of the old days.

Whatever other memories in life may fade, this week will be long remembered by all of us.

ENGINEERS UNVEIL TABLET TO MEMORY OF R. B. ROGERS

Memory of Superintendent of Construction in Building Lift Lock is Honored.

SON IS PRESENT

"In memory of Richard Birdsall Rogers C. E.; M. E. I. C.; O. L. S.; who was superintendent of the Trent Canal during the construction of the Lift Lock, born in Peterborough, January 16, 1857, and died Oct. 2, 1927." This inscription is placed on a tablet unveiled Sunday at the Lift Locks, by the Peterborough Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada and dedicated by them to this famous Peterborough engineer.

William Cruthers, A. M. E. I. C., immediate past president of the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Engineering Institute conducted the ceremony. "A few months ago", he said, "It was suggested to the Peterborough Engineers to place a tablet in remembrance of the man who was superintending engineer of the Lift Lock at the time of its construction. This afternoon the Engineering institute has the honor of dedicating this tablet to the late Richard Birdsall Rogers. We are fortunate in having with us Harry G. Rogers a son of Mr. R. B. Rogers who will unveil the tablet," said Mr. Cruthers.

Mr. Rogers then pulled aside the Union Jack which concealed the tablet, revealing a handsome bronze memorial, placed on the south side of the arch at the western end of the structure.

The Rev. G. J. Bousfield of St. Luke's Church spoke with great pleasure at having been called upon to assist in a ceremony to commemorate the work of a man with whom he had been acquainted for so many years and who was always a devoted servant of Jesus Christ. "Prayers of dedication were then offered by Mr. Bousfield.

P. P. West M. E. C. of the Peterborough branch of Engineers was the last speaker: "The creed of the Engineering institute is—"To facilitate the acquirement and interchange of professional knowledge among its members, to promote their professional interests, to encourage original research, to develop and maintain high standards in the engineering profession and to enhance the usefulness of the profession to the public.

"It is because we of the Peterborough Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada," continued the speaker, "Feel that R. B. Rogers lived up to this high standard in his profession that we erected this memorial tablet."

Mr. Westbye then spoke in glowing terms of the late Mr. Rogers and in closing said, "We also respected the late R. B. Rogers both as a man and as a friend."

Sugar consumption in the United States at present is about 110 pounds per capita annually.

SIMPLICITY CHARACTERIZES SUMMER FROCK IN PRINTED GEORGETTE.

(By Nicole Groult.)

Simplicity of design characterizes this summer frock in printed georgette. The chief interest lies in the skirt. I have made it withtwofull tiers which unite in a long drapery in back. The soft girdle ends in a small bow knot in front, and is placed at the higher waistline.

OUR HIGHER STANDARD OF LIVING

Perhaps no talk is so intriguing as travel talk. It lifts us all out of the humdrum and breaks the monotony of talk. When women talk of travel it is not always of frocks, or bargains in silk, or Venetian glass. More often it is of the sadder things—the inferiority of the women one sees—the burdens of their lives which are absent from ours.

Why is this so? How have we learned to live so comfortably? Why do they cook in an open fire place? Why do they lug great iron pots and draw huge buckets of water from an outside well? Why do they cling to wooden shoes and wash their clothing in the open streams? Why do their children die like flies? How have we come to reach or maintain such a comfortable and healthy standard of living?

Personally, I attribute it candidly to our Daily Newspapers and our constant advertising. First, the news of the modern invention; then the news of where and how it may be bought; then the mass sales to the consumer, and the guarantee of the factory that there will be steady work for its artisans.

Such is the story of the electric light, the modern washer, modern plumbing, the thousand things that ease and beautify life.

WEDDING BELLS

CLANCY—O'NEILL.

DOWNEYVILLE, July 2 (Examiner Correspondence).—St. Luke's Church, Downeyville, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, when Mary, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Neill, was united in holy bonds of matrimony to Patrick, elder son of Mr. Edward Clancy and the late Mrs. Clancy of Oshawa. Rev. Father Galvin officiated.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of the Wedding March, played by Miss Loretto Harrington, presented a picture of loveliness in a gown of white georgette over silk crepe-de-chene, with a wreath of orange blossoms and embroidered silk net veil, white kid shoes and hose to match. She carried a bouquet of bridal roses and maiden hair fern, and her only ornament was the groom's gift, a green gold wrist watch.

The bride was attended by her sister, Helen, of Oshawa, who wore a becoming gown of coral georgette over crepe de chene, with a silk mohair hat to match, white hose and shoes. She wore an onyx dinner ring, the gift of the groom, and carried a bouquet of sweet peas and maiden-hair fern. The groom was assisted by his brother Daniel, of Oshawa. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, where many lovely gifts were received.

In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Clancy left on a motor trip to Rochester, N.Y., and on their return will reside at 154 Roxboro Avenue, Oshawa. Besides the immediate relatives at the reception were Mr. and Mrs. William Deegan, of Chicago, Ill., uncle and aunt of the bride.

FASHION'S APRON

Fashion puts her apron on again, not for work but for chic. A printed taffeta frock has an apron front panel outlined in wide lace.

World consumption of all raw sugar ending August 30, 1928, was 28,375,000 short tons.

BANDS PRESENT FIUE CONCERT

Victoria Park is Crowded to Hear Program of Rangers and Toronto Scottish.

NUMBERS ENCORED

Several thousand people attended the band concert held in Victoria Park on Sunday evening, when the program was given by the combined bands of the Toronto Scottish Regiment, Lieut. W. J. Holden conducting, and the band of the Peterborough Rangers, conducted by Lieut. W. H. Peryer. The two leaders took turns in conducting and the entertainment received the appreciative applause of the monster crowd. Assembled on the steps of the Park, sitting or standing on the lawns and terraced hillside, or strolling over the green sward, the listeners enjoyed a splendid program of band music, in which solo instruments took the parts in turn, the trumpet, cornet, clarinet, flute and piccolo providing the embroidery for the various numbers.

A piccolo solo by Bandsman F. Anderson of the Scottish Regiment was heartily encored and repeated. Entitled "L'oiseau du Bois," the "little brother of the flute," as the piccolo is called, simulated in treble, clear, piping music, the musical voice of the bird in the wood.

The selection, entitled "Songs from the Old Folks," was a popular rendition. It included many of the old favorites in "The Mocking Bird," "The Old Oaken Bucket," "Old Black Joe," "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," "Sweet and Low," and "Just Before the Battle, Mother."

The other numbers on the program were well selected and attractively rendered. Opening with "O Canada," the entertainment by the combined bands included the popular march, "Colonel Bogey"; the overture, "Overon"; a concert waltz, "Destiny"; a selection entitled "Reminiscences of Sullivan" that brought to its hearers some of the choice bits from the Gilbert and Sullivan operas; the well-known overture, "Poet and Peasant"; a stirring patrol, "Wee MacGregor," and a concluding sacred hymn, "Abide With Me."

It is sometimes wise to buy Term Insurance

For a young married man with a good job and bright prospects, but with a limited income, the cheapest insurance to buy is Term Insurance.

It will provide his family, for a period of years, with the greatest amount of real protection at the lowest cost. Then, as his financial position improves, he can convert the policy into a limited pay life, straight life, endowment or some other form of permanent insurance.

By so doing he doesn't lose what he has paid in, but enjoys the full benefits of the utmost protection at the time when his family needs it most and when his salary is limited.

We shall be pleased to issue Convertible Term Insurance to those needing it. If you are interested, write for our pamphlet entitled "The Danger of Delay". Address:

Mary Astor and the delightful bathroom inspired by this lovely Fox star

"Lovely smooth skin has quickest appeal" says Richard Wallace, director for FIRST NATIONAL

SATIN-SMOOTH SKIN—its lovely youthful freshness touches the heart! What a thrill grips the audience when the close-up reveals the exquisite perfection of the screen star's skin.

Knowing this, motion picture directors make flawless "studio skin" a first essential, for the screen star must constantly face the glaring close-up lights.

Nine out of ten screen stars use Lux Toilet Soap. There are in Hollywood 451 important actresses, including all stars. 442 of these use this fragrant, white soap.

All the great film studios have made it the official soap in their dressing rooms.

"A smooth skin—'studio skin'—is one of the most important assets a screen star has. Like every girl and even more than most girls I have to guard my skin. I always use Lux Toilet Soap—it's lovely."

Mary Astor

MARIE PREVOST is considered one of the most alluring stars in Hollywood. "To find a soap as delightful as the choice soaps you get in Paris, is a joy. Lux Toilet Soap gives my skin such satiny smoothness," says this fascinating star.

RUTH TAYLOR, the famous little blonde who stars with Paramount, says . . . "I guard my skin as my most priceless possession and know that Lux Toilet Soap treats it gently."

NINE out of ten screen stars use it for satin-smooth skin.

Housekeeping is made more enticing by wearing attractive aprons in interesting colors schemes in keeping with one's background. It's difficult to believe what an effect it has on one's feelings, until you've tried it, and how it simplifies kitchen chores.

Just picture yourself in this adorable apron of printed cotton broadcloth in orchid shade printed in deeper tone of same color with piping in purple to give striking contrast, shown in Style No. 3328. The tiers are just the smartest idea imaginable, and to make it more interesting, it is so simple to make. Why it cuts all in one piece, with suspender straps, sash, and pocket only extra parts. The tiers are made by cutting through perforated lines and gathering lower edges and attaching to upper edges, following guide for same. It comes in small, medium and large sizes and takes only 1½ yards of 36-inch material with 12 yards of binding to make it in the medium size.

One of the smartest and most serviceable aprons in slender straight styling is seen in Design No. 3344, that cuts entirely in 2 piece with strap extensions that cross at centre-back and button. Cut it out and bind edges and stitch pocket in place and it's finished. Think of it! And the most remarkable thing about it, is that it only takes 2 yards of 36-inch material in the medium size. Cuts in sizes, small medium and large. It is sketched in modernistic print in cotton broadcloth in nile green with deeper tone binding.

A practical apron in checked gingham is seen in Style No. 2531. You've only to gather the slashed edges at each side of front and join them to the upper edges and sew braid or binding around edges, and it's finished, for it cuts all in one piece. It comes in small, medium and large size and takes but 2 yards of 36-inch material with 7 yards of binding in the medium size.

Each of the above patterns cost 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred). Our patterns are made by the leading Fashion Designer of New York City and are guaranteed to fit perfectly.

FORMER SEPARATE SCHOOL PUPIL GATHER IN ST. PETER'S SCHOOL

Michael McDonald, Former Principal, Is One of Those Present.

FIFTY ATTEND.

T. J. Begley, of Lindsay, Is Oldest Pupil of Old Separate School.

Former Separate School Old Boys of the Murray Street and St. Peter's School gathered at the latter institution this morning, together with a number of the old ex-teachers, who renewed their youth and recalled many pleasing incidents of their school days.

Prominent among the former teachers were Michael McDonald, former principal of St. Peter's School, 23 years ago; Mrs. J. E. Sullivan, Miss M. A. O'Connel, of Peterborough, and others.

The classes were not called to order, but an informal gathering took place and a most interesting reunion was held. A very pleasing feature of the gathering was the presence of Mrs. M. O'Brien, widow of the late M. J. O'Brien, who was a former principal of the old Murray Street School. About fifty former pupils were present, and included in this number were T. J. Begley, of Lindsay, James Dillon, a former member of The Examiner staff, but now editor of two newspapers in Alberta. Mr. Dillon is at present a resident of Hardisty, Alberta, and is an old Ashburnham boy. John O'Brien, of Toronto, son of the former principal of Murray Street Separate School, was also present. Mr Begley was the oldest pupil of the old Separate School present at the gathering. He entered the school as a pupil in September, 1880, and narrated many interesting stories relative to school days in that period.

OLD BOYS AND GIRLS WHO ARE BACK

THOMAS GUERIN

"It's great to get back to Peterborough" said Thomas Guerin of Flint, Mich., to The Examiner this morning. Mr. Guerin is a son of the late Teniece Guerin who will be remembered by the older residents of the city.

"When we motored in the highway the other night I couldn't recognize anything of the old town until I got to the station on Charlotte Street," Mr. Guerin remarked. With his wife and child he will remain here until Saturday.

His brother Richard Guerin is here and also Richard (Dick) Holt, both of Flint. Dick Holt has been an alderman of Flint for the last ten years. They all have responsible positions with the Buick Automobile Company.

"One of the first things I did" Tommy Guerin said, "was to take my wife uptown to the drug store where Ernie Payne is now located and tell her there was where I first started to work with Dick Davidson and Bob Fife."

VISITING UNIT WELL PLEASED WITH RECEPTION

MEN ARE UNANIMOUS.

Felt As If They Were Heartily Appreciated By the Citizens.

The 75th Regiment, the Toronto Scottish, returned to Toronto last night delighted with their three days in Peterborough.

"It seemed to me that we were rarely so heartily appreciated as by the people of this city as we paraded along the streets," said Major A. M. Thomas, O.B.E. "We could feel the friendly spirit from the thousands whom we could not meet, but we felt that Peterborough is one of the finest and friendliest towns we have been in. The arrangements made by Captain Doug. Loomis for our reception were perfect. The camp ground at the park was excellent, and all these details and facilities made our work light."

"Perfect" was Capt. Newt. Wright's inclusive and brief reference to the regiment's visit. He is Quartermaster of the 75th.

The men were unanimous in their good opinion of Peterborough, and of their appreciation of the kindly spirit of their welcome. Six thousand rounds of ammunition were issued for last night's sham battle, and the bombs and rockets which were used cost more than $300.

BRIDGENORTH.

Mr. Ball, teacher of Bridgenorth School, presided at the entrance examinations at Buckhorn.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Graham have returned from a pleasant motor trip to Hamilton and Niagara Falls

Messrs. L. Fowler, J. Gordon Mann, and Clarence Mann, of Smith, attended the sale of pure-bred Ayrshires at the home of Mr. C. E. McCook, Campbellford, on Friday.

Misses Velma Lowes and Evelyn Armstrong, of Peterborough, spent the week-end with their cousin, Miss Margaret Mann, of Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Huffman and family, of Peterborough, have moved to their summer home at "Long Point," on Chemong Lake.

Hardill Hurls Petes to 5-4 Victory Over Motorists

PETES BREAK LOSING STREAK BY WINNING CENTRAL ONTARIO LEAGUE GAME FROM OSHAWA

Motorists Beaten 5 to 4 After Exciting Battle in Which Hardill Shines.

GOOD PITCHING

After Shaky Start Petes' Pitcher Delivers Puzzling Assortment of Benders.

(By F. D. C.)

The Petes snapped out of their slump Saturday afternoon, when they defeated the Oshawa Motorists 5 to 4 in a scrappy Central Ontario League battle in which the homesters were never worse than tied.

The Swanston gang, aided by Oshawa errors, set up a lead of three runs in the first frame and although the visitors tied the count in their second frame the Petes flashed in front again in the fourth with another pair of markers and were in the van thereafter although the General Motors entry did manage to push over a run in the final session.

A nice brand of pitching by Jeff Hardill was a material factor in the victory. Hardill came on the scene in the second inning to relieve Al Heckman, the starting heaver, whose arm was lame. Heck got through the first frame without being scored on, but decided it was not his day. At first it didn't look to be Hardill's day either for he was hit hard in his first turn on the mound and the score was tied before he got the side out. Oshawa filled the bases in the third frame but failed to score, and from then on Hardill baffled them with an effective curve that they found impossible to solve.

The Petes fielded smartly behind him and while they again displayed lack of punch in taking advantage of their scoring opportunities and had a flock of men stranded they bagged enough runs to grab the decision.

Lefty Wills, former T.A.B.A. southpaw, went the route for Oshawa and although frequently in difficulties showed a lot of stuff and stuck to his job gamely. He was the victim of several bad slips on the part of his supporting cast that made the Petes' big first inning possible.

The umpiring again caused trouble, the climax coming when Young was apparently caught off second when he tried to steal. The Petes claimed the runner was blocked off the bag and while they were arguing with Umpire Woodley Young broke for third. The ball was tossed to Holyman, who tagged the runner well off the bag and again Woodley called him safe. In the rumpus that followed this second doubtful ruling Holyman took a swing at the base umpire and was banished from the game.

Heckman pitched the first frame for the Petes and in spite of his lame arm got by without a run being scored, a hit by Sutton being wasted.

The Petes got three counters. Legon led off with a single to left and raced to third when Young threw past second on Rose's roller. Legon was caught off third. Swanston rolled to McCallum. Little, however, made a bad throw on Heckman's rap and Rose scored. Harrison's single to right scored Heckman. Hall walked. Red Hollingsworth doubled to centre, scoring Harrison. Beavis rolled to McCallum for the third out.

Hardill faced the Motorists when they went to bat in the second and they gave him a warm reception. Young was hit and was sacrificed to second by McCallum. Gray beat out a tap to Sweetman. Little was safe on Sweetman's error, Young scoring. Wills doubled hard to centre to send Gray and Little in. Carver lined to Sweetman and Legon made a nice catch of Sutton's fly to short centre.

Hardill got out of a hole nicely in the third when the Motorists filled the bases on two singles and a walk only to have Little tap one back to Hardill, with two.

The Petes scored two runs, enough as it proved to win the ball game in the fourth. Legon led off with a single through short and after Rose had flied to Gray, Swanston crashed a long double to right centre, scoring Legon. Swanston went to third on the throw to the plate and scored when Wills uncorked a wild pitch. Heckman drew a pass but Harrison and Hall rolled out.

From then until the final frame Hardill was on top of the Oshawa attack, allowing only one hit from the third until the ninth. Wills, on the other hand, was in trouble frequently but escaped with no further score against him.

Oshawa got a couple in the ninth. Matthews, pinch hitting for Little, singled through short. Wills popped to Hollingsworth and Carver lined to Hall. Sutton, however, singled past third and then Matthews scored on a double steal. The tieing run was on second but Hardill brought the battle to and end by striking out Elliott for the third time in succession.

Royals Split Twin Bill With Bisons

MONTREAL, Que., July 2 (C.P.)—A huge holiday throng of 17,000 fans saw the Bisons and the Royals divide a double-header here yesterday afternoon, the visitors winning the first game, 6 to 5 and the Royals taking the second, 4 to 0. Both clubs made the same number of hits in the first game, 14 each, but poor baserunning lost the contest for Montreal. The Royals pushed across four runs in the first inning of the shortened nightcap and sewed up the struggle there and then.

Both Teams Play Indifferent Ball, With Winners Having Six Errors.

Increasing their straight string of victories to four, Raybestos defeated Cobourg 8 to 4 in a Lakeshore League fixture played on the shores of Lake Ontario Saturday afternoon. Amid the sand dunes of Cobourg's bathing-beach diamond, it was indifferent ball the Rays put up, although they did manage by well-timed clouts to win the mediocre struggle.

Right from the start-off it was evident that Manager Primeau's athletes were in for an off day. During the first five innings they made a total of six errors, and then settled down to play something like their usual game. Errors figured in all but one of Cobourg's runs.

If the losers had been able to get hold of "Sailor" Maudsley's slants in the same brave manner that their infielders were picking off every ball hit their way, there would have been a different result, Cobourg was woefully weak with the willow, despite the fact that Maudsley did not seem to be his former masterly self. However, his efforts were sufficient to retire ten batsmen on strikes, and his energies were effective in the pinches.

13 Hits For Rays

Landymore, in the box for Cobourg, was never a mystery to the Rays and they connected to him for thirteen smacking clouts, including one long triple and four doubles that were accurately placed in among the crowd along the short right field. Only his airtight supporting cast kept Landymore anywhere in the the picture.

Maudsley walked the first man up in the opening frame, after the Rays had done nothing in their half, and immediately two errors put Cobourg in the lead with one run. Their lead was short though, because three hits, one a double by Moore, gave Rays three runs in the second. Another error and two hits gave Cobourg another counter in the second. In the fourth Cobourg again seized the advantage sending two runs across on three scratchy clouts and a wild throw to first base. Rays tied it in the sixth on two hits and Barry's long sacrifice fly to centre field. From then on the winners forged to the front, wielding their bats with purpose against Landymore's weakening serves.

Doug. Moore in centre was the fielding star for the winners speeding his way under four long drives "Cack" Rogers, content to tap them over the infielders' heads, was high batsman with three safeties, but Hickey rapped out two doubles.

The whole infield of Cobourg played superior defensive ball, but Mann, right fielder, supplied the greatest contribution of the game, tearing back to take Batten's giant smack over his shoulder.

Paschal's Home Run Gives Hugmen a Win

NEW YORK, N.Y., July 2 (C.P.)—The pinch-hitting prowess of Ben Paschal enabled the Yankees to nose out the Boston Red Sox yesterday by a 3-to-2 score. Paschal was sent in to hit for Herb Pennock in the seventh inning, after Koenig had doubled, and came through with a home run that spelled victory.

The game was a pitching duel between Pennock and Bill Bayne, who had the edge up to the seventh due to Pennock's shaky start; which gave the Red Sox two runs in the first. He allowed but five hits up to the seventh, while Pennock and his successor, "Lefty" Heimach, gave but six altogether.

LEAFS REMAIN AT .500 MARK

Split Double Program On Holiday With Rochester By 4-2 and 9-3 Scores.

WINGS ON RAMPAGE.

TORONTO, Ont., July 2 (C.P.)—The Leafs boosted themselves over the .500 mark in the International League standing yesterday for a brief hour or two by handing the leading Rochester Wings a 4 to 2 defeat in the morning game. But they toppled right back again in the afternoon encounter, when four members of the local heaving staff could serve nothing that the Red Wing's couldn't propel to vacant spaces in the Stadium. Consequently, the visitors provided most of the afternoon entertainment, and got on even break on the holiday goings by walking off with a 9 to 3 victory.

"Hoot" Gibson, Abe Martin, Joe Samuels and Don Hankins were all presented by Manager Steve O'Neill for the inspection of the fans and the edification of the Wings. Of the four Hawkins lasted longest and looked the better in so far as pitching went. Perhaps that was because Don came in near the end after the Wings had grown weary of making base hits and chasing in runs of the heavings of the previous trio.

"Tex" Carleton went the full distance for the opposition, and he was seldom in any difficulty.

C. G. E. BEAT CAN. PACKERS FIVE TO TWO

Cup Tie Tactics Were in Evidence in First Half—Score Even at Interval.

EXCELLENT SOCCER

Packers Cracked in the Closing Minutes to Allow Winners Three Tallies.

After a gruelling cup-tie game, the Canadian General defeated the Canadian Packing eleven at King Edward Park by the score of five goals to two, in the semi-final of the Injured Players Cup, on Saturday afternoon, before a good attendance of spectators.

The fans witnessed an excellent exhibition of the soccer and it was anybody's game until the last minutes of the battle when the C.G.E gained the three goals in quick style. The winners meet the Deloro aggregation in the final .

Line Ups Are Changed

Many changes took place in the line ups of the teams, in fact, the C.P.C. players were occupying positions they never have played in before, while Henry Turner, of the old C.G.E. played at full back for his old name sake.

Packers Won Toss.

Ben McMaster set the ball a-rolling for the Canadian General against the sun and wind. The first note of interest came as Carmichael tested C.G.E. goal-keeper with an oblique shot. In a few minutes the Electric boys had hard luck at the other end.

Halves Were Perfect.

Time and again the forwards would initiate a new movement to gain headway but the half backs allowed no opening to occur, although Bolton was very fortunate in saving Downer's drive and pust got the ball away in time.

Robb Opened Scoring

A break away by J. McMaster proved successful when he compelled the full back to conceed a corner kick ,that Burgess placed in centre of goal, when Robb's head diverted the sphere past Griffin into the net. Quick as a flash the C.P.C. right wing broke away to get a free-kick when Blowers handled the ball. Buchanan made no mistake with a rising shot that landed in below the bar right into the rigging.

Craig's Smart Goal.

On an equal basis again, the players of the Electric works forced the pace at a terrific rate to make Griffin give the most spectacular displays in goal that has been seen this season, in fact, he deserves credit for keeping the C.G.E. forwards from scoring. All in an instant, Carmichael evaded the defence to give Craig possession in front of goal, and with a low grounder put C.P.C. in the lead. On a mid-field tackle, Buchan succeeded and from thirty yard range compelled the C.G.E. custodian to touch over the bar for a fruitless flat-kick. Before the half time ,an exceptional brand of the game was shown ,in fact, a goal was allowed by the referee when the ball went inside the upright to even up the tally. Canadian General 2, Canadian Packing 2.

HALF TIME

On resuming, the ball went from end to end at a fast pace until an unfortunate accident to Bolton forced the C.G.E. to play with ten men. He was carried off the field to the pavilion and Wade went into the upright until he returned into his usual place in next five minutes.

Fast Soccer All the Time

Repeated attacks were made by the forwards on each front rank, but they found the custodians very reliable in dealing with the shots ranged at them. On one occasion Buchan dribbled his way through the defence until he was well set for a try at goal. Bolton threw himself on the ground to stop a well-inserted drive that was going to the corner of the net.

C.G.E. Pressed.

Exchanges continued even until the Packers became dilatory in method of attack and the halves left their opponents a wide margin to introduce the combination that brought success before the conclusion of the tussle.

Three Goals in Seven Minutes

It was a real cup-tie tussle, until Mitchell gained the leading goal with a low grounder from well out in the feild. The full back played the man while the opposing forward kicked the ball into the net. Griffin's view being obstructed by players. This goal added more vim to the winners while the losers lost all confidence to allow Burgess to run close in to touch the ball inside the upright. Two minutes before the finish ,Ben McMaster secured a counter in the same manner. Final: Canadian General 5, Canadian Packing 2.

The teams:

Canadian Packing—Griffin, goal; Weastwood and Downer, full backs; T. Wilson, Buchan and Bromley, halves; Carmichael, N. Downer, Craig, A. Wilson and Laidler, forwards.

Canadian General—Bolton, goal; Wade and Turner, backs; Robb, Mann and Blowers, halves; Burgess, J. McMaster, B. McMaster, Mitchell and Rankin, forwards.

THEATRES

GREAT STAGE HIT WILL BE HEARD AT THE CAPITOL TONIGHT—GEO. M. COHAN'S "THE HOME TOWNERS" — A BROADWAY ATTRACTION AT CAPITOL PRICES.

"The Home Towners," a great screen revival of George M. Cohan's great stage success, in all-talkie form, is at the Capitol to-night. The cast has many famous recruits from the speaking stage, including Richard Bennett, Doris Kenyon, Robert McWade, Robert Edeson, Gladys Brockwell, John Miljan, Vera Lewis, Stanley Taylor, James T. Mack and Patricia Caron.

And what is equally important, there is something to say. No playwright of our day is more deft in dialogue than George M. Cohan, and Warner Bros. adapters, Addison Burkhart and Murray Roth, have kept all the charm of the original. Bryan Foy, who is one of the really great directors of the day, is responsible for Warner Bros.' latest triumph.

"The Home Towners" is a genial, heart-warming, chuckling play—recounting the adventures of two middle-aged chums, the young lady to whom one is engaged, and her family. Robert McWade plays P. H. Bancroft, the small-town pal who hears that his millionaire crony is engaged to marry a Big Town young woman. Bancroft at once assumes that she and her family are hoodwinking his friend, and comes post haste to Manhattan to set things right. Instead, he sets things decidedly wrong, and it is only after much uproarious manoeuvring that he straightens out the mix-up he himself has made. Robert McWade marvelously interprets the same part he played in the original stage production. Don't fail to see "The Home Towners."

"The Wolf of Wall Street"

The Capitol Theatre has a very interesting program for the first half of Old Home Week. The feature picture is intensely dramatic and attention-holding, there is a comedy which combines the art of the two methods of silent and talking movies, and there is one of the tiny novelty reels which the conversational screen has brought into being. It is called "Knights in Venice" and is a travesty in action while being, at the same time, tuneful in essence. It parodies two operatic gems, the "Barcarolle" from "The Tales of Hoffman" and the sextette from "Lucia di Lammermoor" in splendid voice and ridiculous action.

The comedy is a Lupino Lane mix-up, with the sad-faced gink as a sailor-boy. Along with the snappy talk that has come into being with the gabby drama, is the custard-pie action of the silent movies. There are plenty of laughs in this comedy.

The recipe for "The Wolf of Wall Street" is as foll Take one strong man of the type who calls his exotic wife "my old girl" and treats her like a much-liked expensive doll; a woman of Russian parentage with a desire for admiration and a cruel streak toward the man who is her husband; a weak man with a desire for revenge and possessing a pretty face, mix well. The result is disaster.

George Bancroft is "The Wolf of Wall Street" a crooked manipulator of stocks who angles for "suckers" quite successfully. He sends the market sky-rocketing or catapulting down the slope, in the turn of a hand, and rules the group of men about him with an iron hand and a rough tongue. When the "bears" are bringing his fortune down about his ears, he takes time to peel off his sock and treat an injured corn, or talk to his wife when she makes a call at his office. When his rival in business is bent on ruining him, he insults the other man and makes him do his crooked will, at the same time. When he discovers an intrigue between his wife and "Pink Tea" Tyler, his assistant, he strangles a murderous impulse and sends his own fortune and that of Tyler into a mass of ruin.

Bancroft, as Jim Bradford, has the mad gleam of the fanatic in his eye. He gives a remarkable presentation. His wife, the snake-like Russian woman with blonde loveliness, Olga Bradford, is Baclanova, the latest foreign importation to the moving drama. David Tyler, her lover, is Paul Lukas, and Gert, the maid, who plays a strong hand in the undoing of the "Wolf" is Nancy Carroll.—Jeanette.

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

THE TALKIE CHILD.

The talkie child is very sweet
And earnest and intense,
His utterances are replete
With lofty sentiments.
I know that he is highly ranked
By critics—as for me,
I'd like to see the urchin spanked
Upon his mother's knee.

The talkie child is shrill of speech Particularly when
We hear him eagerly beseech
For pity from bad men.
But though too easily I'm riled
By cuteness, I suppose,
I often wish some larger child
Would punch him on the nose.

The talkie child has cunning ways.
I frequently am told.
Continuously he displays
A heart of purest gold.
But when his broken sobs so sad
Descend upon my ears,
I wish the little beggar had
Real reason for his tears.

For children I have no dislike;
From prejudice I'm free,
But this too precious little tyke
Does not appeal to me.
For in this so-called vale of tears
Where life is gay or grim
I've never met, in fifty years
A kid at all like him.

A TIME OF ANXIETY.

It looks now as if the farmers would not be really relieved until Congress adjourns.

DOUBLE WIN FOR RAYBESTOS.

At the expense of the lowly Cobourg Ponies the Raybestos Club greatly bettered its position in the standings of the Lakeshore League by defeating Cobourg twice. The first game was played on Saturday in Cobourg, resulting 8 to 4 for Rays, and the second in Port Hope yesterday was a 5 to 0 score.

"Sailor" Maudsley went the whole route in both games, and more than subdued the losers' hitters. His support was ragged for the first five innings of the Saturday game, but the Rays went out and won with base hits.

The Rays now have five straight wins against the two losses for the games that they dropped at the beginning of the season.

BIG ENTRY FOR DELORO RACES.

Twenty-one competitors in one race is a sample of the sweep of athletics in and about Marmora and Deloro. Twenty-one youths under seventeen years got off at the crack of the gun in the three mile junior road race yesterday morning. The distance was covered in seventeen minutes by Bill Simmons of Deloro, with Jack Carter and Clifford Howie, both of Belleville, second and third.

Manley Emmory of Deloro, won the six mile race in 32 1-2 minutes, beating C. D. Fairweather, winner of the same race in 1927 and 1928. Fairweather was third, being led across the line C. J. McInroy of Springbrook. There were six competitors and all finished the grind.

The C. G. E. Track and Field Club had several runners who who were desirous of entering the Deloro races, but they were confined to Hastings Coupnty's athletes only.

SHOULD BE GOOD BASEBALL PROGRAM

The City League should make every endeavor to line up a good bill of minor games here this week so that the old boys may have the opportunity of seeing the class of ball the youngsters are playing here now That the old boys are interested can be judged by the number of questions they are asking about sports here. They would carry away the thought that Peterborough they are given the chance to view the bantams, juveniles and juniors in action.

THE MEANEST MAN IN TOWN.

Thefts are being reported nightly from in front of this office. A few light-fingered ball fans are not satisfied with seeing the scores on the bulleting board, but they must team them off and carry them away. Others, just as eager fans, coming later, find the board barren of the news that they have walked blocks to learn.

Everyone is hopeful that the thoughtlessness of a few will not spoil the daily ball results of the many.

WELSH TEAM HOLDS RECORD

RECORD 61 AGAINST 11.

TORONTO, Ont., July 2 (Canadian Press). — Coming from behind the Welsh Football Association soccer team demonstrated their superiority over the Ontario All-Stars here yesterday by trouncing them three goals to one. The teams furnished the spectators with 90 minutes of smart soccer and there was little to choose between either during the early play. Yesterday's victory ran the tourists' string to 14 consecutive triumphs. Their goal record is 61 goals against 11.

The Ontario eleven started the contest spiritedly and after 15 minutes of brisk exchanges Sathrang, inside right, put the Canadians in front with a clever shot. Less than a minute later the Welshmen equalized, the Ontario goalkeeper being puzzled by a shot from Warren which appeared wide. The latter part of the first half saw Ontario show the the best play, but they lacked finish, although they seemed outlucked on several stinging drives which deserved to count.

Graham, centre forward, messed up another fine opportunity for Ontario by failing to convert a penalty kick. From then on the visitors proved the better team. Robbins put the Welshmen in front with a fine header midway through the half, and three minutes from the finish Warren registered his second goal.

The teams:

Wales — Evans, Russell, Lumberg, Rennion, Keenor, Jennings, Warren, Neale, Robbins, Jones and Cook.

Ontario — Halliwell, Eadie, Begbie, Wilson, Williams, Clulow, N. Dougall, Sathrang, Graham, Galloway, and Moir.

LOCKIES RALLY TO WIN VICTORY

Lockworks Juniors Slug Way To 12-10 Victory Over Kiwanis in Loop Tilt.

SMART INFIELD WORK.

A tenth innings batting rally gave the Lockworks' Juniors their first victory of the season last night at Riverside Park when they slugged their way to a 12-10 win over their old rivals, the Kiwanis. The infield of the winners was working like a well-oiled machine, and supported Westbrooke with almost perfect fielding.

The Lockmakers hammered Madill in the third innings for four counters, and showed speed and cleverness on the bases. They came back strong again in the fourth to add three more tallies to their total and at the end of the fifth they were holding down the big end of an 8-4 score.

Dorrington made his first appearance on third base for the winners, and turned in a splendid performance. His speedy exhibitions of base running earned him two decisions at first and his fielding ability marked him as an asset to the winners.

Westbrooke pitched the whole game for the Lockworks and although he did not do any spectacular twirling, he was never in distress. He was nicked for thirteen safe hits and three walks, but turned back seven by the strike-out route, and worked his way out of a tight corner in the third innings by fanning Madill to retire the side with a bases loaded.

Madill, a husky right hand twirler from Lakefield, made his first appearance on the Kiwanis line-up. He started on the mound and made a nice showing for two innings, but the winners found him no puzzle in the third and gathered in four runs. He was replaced by Crary in the fifth innings, who finished the game. The latter had just returned from Belleville, where he had won an exhibition game, 9—1, making fifteen strike-outs. He struck out eleven batters and hit one.

The Kiwanis went out in order in their half of the overtime frame and it looked as if the game would go eleven innings when Crary fanned the first two Lockworks' men to face him. Westbrooks buoyed up his team mates, however, by lifting a nice one into deep centre for one base. Burke came through with another safe hit and there were two men on and two out. Hall, the fifth to bat connected with a fast one wrich soared over Stabler's head in left field and was good for 3 bases, sending Westbrook and Burke across the plate with the winning runs.

Murray Hartley gave the Lockworks a boost in the eighth innings when he threw his glove at a slow grounder which advanced the two base runners, sending Morocco home.

Joe Dunkerly, playing in left field for the winners, made one of the nicest hits of the game when he hammered a fast one into left field for three bases.

These two teams clash again on Wednesday night at James Stevenson Park and if the Lockworks can cap another win the race will be a close one.

PARKDALE CLUB LEADS SCORING

Florence Bell Stars at Canadian Women's Annual Track and Field Meet.

RECORDS EQUALLED.

MONTREAL, Que., July 2.—(C.P.)—Aggregate honors in both the senior and junior classes at the annual Canadian women's track and field championships which were held here yesterday were won by the Parkdale Ladies' Club of Toronto. The Queen City visitors matched strides with the best that competitors from Halifax, Montreal, Ottawa, and Hamilton could offer and came out on top. The Parkdale girls ran off with aggregate junior honors, scoring 30 points to 10 obtained by the second place team, Montreal Y.W.H.A. In the senior events, however, the Toronto athletes had a hard fight to win the laurels, the newly-formed Canadian Ladies' A. C. of Montreal, pressing them all the way. The final senior point score was Parkdale 47, Montreal 41.

The Dartmouth A. C., of Halifax, with an outstanding star and point-winner in the person of Gertrude Phinney, finished third in the senior aggregate. The Haliconians scored 17 points, Miss Phinney accounting for 11 of them, the other six coming when the Maritimers captured second place in the senior relay.

Florence Bell, of the Parkdale Club, was the meet's outstanding performer, this blonde, short-haired miss winning three events to give her team 15 points. She won the javelin throw, the baseball throw, and the 60 yards low hurdles, winning the latter event in 8 4-5 seconds, thus equalling the existing Canadian record.

There were no records broken during the meet, but two other marks were equalled, Myrtle Cook of Montreal, winning her own 60 yards dash record of 7 seconds and Dallas Creamer, of Parkdale ladies doing the 220 yards in 26 seconds to tie the t ime set by Rose Grosse O'Neill, of Toronto, several years ago.

Myrtle Cook, of the local Canadian Ladies' Club, was second in the individual scoring with 13 points, while Gertrude Phinney, the flash from the Atlantitc coast, was third with 11 points.

Miss Cook upheld her reputation of being one of the world's premier women sprinters by taking first place in both the 60 yards and 100 yards. She was second to Miss Creamer in the 220 yards final, after having won the heat in which the Toronto girl placed second. In the shorter sprints however, Miss Cook was given a battle by the Halifax girl, Gertrude Phinney, the latter placed second in both the 60 and 100 yard dashes, and in each event was beaten by only a scant margin. She was on even terms with Miss Cook in the 60 yards until the last few strides ,and in the century her last-minute sprint almost got her to the tape ahead of the Montreal star.

Besides placing in the two short dashes, Miss Phinney distinguished herself by winning the broad jump with a leap of 16 feet 4 inches. She won a place for herself in the final of the 220 yards by running second in the heat in which she was drawn, but withdrew from the final to save herself for the senior relay event in which the Halifax team ran second to the Parkdale girls.

Record Threatened

Miss Ethel Catherwood's world and Canadian high jump record of 5 feet 3 inches was threatened but not broken or equalled at yesterday's meet. Connie Culson, of the Toronto Canadian Ladies' A.C. won the event with a leap of 5 feet ½ inch, following which she attempted a jump of 5 feet 3 inches. She failed at the latter mark three times, her last attempt just failing to clear the bar by a scant margin. Miss Catherwood did not compete owing to a recent injury received in training.

Junior individual honors were divided between Grace Morrison, of the Parkdales, and Annette Eliasoph of the Montreal Young Women's Hebrew Association, each scoring ten points.

The showing of the athletes from Ottawa and Hamilton was disappointing. The girls from the capital showed up well in the relay events, only, while Jane Snor was the only Hamilton entrant to score a point when she finished third in the junior baseball throw. Gwen Nye, Hamilton's chief senior threat, was injured when she fell following a false start in her heat of the 100 yard dash.

The Ottawa senior relay team finished third, while the junior four ran second to Parkdale. Phyllis Cooper was the only individual scorer for Ottawa, taking second place in the junior baseball throw.

TORONTO BEATS CRICKET CLUB

BRILLIANT BOWLING.

A strong team representing the Toronto C. C. easily defeated the local club on Saturday afternoon at the Oval by 93 runs. Batting first the Toronto club scored 23 before Morrison was brilliantly caught out by Hamilton in the outfield. Mailey, the Australian test match player hit up 20 in very quick style before being easily caught and bowled by Dyer.

Ingles and Boemer made a big fourth wicket stand, adding 60 runs before being separated. Thanks to these two batsmen and with the assistance of Lean Howard, the total finally reached 118. These three batsmen scoring no less than 91 of the 118 runs obtained.

The local boys did remarkably well in the field to get such a formidable side out for this total. The Peterborough batsmen could do nothing with the bowling of the famous Mailey, ably assisted by Norman Seagram and Henderson and the whole side was out for 25 runs.

For Peterborough, Wade bowled in excellent style, taking 5 wickets for 41 runs. For Toronto, Mailey took 3 for 7, N. Seagram 3 for 5, Henderson 2 for 7, and N. Seagram Junion 2 for 0 runs..

ARRANGEMENTS FOR LACROSSE GAME

Lacrosse Veterans May Enter Fray Again Sometime During Week.

The rallying call is being sent out to all old-time lacrosse players. They are asked to gird their loins; grip their trusty stick and enter the fray again.

Arrangements are being rushed along for this promised game and if it goes over it will be one of the greatest events of the entire week. Thursday afternoon has been the date set for this game.

Several of the old stars have already declared themselves as all for it. Wherever lacrosse players gather together to talk of the stirring games of former days, the subject of this last game is being discussed.

It is thought that when the old boys learn of the definite plans for this struggle they will crowd in to get on the line-ups. It will be played in periods to suit the wind and poise of all.

The question of sticks has been settled, Johnny Sutherland has arranged to bring up from Campbellford enough to supply any shortage.

It only remains for the old boys to get behind it to make this lacrosse game one of the greatest sporting events in the old town's history. Applications for a position on the lineups may be sent to the Sporting Department of The Examiner.

HOAGHAN SHOW WELL RECEIVED BY LARGE CROWD

Brilliant Performance of Riding and Hurdling is Given.

MILITARY MANEUVERS.

Delights and Thrills Old Home Week Crowds at Exhibition Park.

With twenty-four head of ring stock, in charge of brilliant artists, George Hoaglan, commonly known as "Jinx" Hoaglan, put on a performance of stunts, features and military presentations in front of the grand stand Monday afternoon, such as has never been seen in Peterborough before, and on that will draw crowds for the remainder of the week.

The series of races, especially the mule durby, hurdle jumping, pushball, and auto polo kept the audience continually on their feet, and went a long way to show how great the success of the performance was. During the whole of the performance "Jinx" himself, the guiding hand, can be seen in front with that big smile of his, and his trumpet announcing the various events.

Happy Jack, famous Toronto clown of Sunnyside fame, sort of opened the proceedings with a few side-splitting stunts, and a baby marathon dance in which he wore out one shoe and put a blister on his foot that will remind him of Peterborough for a week or more. The Hippodrome performers next came on with a military presentation known as the Garland Entry. Wreaths artistically decorated, formed a beautiful backgrounds as a setting for the act. In this, eight of the finest riders in the Hippodrome gave a splendid sample of riding, their movements blending as one.

After these performers had concluded, as fine a demonstration as one would wish to see of "kicking" was staged by a tiny brown mule. And maybe it couldn't "talk" with those back feet. There was many the farmer in the crowd who was glad that the days of horse and buggy locomotion was over, for if horsey had seen that demonstration of heel lashing—shame, just plain shame, would have prompted disastrous contests, and probably many a pair of human feet would have "hoofed it" home that night. A few taps of a whip, a large ball thrown at its flying heels, and that mule could knock a homer that would cause Babe Ruth to sit up and take a few pointers.

The mule derby undoubtedly "took the cake" though for the afternoon. Two mules, one dapple grey, the other black, draw regulation racing carts came jogging up to the starting post, and drivers from the crowd were called for. However, the crowd seemed just a trifle uneasy about conducting a pair of mules around the track, but after much coaxing, Happy Jack, the clown, and Mr. S. W. Shorney, official photographer of the Toronto Scottish, were induced to take over the task. The start was fine, for after a bit of plunging, and wonder of wonders, no kicking, the pair (meaning the mules) broke from a walk to a dead gallop, and the race was on. "Moonshine," Happy Jack's steed, failed to get the jump, and as a result his competitor, "Near Beer," held the rail all the way around. At three quarters the race looked cinched for "Near Beer," who was leading by about three lengths, and steadily gaining, when suddenly she broke from a canter to a fox trot, and waltzed off the track into the enclosure. Happy Jack saw his chance and urging "Moonshine" to greater efforts, succeeded in drawing up neck and neck. By that time Mr. Shorney had coaxed his kittenish racer back to the track. With a wonderful recovery, "Near Beer," came on under a driving finish to win by a nose. Time 2.16.

This feature had the crowd upon its feeting, laughing and yelling themselves hoarse.

Military Manouvers.

Forty picked men from the Scottish, in the form of a demonstration squad, under Sergeant C. Roach, with no word of command, only the toot of a whistle, went through combinations of rifle and squad drill that numbered close to one hundred different movements. The most outstanding feature probably was the forming of the famous British Hollow Square, which so often was the last stand of a brave remnant of British soldiers hemmed in by hostile natives in the wilds of Africa or the jungles of India. In this movement the squad fired in volley, and in rotation, with blank cartridges, which startled the crowd considerably none the less. This was concluded by a march past, the salue being taken by Colonel Harbottle, while the band played the Scottish Regimental March.

Not the least fascinating by any means was the game of push ball on horseback, which is played similarly to horse polo. This game which has fascinated England for so many years, was contested between a pair of equally matched teams, one representing Canada and the other America. These teams squared off for a three-chucker contest, and many thrilling moments ensued as the huge ball was pushed hither and thither by the riders. The score of the game is computed the same as in polo.

Educated steeds bearing the name of high school horses and cognizant of many difficult tricks proved quite a treat, by their intelligent performance. However, much of the credit is due to the keen training given them by Jack Hoaglan, who has worked untiringly to make this a sensation. The success is a tribute to his ability to handle horses. Dancing the latest steps and some of the famous hops, the horses attract the eyes of even the most childlike. Some of the outstanding steps were the Dixie One Step, Turkey Hop, Prance Step and Black Bottom.

Between acts, four splendid draught horses (owned by the Teco Stores) valued at $17,000 were paraded up and down in front of the grand stand.

High Jumpers Seen

High jumpers such as are seen in the hurdle races at the Grand National race, strutted their stuff over the hurdles, going over six feet with ease. Colonel Lindberg the Jumper, owned and ridden by Jack Hoaglan, had a record nailed up of seven feet two inches, and takes it without trouble. Black Panther, ridden by Miss MacChesney, and Rollin' Stockins, ridden by Mrs. Clara Hogan together with Jesse James and Prince Arabia, proved quite tricky at going over the hurdles. Several of the horses are from the Vanderbilt stables.

Thrills, spills and careful driving come in for their attention in the auto polo. Exhausts roaring, motors wide open, tearing, swerving, skidding and rolling over in the mad chase after the ball provide many and many a hair-raising moment as the two machines driven apparently by madmen strove to get the ball in opponents' goals. And odd though it seems, "Sunshine,' 'the colored referee, was chased more than the ball —almost getting "knocked for a goal" several times as only a superhuman flip threw him out of the road of hurtling wheels.

Altogether it was a highly tickled crowd that filed from the stands to their evening repast, and so pleased was Chairmen W. Turner that he is attempting to arrange to book "Jinx" Hoaglan and his show for another year.

STRUCK ON HEAD.

SARNIA, Ont., July 2.—Henry Jackson, 26, was killed yesterday on the site of the local grain elevator. He was working on the hoist at the time and put his head inside the tower to gaze upward. Before he could with draw his head a heavy cement bucket descended and struck him.

TRAFFIC IS HEAVY.

GRIMSBY, Ont., July 2.—At a late hour last evening traffic through Grimsby was lined up almost solid from Beamsville to Hamilton, a distance of about 22 miles.

Dozens of rearend collisions occurred, but no report was given police of any one suffering serious injury.

Pedestrians on the main street of Grimsby were forced to wait as long as half an hour to cross the road.

Salient Points of Bidding.

Auction: South's one No Trump bid secures the contract, since the opponents hold no sound bid nor double, and North has no reason, distributional or otherwise, for disturbing the bid.

Contract: In response to South's forcing bid of two No Trumps, North, holding an Ace, bids three No Trumps. Had South bid but one No Trump, North, with his holding, could not keep the bidding open and the game contract would not have been reached.

The Play.

West opens the 7 of Diamonds and Declarer wins the trick in Dummy in order to lead Clubs for a finesse. With nine Clubs in sight, he takes a single finesse in the suit, winning with the Queen. He then plays the Ace, dropping the adverse King and Jack. The 9 and 6 remaining in Dummy may now be utilized as entries for two Heart finesses. Declarer leads the 7 of Clubs covering with Dummy's 9. He then leads a low Heart from Dummy and takes the double Heart finesse, since there are less than nine cards of the suit in the two hands. The 10 holding the trick, Declarer puts Dummy in with the 6 of Clubs, and then finesses the Heart Queen. Upon the lead of South's Ace of Hearts. West shows out and as East has retained all of his Hearts, a Heart trick must be lost (or its equivalent). After making his King of Diamonds and Ace of Clubs, Declarer, with game already won, puts East in with a Heart. Upon this trick West discards his Queen of Diamonds, which practically marks his two remaining cards as being the King and one other Spade. Nevertheless, upon East's lead of the 10 of Spades, South finesses, as he cannot lose by the play and if by any chance the finesse should succeed a Small Slam can be made. The finesse fails, however, and Declarer makes but five odd.

BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY IS AWARDED FLEMING CUP

OTHERS MENTIONED.

Queen Alexandra School Cadets Awarded Major Fred Hills Cup.

The spectacular and beautiful floats that were so cleverly conceived and presented by the various organizations, merchants and industries of the city in yesterday's remarkable parade gave the judges a great deal of difficulty in picking a prize winner.

After a great deal of careful analyzing and criticizing the three officials decided to award the cup donated by A. C. Fleming for the best float in the parade to the Bell Telephone Company for the outstanding all around exhibit.

On the merits of attractiveness and appearances, with suggestion representation the Bell presentation was in the eyes of the judges the cup winner, but five other floats were picked by them to receive honorable mention.

These floats were, in the order in which they appeared in the parade: The Brinton Carpet Company, the Canadian Packing Company, Richard Hall Limited, Dominion Worsteds and E. F. Mason.

World-Wide Service

The prize winning float depicted the widespread use of the telephone. A huge globe of the world demonstrating that the service is practically world wide, was surmounted by a golden telephone which was symbolic of the golden opportunities that are lost when this service is not taken advantage of. Especially in business where time is an essential, the telephone is a necessity.

The Queen of Service, on a shell throne of pure white lined with blue, was seen sitting in her royal robes and jewelled crown with her two maids in waiting, where she could watch the entire globe, ready to commands at a moment's notice the least neglect of her servants to render those little services that are now demanded and required by the public.

The entire decorative scheme was carried out in white with blue trimmings, which are the colors of the Bell Telephone Company, and which lent themselves in a most attractive way to the design of the prize winning exhibit.

The judges for the floats were: Mr. Morton of Syracuse, a specialist in this line; J. W. Frasher and A. Purman.

AWARDED CADET CUP

Brigadier Anderson, district officer in command of Military District No. 3, as judge of the Cadets, awarded the Major Fred Hill Cup to E Corps, Queen Alexander Public School Cadets for the excellent showing that they made in the parade. These boys, who formed part of the junior military contingent, gave a remarkable exhibition of their training while on the march and for this they were elected the trophy winners.

FORMER PASTOR HOLDS SERVICE

Rev. A. E. de St. Dalmas at Gilmour Memorial Church.

HIS FIRST PASTORATE.

Exactly forty-six years from the day on which as a young minister, fresh from college, he arrived as pastor at Gilmour Memorial Church parsonage, the Rev. A. E. De St. Dalmas on Sunday preached at the morning and evening services of Gilmour Memorial Church. Mr. De St. Dalmas had only preached once in the church since his departure, and he had the pleasure on Sunday of making the acquaintance of the children and grandchildren of former members of the congregation, of whom a few of his contemporaries remain. Much of his address in the morning was naturally taken up with reminiscences of his pastorate at Gilmour. Mr. De St. Dalmas spoke out of a full heart on "Visions," taking as his text a sentence from St. Paul's defence before King Aprippa: "I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision," Act 26, 19.

Old Home Week in Peterborough said Mr. De St. Dalmas, was the result of a vision in the minds of some of its citizens; and now, he said, we are witnessing the materialization of that vision. Everything worthwhile was first conceived as a vision in the mind and soul of some one. He felt that Christians were to be reproached for the failure of conceive loftier visions—of a salvation for the whloe world.

The world needed a vision of God as a reality, not as an abstraction. Few there were who could persuade themselves in times of crisis or danger that there was no God.

The world needed a vision of Christ. It was He who had made it possible for the Christian to say:

"Upon a life I did not live,
Upon a death I did not die,
Another's life, another's death,
I rest my whole eternity."

The world needed a vision of time. It was the Christian religion alone that made old age happy, or even bearable. "There are no really happy old people outside of Christ," affirmed the speaker. Men spoke of the worth of other religions, and talk learnedly of comparative religion. There was no other religion apart from Christianity. Other so-called religions were utterly devoid of reality.

The world needed a vision of duty and service. Only by serving God could one serve his fellows. Justification, he said, was an act of justice—of God's justice. Men sinned, but Christ voluntarily suffered in their stead. Illustrating his point, Mr. De St. Dalmas closed by relating an incident which occurred in the Gilmour Church Sunday school, many years ago, when he propounded what he knew to be a difficult question to scholars and teachers alike, "Of who shall God be able to say, 'I find no fault'?". None of the teachers could answer, said Mr. De St. Dalmas but from a boy of twelve, he declared, came the answer that could not be bettered by any theologian or philosopher, "Of those who believe in Christ."

The choir, under the leadership of Mrs. J. A. Young, sang an anthem, accompanied by Miss Mabel Paul, and a male quartette comprising Messrs. T. H Graham, J. A. McGregor, Will Paul and Alec McGregor, sang, "Nailed to the Cross." The Rev. W. S. Edgar presided at the service and introduced the speaker.

Crocker-Wright Both Eliminated

WIMBLEDON, England, July 2 (Canadian Press Cable).—Willard Crocker and Jack Wright of Montreal, Canadian Davis Cup players, were yesterday finally eliminated from all singles competition in the Wimbledon All-England tennis tournament. Beaten previously after hard struggles in the men's singles title play, they were both defeated in the third round of the consolation event, the all-England plate, yesterday afternoon.

Rotsons of South Africa defeated Crocker 6-2, 6-4, while H. David of Great Britain triumphed over Wright 6-3, 6-0.

SPANISH FLYERS ARRIVE IN PORT

Day After Day Men Drifted With the Wind and Tide.

SEA WAS HEAVY.

GIBRALTAR, July 2 (Canadian Press).—How he clung to a forlorn hope and followed a fantastic light gleam near the Azores on Saturday morning to save the lives of the Spanish Transatlantic aviators was told by Lieutenant R. A. Kilroy of H.M.S. Eagle upon his arrival here to-day.

Lieutenant Kilroy, who is also attached to the Royal Flying Corps, was on watch before dawn on Saturday morning of last week. The weather had been rough the day before and neither he nor his fellow officers believed there was a chance the Dornier Wal plane of Major Ramon Franco still floated.

They only hoped against hope.

Saw Far Off Beam.

At 4 a.m. there was a queer weird beam from the surface of the sea far to the south of him. It might have been most anything, but Lieutenant Kilroy turned the Eagle about and in a few minutes was able to make out the plane, with the four Spaniards aboard, waving and gesticulating to him.

Lieutenant Kilroy was reticent, but Major Franco was more voluble. He told how they sent out wireless messages after they came down southeast of the Azores. These gave their position ,but apparently they were not picked up. Day after day they drifted with the wind, and on their fifth and sixth day afloat, Thursday and Friday, June 27 and 28, a heavy sea made them fear they would be their last.

On the morning of Saturday, June 29, Major Gonzales Gallarza saw a vessel's lights probably 20 miles away. The aviators flashed their own Bengal lights and sent up some rockets, then spent anxious moments wondering if they were seen. They were overjoyed a little later to see the craft turn in their direction and make way rapidly toward them.

The flyers were taken aboard, and at six o'clock, two hours after they were sighted ,the plane was lifted up by the carrier's hoist and lodged by the British seamen on one of the decks. Lieutenant Kilroy said Major Franco and his three companions were exceedingly cheerful despite their danger.

The men were given tea and cigarettes. They later joined in deck games, played cards with the British officers and were once entertained by a special concert. One feature of the homeward trip was the daily reading of wireless messages from friends and well wishers.

Although they still had plenty of food aboard, their drinking water was running short and they had been using the fluid from the engine and radio tanks. They were visited aboard the Dornier by Lieutenant Stevenson of the Eagle before they came aboard. They shook hands with him and they thanked him earnestly.

Feared They Would Crash

Major Franco told the story of their landing on the waves early Saturday morning, June 22, just a week before they were picked up. He said conditions were bad on the journey with visibility greatly impaired by layers of clouds. There was dense fog over the Azores in which they could find no break. They knew they were over the islands but if they attempted to fly low and get their exact bearings they probably would crash. Therefor they flew around until they were sure they were over the sea and then came down upon the water.

Their fuel was exhausted because of having flown so long through the fog. After landing on the water they saw no ships for more than six days. They took turns sleeping, some one of the four always on the lookout. They had considerable rough stormy weather and bad seas with their plane pitching heavily. They were not seasick, however, and did not suffer.

Each night they used some of their signal rockets, firing the last of them when the Eagle's lights finally were sighted.

In Police Court

A trio of tire thieves, who figured this city to be a rich harvest of their special industry, were caught red-handed Saturday night and appeared in Police Court, charged with the theft of tires this morning. They are Clarence Taylor, Joseph Brown and Eddie Adams, all giving Toronto as their address. They entered a plea of not guilty and were remanded for one week.

Provincial constables watched and trailed the activities of the three for several hours. They were operating among the parked cars at King Edward Park, and were seen to dodge in and out among them. About midnight they left the park and came up street to a garage, where their own car had been left, then they returned to the park and began lifting spare tires. They took fright and dashed away in the car as the police began an encircling movement.

After a chase they were overhauled on Lock Street. Their car contained several tires, along with a crown-and-anchor board, according to police.

GOOD PROGRAM FOR WEDNESAY

Boat Trips Up and Down River Will Be Feature—Golf Course Open.

DANCE AT NIGHT.

Wednesday's program holds some of its most interesting features a trip over the famous lift locks, and along the Trent Canal, a journey taking about two hours, for which the boat leaves George street wharf at 9 a.m.

Also during the morning there will be a meeting of all old time lacrosse players. For those who wish to have a round of golf, the various golf clubs have placed their courses at the disposal of the visitors. Any information regarding the courses may be had from the Chamber of Commerce, or at the Registration and Reception Building, corner of George and Water street.

The various greens of the bowling clubs are in splendid shape, just waiting for those who would enjoy Drake's ancient game.

In the afternoon for those who wish to enjoy life by simply resting, an excursion to Rice Lake has been planned. During the cruise an orchestra will furnish dance music for those so inclined. The steamer leaves George street dock at 1.3 o'clock and returns about 8.30 o'clock in the evening, in plenty of time for the evening's entertainment.

Drawing the day to a climax is the social event of the week, a feature ball, under the direction of Art Costello and his committee. Jerry Shea and his Paladians from the Palace Theatre, Montreal, will supply the music. Special attention has been given the Armouries floor. Spectacular dances entrancingly executed by a ballet of Peterborough girls trained by a professional stage director, and many other features will be presented during the evening. Dress for the occasion will be either formal or informal.

For those who do not care to dance, vaudeville and fireworks are being staged at the Exhibition grounds.

demand for electoral reforms. "My government," it said, "proposes to institute an examination of the experiences of the election so that the working of the law relating to parliamentary elections may be brought into conformity with the new conditions." The Labor party had already indicated measures might be introduced requiring declaration of the sources of campaign funds and details of their expenditure; while the Liberal party complain they are handicapped without any scheme of proportional representation.

The speech over, the members of the Commons filed back to their own chamber. Crowds were gathered in the central hall, and more crowds were outside. In the House of Commons all was over quickly; and the House adjourned until the afternoon for the opening of debate on the address in reply.

Ontario Registers 51 For One Wicket

TORONTO, Ont., July . —(Canadian Press.)—At the conclusion of the first day's play in the annual cricket match between the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec here yesterday, the visiting eleven had scored 153 runs for their first innings while Ontario registered 51 for one wicket.

Unsatisfactory condition of the pitch at University of Toronto campus caused much delay before the teams got started, and even after efforts had been made to improve it the ball performed all manner of tricks. The match will be resumed to-morrow at Armour Heights.

SCHOOL DAYS ARE RECALLED BY 150 OLD BOYS AND GIRLS

could, held double, and the less fortunate "pupils-of-half-a-day" were forced to stand around the wall.

R. F. Downey, B.A., B.Paed., took the chair as school master, and had as support F. E. Kerr, B.A., and City Inspector A. Mowat, B.A.—and it might be added that he needed the support with such an overgrown class.

School was opened in the regulation way, with the reading of the 103rd Psalm, after which the school master welcomed the pupils with his cheery "Good Morning" the reply to which nearly raised the roof, and sent a thrill through the entire crowd. Everybody was requested to register their names and addresses, though, Mr. Downey pointed out, it wasn't necessary for the ladies to put down their ages. Then began the calling of the roll, the most important feature of the whole morning. Mr. Downey handled this part of the program splendidly, calling the names off as they were registered, asking each person to stand and answer the call, giving their address and, if they were married ladies, their maiden name. This took up about an hour of the all too short morning as well over 150 men and women, boys and girls again for half a day, spoke up, said a few words, told where they were living and what they were doing. And scattered far and wide were the abodes of many of the proddals, many coming from as far as the both coasts and as far south as Texas.

Probably a few, a very few of the best known who spoke a few words were: — Lilly Pratt, Toronto; J. A. Fife, Edmonton, science master of the old collegiate; Art Mann, Duncan, B.C.; Mary A. Nichols, Ann Taylor; Orval [illegible] Patterson, Toronto; Orval Shortley, Detroit; Rev. Walter Turnbull, New York; E. H. D. Hall; Senator Fred Long, Minnesota; Sam Montgomery, Toronto; Howard Sackville, Dilley, Texas; Miss Aldridge; Mr. MacNeil, and Bert Guy of Winnipeg.

Besides these there were scores of others, yet all had the same message of appreciation of the splendid hospitality of the people of their old home town, and the trouble they had gone to to make it a real home coming. Many found the school somewhat changed, but were tickled to see it again, changed or not. One Old Boy said he never thought that the day would come when he would have brought to mind so vividly, the piece of poetry that was drilled into him at school, "Breathes there the man with soul so dead." This brought rounds of cheers from the rest of the class.

Tests in Spelling

Many of the pupils were given tests in spelling, arithmetic, algebra and ancient history, and a fair majority of them showed the master they still remembered their past teaching. Singing of the National anthem, followed by the Mizpah Benediction, brought the meeting to a close, only to have another reunion of everyone again outside, as old acquaintances were spied that had escaped former recognition.

Yes it was a morning that will last long in the memories of many an old pupil.

Following the session in the Central school, the gathering was taken to the auditorium of the Collegiate, where under the chairmanship of Inspector Mowat, several short addresses were given.

Principal Kenner Speaks

Principal Kenner, B.A., who has been with the staff since 1893, named over all the teachers who had taught in the Collegiate and gave a short history of the school, pointing out the many improvements that had taken place in the courses since the days when his audience had gone to school in the building.

Dr. Sanderson of Toronto, in his address, said he had never experienced such a thrill as he had this morning and that it was certainly worth coming a long way for.

T. J. Wallace of Withrow Ave., school, Toronto, told many side splitting yarns of old experiences that were familiar to a great many of those present, while J. A. Fife, Inspector at Edmonton, outlined in an interesting story, tales of school days and experiences since.

Mrs. W. R. Morris, of the Board of Education, on behalf of the Board welcomed all the old pupils back to their childhood haunts, after which the party was conducted through the school.

DEATH.

MARLATT.—On July 1st at the home of his daughter, Mrs. G. L. M. Kirkwood, 591 Bolivar Street, Peterborough, Doctor George A. Marlatt, formerly of St. Thomas, in his seventy-sixth year.

A service will be held at Comstock's Funeral Parlors at eight o'clock, Tuesday evening, July 2nd. Burial at St. Thomas on Wednesday afternoon.

Crowns With Laurel Our Greatest Pride--

The Men and Women Who Laid The Foundation and helped through the years to build up this city beautiful we have inherited

THERE wasn't much to be seen here a hundred years ago, but the rough and ready huts of the pioneers marked the site of a greatness they may have dreamed of. And even fifty years ago, Peterborough was still in the making, with its board sidewalks and muddy streets. Twenty-five years ago the work was well advanced, and to-day we enjoy the success of these thousands who labored so well. All honor to them!

We are holding open house; we are "at home" to the old boys and girls, some of whom helped outstandingly in the building of this community, all of whom are linked to us by ties of parenthood and sentiment. In a sense the city is theirs.

As we add stone upon stone in its building, let us ever recall with grateful appreciation the work and efforts of those who did their share and moved on—and those other thousands whose earthly home is forever in Little Lake cemetery and St. Peter's cemetery.

Peterborough honors its old boys and girls!

Transportation Helped to Build Peterborough

FIRST BIG RAILWAY BOOM STRUCK MIDLAND DISTRICT SEVENTY-SIX YEARS AGO

Ambitious Ideas Would Have Constructed Lines To Everywhere.

THE FIRST TRAIN.

Port Hope Line Opened With Ceremony On May 21, 1858.

The history of transportation is the history of civilization. Since the days when the first man shambled afoot through noisome jungles, through the long centuries when kings and peasants alike crawled along the ridge of the earth in creaking ox-wagons, down to the days when Stevenson invented the locomotive, and the automobile klaxon supplanted the clatter of horses hooves, Progress and Speed have matched strides.

It is not so many years since wheat was carried on men's backs from Peterborough to Port Hope to be ground into flour; it was but yesterday, as time of progress is measured, that the first train on the old Midland Railway pulled into the town....

And now Peterborough stands, almost the business centre of Ontario, at the junction of splendid highways, on the lines of two great railroads, and a strategic point on the Trent Canal. To these have been added the airplane and Peterborough is blessed with a splendid landing field, merely requiring development.

First Railway Boom

With the opening up of this district, there came to the minds of many local men, as well as others, the thought that railway connections between Peterborough and points east and west must necessarily prove feasible. As a result a veritable railway "boom" broke out between the years 1853 and 1885 and there were plans for the building of a railroad to Bobcaygeon, to the Sault, and to Young's Point (a radial line) as well as from Cobourg and Port Hope to Peterborough.

In 1852-53, a charter was obtained to build a line from Cobourg to Peterborough and the project of the Port Hope-Peterborough branch line was revived. Peterborough declined to take stock in this latter project but Lindsay and Ops township gave assistance and the road to Lindsay by Millbrook was built and put in operation.

Then came forth the town of Cobourg's proposal to construct a line from Cobourg to Peterborough and Marmora, and indeed it was placed in operation in 1854. But after lending a great impetus to the lumber export business in the district which it served, it experienced chronic trouble with the bridge over a section of Rice Lake and in 1857 it ceased operations. Efforts to revive this service in 1863 stopped short with the failure of attempts to build a permanent bridge in place of the troublesome one.

Line Opened

In 1857, the Port-Hope-Peterborough project cropped up, John Fowler, who later became its President, seeking to have the two towns subscribe to the building of a branch line from Millbrook to Peterborough. He proposed that it be a joint stock affair and together with George Tait of Toronto, subscribed £10,000, as did the town of Port Hope. Peterborough, after much deliberation subscribed £30,000, passing a by-law to that effect.

On May 21, of the following year, a train passed over the new branch line and on the following day, a great excursion was run from Port Hope to Peterborough. But it was as nothing compared with the free excursions which brought up 3,000 persons and returned carrying five thousand people. Men, women and children declared for themselves a holiday and the entire rolling stock of the railroad—three locomotives and forty cars —was required to transport them.

Railroading activities continued over this line, and in 1865 the same company saw fit to attempt a connection between Peterborough and Chemong. It proposed to have this latest branch line follow along the river, crossing at Dixon's dam. The road was actually built along by the gas plant, and up as far as the dam where it stopped owing to opposition from the Cobourg road which, under its charter, claimed a prior right. The charter expired in 1866 and when the Cobourg company was sold to the highest bidder, provision was made for any lines into Peterborough to go over the Chemong branch when and if completed. Eventually, the Port Hope line extended to Chemong, following along Bethune street and cutting through the hill at the Barnardo home, and at the same time, the line was extended across the river at Auburn and thence to Lakefield.

The next development of note came in 1878 after the revival of the Cobourg-Peterborough line. This line was put in operation by means of a boat service which extended to Harwood and thence by rail to Cobourg, and George A. Cox became President of the Midland Railway. The troublous days which followed brought with them an action of the council of Peterborough to gain payment of debentures but in October of this same year there was proposed by its promoters, a new station for the Midland railway at Peterborough and the town was asked to lend its assistance to the extent of $5,000. The new station would be 40 feet wide and 50 feet long with wings 60 feet by 90 feet and an engine house 30 feet by 20 feet. A by-law was passed by the town council granting $4,000, councillors McWilliams and Elder resigning as voicing their objections to the by-law being passed before being submitted to the people.

The new station was built notwithstanding, and its formal opening took place with much ceremony on November 22, 1878. Meanwhile, President Cox and Mayor Tool went to Bobcaygeon with a view to promoting a branch line between Peterborough and that village, and the Toronto-Ottawa line was taking shape as a likely project.

Road Was Profitable

Indicating that the Midland railway was making progress, the report of that company, submitted at the annual meeting on February 23, 1880, showed profit of $10,397.87 and substantial additions to the rolling stock as well. The citizens of Port Hope entertained President Cox as the guest of honor at a large civic banquet in that town and about four days later, Mr Cox addressed a mass meeting in the Peterborough Opera House relative to the building of the "Missing Link" directly between Peterborough and Omemee. He estimated that it would cost $226,000 to build and equip the line and his company asked, in view of its already owing Peterborough approximately $65,000, a rebate of $40,000 in lieu of assistance to build the line.

In November, 1881, Mr. Cox arranged for the Midland railway to take over into one system and consolidate them into the Midland Railway of Canada, the Toronto and Nipissing railway, the Grand Junction railway, the Whitby and Port Perry Railway and the Victoria Railway. Meanwhile, the Ontario-Quebec Railway bought the land and leased the contracts for a station between Dahousie and Wolfe streets, west of George street.

On March 3, 1882, work began on the missing link and all the bridge trestles were finished by June 1 of the following year. Two years later the first train passed over the now-complete "Missing Link" railway from Peterborough to Lindsay, inaugurating a through line from Peterborough to Toronto by way of Lindsay and Blackwater and the old Nipissing line. Later there was talk of a line from Peterborough to Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie; the C.P.R. came through and the proposed radial line to Young's Point died a natural death.

ADAM SCOTT FIRST HERE

Born in Edinburgh in 1796 and Came to Canada in 1818.

IMMENSELY STRONG.

Adam Scott, the first settler on the present site of the City of Peterborough, was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1796, and was a millwright by trade. In 1812 he left England for America, and settled in Delaware County, New York State; he remained there for about six years, working at his trade. While there, he married a daughter of J. Mann, of Yorkshire, England, by whom he had three sons and three daughters.

In 1818 he came to Canada, and, locating at Port Hope, worked at his trade, and built a saw-mill. When he came out from Scotland he had about $4,000. He lost nearly all of this in building, by contract, a mill at Cobourg for old Squire Henry. In the spring of 1820 he came to what is now Peterborough, the site of which was then covered with a dense growth of huckleberry bushes, interspersed with a few pines. The first thing he erected was a small log shanty, 18 by 20 feet, which he covered with black ash bark. Then he put up a saw and grist mill, which was of the most primitive kind. The was an "up and down" saw, and the mill-stones were taken from a neighboring quarry. The few settlers who had located in Smith Township, two years before, gave the place the name of "Scott's Plains."

His daughter Jeanette was the first person born in what is now Peterborough; this was in 1820.

Adam Scott removed from "Scott's Plains" in 1827, having lost all his property through getting in debt with John Brown, of Port Hope, and he located on the Hagerman farm, one mile east of Port Hope, where he resided for two years. He then removed to the Township of Cavan, where he followed his trade. He died February 7th, 1838. Adam Scott was an immensely strong man. He stood six feet four inches in his stocking feet and weighed two hundred and sixty pounds. He could shoulder a barrel of salt or cider with perfect ease. His wife died at "Scott's Plains" in 1825, of the fever and cholera which then prevailed among the Peter Robinson immigrants. He was asked by the Hon. Peter Robinson to accept the immigration agency, but he declined.

He owned twelve acres of land surrounding his house, and was frequently urged to purchase more, but would not do so, as he thought the place would never amount to anything.

He often crossed the River Otonabee in the summer season on stilts, to reach his oxen, which were pastured where the Village of Ashburnham now is.

One of Adam Scott's sons, also named Adam Scott, who was born at Port Hope, December 21st, 1818, lived during the middle portion of the past century in the Village of Millbrook, where he followed his father's trade of millwright. He filled the office of Reeve of Manvers and Cavan for several years. On March 6th, 1840, he was married to a daughter of James Holmes, of Cavan.

RUBIDGE WAS ABLE HELPER OF ROBINSON

FIRST REGISTRAR.

Saw Naval Service Under Lord Nelson—Many Adventures.

Charles Rubidge, the noted friend and coadjutor of the Hon. Peter Robinson, and first Registrar of the County of Peterborough, was for many years one of the chief promotors of the rising interests of the town. He was the son of Margaret and Robert Rubidge, and was born on April 20th, 1787, in the parish of St. George's-in-the-East, London. In October, 1796, he entered the navy as a midshipman on board the Arrow, Sloop of War. He saw much service under Lord Nelson and Lord Cochrane, the latter publicly congratulating Mr. Rubidge, then a lieutenant, on his gallantry in action. At the destruction of the enemy's fleet at the Basque Roads in 1809 he was severely wounded in the right leg. At the beginning of the American War of 1812, not knowing that war had been declared, Commander Rubidge had landed near Annapolis, but was honorably released, as his arrest was, under the circumstances, not considered justifiable by the American authorities. Great as were his services, the gate of promotion was in those days closed against all who did not hold the key of political interest, and after the peace which followed Napoleon's downfall at Waterloo every effort was made to reduce as far as possible the number of officers in both army and navy. This led to the emigration to Canada of many retired officers of both services, who in most cases formed a most valuable element, socially and intellectually, in the growth of English-speaking Canada. A number of these settled in Peterborough County, chiefly around Lakefield, Stony Lake, and the neighborhood. It, too, after happened that the habits of aristocratic indulgence, engendered by the life in camp and barrack, were transplanted into a country to which they were little suited. Work of any kind was looked on as degrading, and the inevitable result followed in ruin and the loss of self-respect. But such was not the character of Captain Rubidge when in June, 1819, he emigrated to Upper Canada with his wife and three children. This life was for many years one of hard work, manual as well as mental; how energetically he assisted the Hon. Peter Robinson in the early settlement of Peterborough is well known. The story of his first settlement in Peterborough County can, it is confidently felt, be best put before our readers in the simple yet graphic words of this brave old officers himself:

"In those days there was no conveyance from La Chine to Prescott except by Bateau or Durham-boats, and only two steamboats plied between Quebec and Montreal and they took two days and a half to accomplish the distance; the names were the "Quebec" and the "Swiftsure." On landing from the schooner at Quebec we met with a warm reception from our worthy old friend, Captain Boswell, R.N., and his family, and received houseroom under their hospital roof until the spring of 1820. During the winter I employed two men to put up the logs of a house, and in the spring, on the 6th of May, I took my wife and three children out into the bush. Mr. George Kent being the first settler in Otonabee, I was the next. Nothing more than the bare walls of my house were up and the shingle roof on. At once I began to clear off about an acre of land and got in some potatoes, Indian corn, turnips, etc., and through the summer and autumn employed two Americans to chop and clear off fabout four acres more, whilst my time was occupied in preparing my log house for the winter, doing all the carpentering work myself. The late Mr. Covert, and the Hon. Chief Justice Draper, C. B., came out to see us in June, the latter at the time thinking to put up a shanty on one of my wild lots in which to pursue his studies, but all the charms of settling in the woods faded away before the next morning. We had all to sleep above, only a few loose boards being placed for bedsteads; the house was quite open, without door or windows, and the mosquitoes and blackflies were as bad as they well could be. At once I was placed on the Commission of the Peace, and am now, in 1870, the oldest magistrate in the whole of the old Newcastle District, which now forms the Counties of Northumberland, Durham, Peterborough and Victoria."

It is pleasing to be able to record that Captain Rubidge's services to Canada did not, like those he rendered in England, pass without due recognition. Governor Maitland, a man who, whatever may have been his political errors, was certainly most sincerely desirous of promoting the welfare of the Province, was so pleased with the skill displayed in the construction of a road which Captain Rubidge had cut through the woods from Rice Lake to Peterborough, and now called Keene Road, that he presented him with a town and park lot of considerable value. In 1831, Captain Rubidge was appointed by Lord Seaton, the Governor-General of Canada as Immigrant Agent at Peterborough, and, during the course of that year, located in Peterborough County, four thousand people from England, Scotland, and Ireland, giving general satisfaction by his persistence in a strict impartiality, which was by no means a general characteristic of those at that time entrusted with the allotment of government grant lands. The closing passages of this fine old sailor's modest autobiography, dated 1871, is worthy of quotation:

"I conclude this statement of some of the events of my life, with most devout thanks to Almighty God for His goodness to me and all my family. For twenty years, I served afloat as an officer in the navy, and during that time had many narrow escapes from death. Now, in 1870, I am in my eighty-fourth year, and am one of the oldest officers in the British Navy. From 1819 to 1841 I made a farm and worked hard on it, until appointed Registrar of the County of Peterborough, which situation I still hold."

From the date of his autobiography, 1870, Captain Rubidge continued to hold the registrarship until his death in January, 1873. He left three sons and three daughters. Of the sons, the eldest, Charles, father of George W. Rubidge, tobacconist, Peterborough, died in 1870; the second son, John, is a farmer in Otonabee Township (this was written in 1884); the third and youngest, Walter Rubidge, resides at Brantford, where he occupies the position of Clerk of the Court. The three daughters of Captain Rubidge are: Mrs. Clementi, wife of the Rev. V. Clementi, Peterborough; Mrs. Dunsford, wife of Hartley Dunsford, Registrar of the County of Victoria, Lindsay; and Mrs. Ord, widow of the late George Ord of Otonabee, now residing in Peterborough.—(1884).

It is a rarity now to see a horse and cart on the city streets. Only milk distributors are unanimous in holding to the old delivery system—and they are out so early of a morning that few see them. This is Alderman Walter Stocker and his splendid horse. The picture was taken many years ago.

History of Peterborough's Public Buildings

THE POST OFFICE

The growth of a community is always reflected in its postal service and its Post Office—from corner store to individual structures, meagre, substantial and architecturally handsome—through the several gradations onward, from the advantages of a weekly mail to the superlative convenience of a twice-daily delivery to one's very door, such as this city enjoys.

Almost one hundred and two years ago Peterborough first saw inaugurated a weekly mail to be "called for", of course, at a Post office in a store owned by James Grey Bethune— a little log house called "The Red Store," and located at the southeast corner of the market square facing the sites on which the Duffus Garage and Empress Hotel are now standing. Both store and Post Office were managed by Thomas Valentine Tripper who was succeeded as postmaster by James B. Ferguson with an office in a small square-cut frame house close by "The Red Store" to whose southern side it was annexed.

The post office was next located in an old log building known as the Government House, situated on what is now Water street, formerly occupied by Sir Peter Robinson and Captain Rubidge, to whose Immigration activities the settlement of this county of Peterborough on a promising scale, was fostered.

The "Government House" postal headquarters were in charge of Ephrian Sanford, who died by his own hand in 1843. He, in turn, was followed by S. J. Carver as postmaster, during whose term the office was transferred to a neater frame structure on the east side of Queen street, where it remained until 1850. Thence it was twice removed to meet growing requirements until after the great fire in 1861, subsequent to which the white brick building at the north eastern corner of Brock and George streets, now occupied by one of the Canadian Packing company stores, with the Gospel Hall overhead, until recently, was built for a post office. There, Lieut.-Colonel H. C. Rogers presided over his post office as he did so efficiently over the present office at the corner of Hunter and Water streets with Daniel Burritt, later of Toronto, as his assistant. Colonel Rogers was of the celebrated United Empire Loyalist family of Warrior Rogers and an officer commanding a troop of the Prince of Wales' Royal Canadian Dragoon Guard.

The present post office was erected in the year 1888 and has since been rearranged to some extent owing to the inauguration of the postal carrier service. For a time, the postmastership was a Federal patronage appointment, and so it was that with the death of Colonel Rogers, the Liberals being in power and the Hon. James R. Stratton being Peterborough's representative at Ottawa, A. H. Stratton secured the office. With the return of the Conservatives to power under Sir Robert Borden, premier, and with J. H. Burnham, Conservative, having defeated the Hon. J. R. Stratton, A. H. Stratton was retired and the appointment went to the late James Edgar who, in turn, was succeeded by John Corkery.

Mr. Corkery retired from office in 1924, since which time, the present postmaster, Chares Lacheur has conducted the local office. Speaking to The Examiner the other day, Mr. Corkery proved himself the possessor of a most retentive memory. He recalled the early days when, as an assistant to the late Mr. Carver, he watched the various stage coaches start out with the mails on their journeys to Apsley, going to that centre on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and returning on the alternate days. Similar service was maintained between Peterborough and Lakefield, Burleigh Falls, Warsaw and other smaller places in the district.

THE ARMOURIES

The present structure that is known as the armouries and situated opposite Confederation Square, like Peterborough's Public Library did not always claim such a magnificent building, but had its beginnings in a very humble manner away back in the year 1866, in the form of an old drill shed which gave way in 1908 to the modern armoury.

The first drill shed was built in the above mentioned year by James L. Hughes and was one of a number of similar size and construction that were built at that time.

Whether the local building was better constructed than the others, it is not known, but it was certain that within a few years most of them were wrecked by the weight of the snow crashing in the roofs while the first home of the Peterborough militia remained intact and defied the weather for forty two-years.

In all that time there were no important changes in the building. It had been strengthened inside, and wooden buttresses placed on the exterior, at the eastern side. The officer's quarters were built at the expense of the officers themselves and the heads of the 57th regiment were very comfortable, in their rooms in the north end of the building.

At the time of the construction of the armouries, or more properly the drill shed, the militia in Peterborough consisted of two companies—Number "I" Infantry company under Captain Poole, who later became Colonel Poole, and Number "2" company under Captain Kennedy who afterward was Major Kennedy. By a general militia order, in 1867, the 57th Regiment Peterborough rangers was formed and comprised companies in Peterborough county and Hastings.

Among some of the outside regiments that were received in the historic old drill shed were The Queen's Own Rifles of Toronto, The Governor General's footguards of Ottawa who had been here on two occasions and the fifteenth Regiment of Belleville. The most distinguished and famous soldier that it knew, probably was Lord Dundonald the veteran of Ladysmith, who was here on the presentation of the colors to the 57th regiment. It was the scene of recruiting for the South African War, and the Northwest Rebellion, and was associated with the military life of Peterborough for over 40 years

It was in a large measure due to the untiring efforts of His Worship H. Rush, then mayor, and Colonel Stevenson that Peterborough was graced with a new Armoury. The contract was let in February 1907 to G. A. Proctor, who was then mayor of Sarnia and who undertook the work at once. Mr. Proctor had many large buildings to his credit and had won the reputation of carrying out his contracts with care and dispatch, his experience serving him in good stead.

Wednesday, April 22nd, 1908, will be a day long remembered by the military men of the city. On this date the corner stone of the new building was laid by the Honorable F. W. Borden K.C.M.G., Minister of Militia.

Prior to the laying of the corner stone the men were inspected by Sir Frederick Borden in Central Park. The 57th Regiment and the 24th field battery saluted him as he arrived at the park, after which he made a brief inspection, assisted by Colonel W. D. Gordon of Kingston, then commanding Eastern Ontario. The staff of the inspection party consisted of Col. Gordon, Col. Young D.A.A.G., of Kingston, Col. McNaughton, Cobourg, of the 10th brigade C.F.A. and Lieutenant-Colonel Massey of Kingston.

The 57th regiment, numbering 120 men, acted as a guard of honor to Sir Frederick. The officers in command of the guard were Capt. Mills, Capt. Hounsell, and Lieuts. M. Comstock and F. Neal. With this regiment at the laying of the corner stone were also the veterans of '66 to the number of 30, the 24th field battery under the command of Major T. W. H. Young, and Capt. W. Ackerman. The 3rd Dragoons were represented by Major S. T. H. Johnson, R. Cleghorn and Capt. Medd.

A canopied pavilion had been erected beside that part of the building where the corner stone was to be laid. Those who occupied seats in this reserved section were: Sir Frederick Borden, Col. J. W. Miller, Mrs. Miller, Col. Arthur Stevenson and Mrs. Stevenson, Hon. J. R. Stratton and Mrs. Stratton, His Worship Mayor Rush and Mrs. Rush, Major L. M. Hayes and Mrs. Hayes, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Hall, Rev. J. G. Potter, and Mrs. Potter, Major E. B. Clegg and Mrs. Clegg, Mrs. (Rev.) Coon and Miss Myrtle Coon, Misses Marion and Maud Rush, Miss Peck, Mrs. Palmer, Miss Lillie, Miss Belcher, Mrs. F. Scneider, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. P. J. Austin, Mrs. W. C. Austin, Dr. Burnham, Dr. Langfelt, T. E. Bradburn, Rev. Canon Davidson, Messrs Wm. Yelland, Jas. Stevenson, Robert Fair, Sheriff Hall, G. A. Proctor of Sarnia, Wm. Langford, John Belcher, E. H. D. Hall, A. P. Pousette, S. R. Armstrong, Ald. Buller, Ald. Phelan, Ald. Gillespie, Col. H. S. Rogers, Col. J. Z Rogers, Rev. Wm. Major, Col. Halliday, Major T. H. W. Young, Capt.-Adjt. W. Ackerman, Lt. R. H. Leary, Lt. T. J. McDonough, Col. McNaughton, Robt. Edminson, Col. W. D. Gordon, Col. Young and Lt. Col. Massey.

The speakers for the occasion were: Col. Stevenson, Mayor Rush, R. R. Hall, M.P., Reverend Canon Davidson, the Chaplain of the 57th who offered a prayer after which Col. Stevenson presented the Hon. Minister of Militia with a silver trowel as a memento of the laying of the corner stone of a structure which would be a credit to the country when completed.

With the assistance of A. Simpson of Sarnia, contracting mason of the work and A. Webb, the stone was placed on a layer of cement after which the Hon. Mr. Borden said: "I declare this corner stone to be well and truly laid." Then Sir Frederick addressed the gathering on behalf of the headquarter's staff.

A Gala Occasion

The Peterborough Examiner of June 22nd 1908, speaks of the reception held in the drill shed at the close of the ceremony as a second triumph for the military. "It is many a day since the old gloomy drill shed wore such a gala appearance and it is almost an aeon since the Peterborough militia held a reception of yesterday's importance," the paper stated, "Feminity follows the flag and the success of this social occasion was due in a large sense to the ladies, to the officer's wives who assisted in the arrangements and to the other ladies who by their presence showed their interest in the militia and brightened up the event immeasurably."

The visitors who were introduced to the minister of Militia were announced by Sgt. Major Brittain, and were received by Col. Stevenson and Mrs. Stevenson. The catering for the occasion was the work of T. H. Hooper.

The evening was given over to a banquet in honor of the Minister of Militia when the citizens and the soldiers gathered around the festive board.

The armories when completed was soon called into use that was of real historical interest. In 1914 the World War broke out and this building served as headquarters for the 57th and later the 93rd and 247 Battalions, and part of the 8th C.M.R., for a span of time. It served as a recruiting station, patriotic rallies and in fact filled the need that was created by wartime activity, and many a brave man marched from its doors never to return. In this sense it is one of the greatest memorials of bravery and self sacrifice that Peterborough has. There is nothing artificial about it, it was a participant in the trials and tribulation of those dark days.

The structure is also one of Peterborough's truly public buildings. It has been the scene of conventions, Automobile Shows, and other numerous functions. In this sense it has truly been the centre of many a city interest since the time of its completion.

The physical aspects of the structure have not changed since its completion and it stands today the same as when it opened, but the memory of the dingy drill shed still lingers with loving memory in the minds of many of the older military men of the city.

THE COURT HOUSE

The history of this important building dates back to the second day of June in the year of 1838, when a meeting of the magistrates of the new Coleborne district was held in Peterborough at the government school house for the purpose of naming a building committee for the court house and jail.

The Honorable T. A. Stewart M.L.C. was called to the chair and John Darcus, esq., was appointed as secretary of this important meeting. On subsequent motions the following gentlemen were appointed officers and members of the building committee, of whom three would make a quorum: Hon. Thomas A. Stewart, William H. Wrighton, Edward Duffy, Ephraim Sanford, Robert P. Madge, Edward S. Hickson.

On a motion of C. Moe, Esq., seconded by E. Duffy Esq., the committee was restricted to an expenditure of 4,000 pounds on the new buildings, but subsequently, on finding that the tenders for the work, offered agreeably to the plans adopted, exceeded that amount, second meeting of the magistrates was held, at which on the motion of James Wallis Esq., seconded by R. Dennistoun, Esq., the Building Committee was empowered to proceed to the extent of 6,000 pounds.

At the first meeting, the magistrates, instructed the building committee to direct the Clerk of the Peace, of the Newcastle District to add one penny in the pound to the assessment roll of the proposed District of Coleborne for that year (1838) pursuant to the act establishing the said proposed District.

The building committee at its second meeting arranged to meet every Friday for the dispatch of business. It also entered into negotiations with several of the provincial banks as well as with private individuals to procure loans of money to carry on the work until the taxes of the district should be available for that purpose. Some of the sources of these funds were as follows: Commercial Bank, O. Morrow, Hon. John Kirby, Mrs. Elizabeth Fowler, Rev. Francis Kirkpatrick, Hon. Z. Burnham.

The sums procured, lessened as they were by discount and interest, did not suffice for the completion of the buildings, but several of the contractors accepted the Committee's debentures for sums varying from 100 to 1,000 pounds and these as they were matured were met by taxes levied on the new district in subsequent years.

In a short time plans and specifications for the new buildings were submitted to the committee by Joseph Scobell and Walter Sheridan. That of the former met with the most favor and was awarded the first prize while Mr. Sheridans entitled him to the second prize. The Hon. T. A. Stewart was delegated to proceed to Toronto and submit the plans to the Chief Justice who confirmed the decision of the committee. Some alteration in minor details to the plans were adopted, which occasioned an additional outlay and which exceeded the sum that had been stipulated as the committee's limit but the magistrates endorsed its proceedings as well as did the public.

The tenders of Messers Thomas Harper and D. Fletcher for 800 cords of stone at 14s. 9d. each, was accepted, provided they furnish all quarried stone.

On 21st day of August, 1835, John Reid Esq. P.L.S., reported to the committee in reference to a survey of the government appropriation of ground which consists in all of seven acres, lots 5, 6, and 7 of which would be required for the intended buildings.

The foundation had not been excavated, and the grounds were still covered with bush and trees when it became known that His Excellency Sir George Arthur, Lieut. Governor of Upper Canada, was about to visit Peterborough. As it was desirable that the foundation stone be laid by so distinguished a personage, Mr. Scobell was requested to open six feet of ground and to have placed on the spot one load of stone so the ceremony could be performed. The chairman was instructed to solicit this favor through His Excellency's secretary on his arrival and should he consent, the Rev. C. T. Wade was to be requested to offer a short blessing on the success of the undertaking.

An Early Start

His Excellency cheerfully consented, but his time was limited so the committee met at its room at 6:30 in the morning of the 25th of August 1838, waited upon the governor at 7, and at 7:30 His Excellency and suite accompanied by the building committee proceeded to the ground and in the presence of numerous spectators laid the corner stone of the new buildings. The Reverend Mr. Wade also offered up an impressive and appropriate prayer.

The following articles were placed by His Excellency beneath the stone in the foundation of the southwest corner: A parchment scroll telling of the dedication, the names of the building committee, a British shilling of the reign of George IV, 1829, a sixpence, a penny and a half penny of the reign of William IV. The lettering of the scroll was executed in elegant styles by our townsman, Ivan O'Beirne.

Tenders were received from time to time for the erection and completion of several parts of the court house building and jail, the entire cost of which, including alterations and extra work amounting to over 7,000 pounds.

During the progress of the work, meetings of the magistrates of the proposed district were several times held to advise with and assist the committee. Towards the close of the work Ephraim Sanford was appointed treasurer of the committee in place of Mr. Duffy who had removed from the province; and D. Griffith Esq., was appointed a member of the building committee.

The walls and the roof of the court house and jail were complete in 1839, and the work on the interior of the building complete when the building was handed over to the committee by E. Chamberlain on 16th of November 1840, but it was not finally accepted by the committee until the following May.

The Jail was not entirely finished until the summer of 1842, owing to a deficit in the written agreement, by which the contractor, Edward Lee, claimed that the plastering was not included in his contract; and the season of 1841 was so far advanced when this became known, that the plastering of the jail had to be deferred until the following spring.

At length on 27th of December, 1841, and after three years of arduous duty, the building committee was finally relieved of its task. At a meeting of magistrates held that day, its accounts were examined and declared correct and a vote of thanks was tendered to the gentlemen composing the building committee, to the treasurer and the secretary for their indefatigable exertions in carrying the object of their appointment to completion.

An interesting highlight in the history of this building was the finding of an engraved plate in Toronto. The plate was for turning out coupons of five shillings and states that these were issued by the Coleborne district for the purpose of raising funds for the erection of a court house and a jail in Peterborough. The plate was one from which the debentures of that time were issued. This was in 1882, on January 7th.

On March 13th, 1885 the first steps were made to beautify the grounds in front of the court house and make it as a public park, the forerunner of Victoria Park. The Horticultural Society approached the council and made the proposition to improve the grounds. The council agreed to lease for twenty-one years at seventy-five dollars a year and also decided to expend $300.00.

James Stepeson added further to the plan of improving the grounds by offering to erect a fountain suitable to the park, at his own expence. The matter was referred to a committee which was given power to act.

From the year 1885 until the disastrous fire in December, 1916 that destroyed the Quaker Oats building and gutted the court house, this latter building did not change to any great and appreciable extent. The court house was regarded as invulnerable to fire from the outside, but like the heel of Achilles it had its vital spot and when the tiny brand from the Quaker Oats building lodged in a wooden crevice in the eaves at the northeast corner of the building and ate its way under the tin roofing, disaster soon threatened. The only vital spot was in the wooden eaves and practically the first cinder lodged there.

The flames swept under the roof and across the broad court room to which section the firemen confined the destructive forces of the fire. The thick walls also helped to save the building in preventing the fire from spreading, and they suffered damage from smoke and water only.

The lawyers' room, the county council room, the grand jury room and the offices underneath, except the county clerk's office and on the north side, were practically untouched except by water. Many of the volumes in the law library were frozen together and many were unsalvagable.

Work was started at once to renovate the damage suffered to the building and the re-decorated court-room was formally dedicated at the opening of the June sittings on the 11th of that month in 1918.

With his honor Judge Huyke on the bench were Warden Anderson and Canon J. C. Davidson. Others present were as follows: D. W. Dumble, K. C., Crown Attorney, G. W. Hatton, K. C., E. A. Peck, F. D. Kerr, O. A. Langley, J. H. Burnham, at that time Member of Parliament, W. J. Johnson, J. L. Goodwill, V. J. McElderry, G. N. Gordon and Joseph Wearing.

In regard to the new court room, The Examiner of that date states: "The county council is to be congratulated upon the results of its work. Before deciding upon the rearrangement of the room and the fittings to be provided, Reeve Anderson visited the court houses in Toronto and other cities in the province, adopting some of the ideas that were seen and improving upon others."

Since the time of the fire new offices have been built into the building, such as the registrars office but on the whole the building remains practically the same as it did after the renovation made compulsory by the fire.

Standing in its commanding position overlooking the beautiful Victoria Park it serves as a symbol of justice as well as to recall the pioneer days and the tasks that were endured in its erection. It is a wonderful old building.

AROUND TOWN FORTY YEARS AGO

The year 1889 stands out as a sharp salient in the chart of Peterborough's progress. It was a period of substantial growth and accomplishment. New buildings expanded the community's investment, and stimulated its confidence. The market hall with its ground floor stores and arcade was constructed, completing the block on the east side of George Street between Charlotte and Simcoe Streets; and the Dominion government committed itself to the erection of the present customs office on the south east corner of George and Charlotte Streets.

The Nicholls and St. Joseph's hospitals were built that year, also the north ward school, with alterations to the south ward school and the Collegiate Institute. These were notable social gains for the old town, in the provision of ampler accommodation for education and for the care of the sick. The new buildings of that year represented a total cost of $227,500 with $54,300 in Ashburnham.

Railways Come and Go

A new railway through Smith township from Peterborough to Chemong Lake was put into operation in 1889, largely for the transportation of timber and lumber from the Kawartha Lakes forests. It afforded also a delightful and popular excursion route by rail and boat to Bobcaygeon, Jacob's Island, Burleigh and other resorts. The first outing a few days after the railway was opened was the picnic of local Masonic Lodges. A few weeks later the rails and other rusted iron parts of the old Cobourg railway were brought to Peterborough on a scow for sale as junk in Toronto. So much for the hopeful and courageous vision of the men of property in those days of test and trial and inexorable flux! The Chemong Railway in turn served a brief utility, and it, too, was torn up and scrapped; but its roadbed still reaches across the Smith farmlands to the shore of Chemong Lake, where its long wharf once stretched out into the deeper water, then a lively depot of industry and business and youth's gaiety.

Nine Hour Day for Labor

Another social advancement in 1889 was Labor's nine-hour day victory for the building trades, the town's workmen and others. The leadership in that achievement was chiefly set by John J. Hartley and the late Adam Dawson, then members of the town Council. Much of the encouragement to the main body of Labor came from the bricklayers and masons, who spurred and stiffened the wishes of the less compact union of carpenters, and carried the corporation laborers along to share in the advantage of the shorter work day.

At the same time some of the merchants proposed that they close their shops during the summer months at 8 p. m. instead of the immemorial 10 o'clock. And apparently they went through with that precedent, convincing themselves that retailing should not be an endless servitude.

New Age Of Electricity

Peterborough's pulse was also quickened to the new industrial era stirring with nascent life beneath the community's old familiar surface. The novelty of Bell's telephone and Edison's electric light was wearing off, and new wonders were crowding to the front of the stage. Signs of the passing of the old order were becoming plain to all men, and complete surrender to the electrical age awaited only the practical improvement and refinement of its new and revolutionary machines. Even in 1889 the Examiner still made note of the electrification of business shops.

On the street and in the town Council an electric street railway was discussed as more than a possibility.

The Busy Factories

Lumber mills flourished up and down the Otonabee River, but the people depended chiefly for employment on the Peter Hamilton Company, the William Hamilton Company, the Central Bridge Company, the Lock Works and the Auburn Woollen Mills. That year the Bridge Works, of which W. H. Law was proprietor, doubled its capacity, and boasted a total floor space of 231,000 square feet. It also installed its own dynamo to light its shops and yards. The main trunk of the old factory still is to be seen between Dalhousie and Sherbrooke Streets, east of George Street, but its towering brick chimney is no more, the first of Peterborough's industrial spires.

Perseverance and a resurgent hope revived the Board of Trade again in 1889, and while we lost the old Stove Works on Townsend Street and also a woollen mill, and a pump factory we were willing to bonus decided not to locate here, we gained the Carbon works, which afterward began manufacture in the old stove foundry premises.

Laborers Paid $1.25 to $1.50

Laborers were paid $1.25 to $1.50 a day and were demanding $1.75; but on the other hand you could get six dinner tickets for $1.25 at Chamberlain's restaurant, and Elliott and Tierney indicated the cost of living level with such prices as these: 5 pounds of raisins for 25c; 5 pounds of prunes 25c; 6 pounds of rice 25c; 6 pounds of Japan tea for $1. And for another dollar you could buy a dozen bottles of Calcutt's ale or porter.

Politics was almost an art and knew no vacations. After the session in 1889 J. R. Stratton spent a week in the north country telling his remoter constituents what it was all about, in other words keeping his fences stout and sound.

Bradburn's Opera House, now Victoria Hall, offered the best theatrical and musical entertainment then available "on the road"; Crossley and Hunter, the evangelists, enlisted hundreds of converts during their services at George Street Methodist church, and denounced the evils of that day, very much now as then; the Scott Act experiment with prohibition was repealed and the temperance sentiment of the community fell back upon the license system of the Dunkin Act. And the tariff was a perennial controversy on the hustings and in the press.

Heyday of the Grange

Farmers and the Labor tradesmen were probably more solidly organized in 1889 than they are today. The Grange bound the rural people together in a strong association. On January 30th of that year the Northumberland, Durham and Peterborough division of the Grange met in the Snowden House, and decided to discontinue their divisional reports for the more direct connection and communication with their Dominion executive.

That same day the District Council of the Knights of Labor were in session here from Oshawa, Uxbridge, Cannington, Lindsay, Port Perry, Midland, Gravenhurst and other towns. Their principal activity then was an effort to extend and consolidate the nine-hour day. J. J. Hartley returned that evening from Cleveland, where he had been a delegate to the Bricklayers and Masons' convention.

The machine at that time had not encroached upon the domain which men's muscles and hands had toilfully held supreme for centuries, with the aid of a few mechanical inventions, the best of which were rather crude instruments when compared with the marvelous equipment in the factories of our present day.

Stage Coach to Apsley

There were buses then, too, but they were only a slight variant of the old stage coach of the covered wagon era. Thomas Eastland used to advertise in the Examiner his "Burleigh Stage Line" as leaving Snowden's Hotel at 7 a. m. every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and leaving Elmhirst's hotel at Apsley on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 6.45 a. m. Intermediate points of call were Lakefield, Young's Point and Burleigh Falls.

Railway travel must have been comparatively cheap, for Cox (George A.) and Davis, G. T. R. agents, advertised a trip to Detroit and return for $6. Men were going into business and some others into bankruptcy. Fate seemed whimsical and casual in casting its favors and withholding them, or even in allotting misfortune. H. A. Mulhearn, the miller, bought the T. Menzies property up George Street, where Mr. V. Eastwood lived more recently. The favorite brands of tobacco were Puritant cut plug, and Athlete and Derby cigarettes.

Police Were Busy

Chief Roszel directed the police force, Joe Stewart, Bob Adams and Charlie McGinty, and their days and especially their nights were full of trouble. The cells were seldom untenanted, and when drunks were scarce, tramps were numerous. In fact, like the other poor they were aways with us. Their rendezvous was Burnham's Point, or the Engleburn shore close by the C.P.R. Some of them favored the cut east of the C. P. R. bridge, where they cooked their "mulligan", within easy reach of the next freight they decided to catch.

Liquor was cheap and potent, and unfortunately too many men were weak of will and strong of appetite. Street fights were of almost daily and nightly occurrence. Bleary and black eyes patched up faces and swathed heads, passed in procession throughout the year before Magistrate Dumble, so that around town it became a byword, his customary penalty "$2 or 10 days".

The tempo of the town was geared to the horse and buggy speed, as contrasted with today, and although sociability was generally warm and inclusive and social life was active and enterprising, there was an element of roughness, of almost besotted brutality, that has been gradually ironed out and smoothed away by our increasing sophistication. If we are not more prudent than our grandfathers and fathers, at least we have gained in wisdom, of a sort.

Women's Changed Status

Of the change in women's estate a volume could be written. The home was still their sphere. Business offered them meagre opportunities. Of course, some might teach school, and work in stores and offices, others were engaged in the tailor and millinery shops, but an odium attached to spinsterhood, and girls' ambition was to marry at an early age and have children. No respectable girl drank liquor or smoked cigarettes; but, for all the restrictions, they had a way with them.

Their dresses were of a general length that exposed only the tips of their boots; their jackets or waists were tight fitting, revealing every line of their figure, their skirts swept the dusty board sidewalks. Fashion concentrated its attention and so-called art on the meretriciously scandalous bustle, a deliberate distortion that is utterly beyond the understanding of this short-skirted, unpadded, boyish or slat-figured generation.

Music Hits in 1889

J. R. Stratton bought the Peterborough Bookstore in Feburary, 1889 from A. L. Davis and Co. and one of his advertisements was a list of instrumenta and vocal music filling two columns of the Examiner. Tin Pan Alley was evidently just as prolific and its product just as evanescent as today. Some of the pieces apparently popular then were: Is That Mr. Reilly?; When the Robins Nest Again; Brannigan's Band; Don't Go Out Tonight Father Dear; Tommy Make Room For Your Uncle; What Is Home Without A Mother; Your Pocketbook's Your Friend; Come Sit By My Side, Little Darling; Mollie's Answer.

A people's sentiments are written in its songs; and the sentiments never essentially change.

Athletes Who Became Clergymen

Two young Peterborough men who were prominent in sports here in 1889 were Ed Pearson and Joe Phelan. Pearson played third base on the P.A.A.A. baseball team and in that year entered the Methodist church ministry. Later he returned to Peterborough as Rev. E. A. Pearson, pastor of George Street church of which his father, Rev. M. L. Pearson, was Minister in 1889.

Joe Phelan's game was lacrosse, and for a time he was secretary of the Riversides. He was a smart and sturdy player. As time passed he came back to Peterborough as Rev. C. J. Phelan of St. Peter's Cathedral, and is now parish priest at Campbellford.

Phelan and Pearson were clean strenuous sportsmen, and in their life vocations have been earnest, devoted churchmen.

HOSPITALS HAVE SERVED PETERBOROUGH WELL

The City of Peterborough has been well served with regard to hospital care of its sick. The three big institutions; Nicholls, St. Joseph's and the Queen Mary Isolation . Hospital have taken care of its ailing citizens for many decades past.

As the Act to incorporate the Nicholls Hospital Trust was assented to on March 25th, 1886, this hospital has the place of priority with regard to establishment.

The following is the history of Nicholls Hospital, taken from a booklet published in 1909:

"Nicholls Hospital, upon its situation of eminence, and in its continuous mission of healing, constitutes a monument to its founder more lasting than pillars of marble, or monuments of brass. This hospital and the work it does is an enduring perpetuation and practical application, from hour to hour, and from day to day, of the noble spirit of charity and good will which inspired Mrs. Charlotte J. Nicholls to so beneficently discharge the trust she felt reposed in her. Mrs. Nicholls was known to have long entertained the conviction that those to whom Almighty God has given the means, should to the best of their ability, use opportunities for doing good, and apply the spirit of the Holy Scripture, which says: "All things come of Thee, O God, and of Thine own have we given Thee."

The practical outcome of this sentiment was the Nicholls Hospital, whose history of modest beginning, and munificent expansion, is of interest. In the year 1885, the late Mrs. Nicholls acquired and set apart the residence and grounds known as Moira Hall, at the west of the then town, as a hospital, with an endowment of $15,000.

This was soon found to furnish inadequate accommodation for the work of the hospital. Mrs. Nicholls nobly met the necessity of enlargement of building and consequent facilities for effective treatment of disease. She provided means for the erection of a new building to meet her desire to give her benevolent intentions adequate practical expression, with an additional endowment of $35,000.

This new building—the present hospital—was erected during the year 1889, and formally conveyed to the trustees and opened to the fulfilment of its purposes on January 29, 1890. On this occasion the most prominent men of the city were present and voiced the warm appreciation of the public of the munificent liberality and beneficence of Mrs. Nicholls. As expressive of the character of her benefaction, a brief description of the beautiful memorial window erected by the trustees at the main entrance of the hospital, will show to what extent it is significant of her aims and object:

The window is placed on one side of the partition separating the main hall from the vestibule, balancing the folding doors, also fitted with stained glass. The size of the window is four feet in breadth, and seven feet in height. The subject of the beautiful picture which composed the window is our Lord's pathetic parable of the Good Samaritan. The foreground shows the Samaritan supporting the poor man who "fell among thieves," upon his ass, and bearing him to the inn. At the feet of the group the wayside grass and flowers spring up. In the middle distance is seen the heartless Levite passing "by on the other side," reading his scroll, with sanctimonious absorption, and leaving to the despised Samaritan the work of mercy. In the background the rocky way from "Jerusalem to Jericho" is very happily depicted: rock, trees and water filling in the details.

The whole scene is powerfully shown and is more free than usual from the conventional stiffness of outline and inflexibility of detail inseparable from the unplastic nature of the materials. The lower part of the window contains this legend:

"This window was erected by the Trustees of the Nicholls Hospital, to the memory of Robert Nicholls, Esq., and in honor of his wife, Charlotte Jane, who donated this hospital in the year 1889."

In her will, Mrs. Nicholls provided for an additional endowment of $35,000, bringing up the total of the endowment fund to $85,000. Nor is this all; at the winding up of the Nicholls Estate in 1908, the trustees, out of the residue, apportioned a substantial sum to the endowment fund, which serves to make the hospital practically self-sustaining. The new south wing was erected in 1914 to care for the increasing needs. This cost $60,000 and was financed by the Nicholls Trust without assistance from the ratepayers. It brought the capacity of the hospital to a total of 90 beds, the addition adding 40 beds to the establishment.

The city and county of Peterborough has a hospital not only architecturally handsome, but provided with every equipment and appliance demanded by the latest advances of medical science in the treatment of the afflicted. While, of course, the main debt of gratitude is due to Mrs. Nicholls, a warm tribute of praise belongs to the members of the profession, who constitute the efficient medical staff of the hospital, and have given since its foundation, and continue to give, their services gratuitously.

The Nicholls Hospital, like the temple of Solomon, is "beautiful for situation." It is of red brick, and its symmetrical mass, and imposing facades, rising on the highest ground in the city limits, dominate the view of the city, and including the winding sweep of the river, and the rolling hills to the eastward. Such a situation could not be surpassed for salubrity, prominence of site or magnificent inclusiveness of scenic view.

In a word, the noble benefaction of Mrs. Nicholls, represented by the hospital will, for generations to come, not only constitute a memorial to her beneficence, but will remain in active operation as a perpetual fountain of healing to the sick and suffering.

The Act of Incorporation

March 25th 1886,
Amended, 1891.

Provisions of The Act

Trustees are elected as follows: Two by St. Paul's Presbyterian Church; two by St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, and one by each of the other Protestant churches of the city.

Trustees are elected for a term of three years, and are eligible for re-election. Richard Hall, Esq., and Charles McGill, Esq., are life members of the Trust.

The Mayor of the city is ex-officio a member of the Trust.

The Trustees may request the City Council each month to provide for the cost of maintaining the hospital for any amount over and above the income of the hospital from all sources.

The amount so required is to be raised by special levy on all Protestant ratepayers of the city.

The Endowment Fund must not be diminished."

The first trustees of the Nicholls Hospital, nominated by Mrs. Nicholls herself, were Richard Hall, merchant, Robert S. Davidson, retired merchant, William Manson, bank manager, John McClelland, merchant, George A. Cox, Joseph Flavelle, merchant, James Stratton, collector of Customs, and Alfred P. Pousette, lawyer.

Mrs. Nicholls made this selection as representative of the different Protestant denominations of the city, the first two named representing St. St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, the second two representing St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, George A. Cox representing Charlotte street Methodist church, Joseph Flavellet representing George street Methodist Church, James Stratton representing Murray Street Baptist Church and Mr. Pousette representative of St. John's Church. Mr. Hall was the first chairman and Mr. Pousette the first honorary secretary.

Mrs. Nicholls died on May 16th, 1890, and Benjamin Andrew Jackson, her nephew, who was one of the legatees, was thereafter added as life member of the Trust, with Mr. Hall and Charles McGill.

The nurses' residence at Nicholls Hospital was purchased during 1918 and was later added to in 1926, making it capable of accommodating 12 sleeping-rooms, a recreation room and class rooms. It was formerly the residence of Mr. Francis Mason and stands across the street on the south side from the hospital.

St. Joseph's Hospital

St. Joseph's Hospital, which is under the management of the Roman Catholic Corporation of the city, stands on what was formerly known as St. Leonard's Grove, in the young days of the town. It is a five-acre lot and was the site of the residence of a Mr. A. H. Campbell and later of the Rev. J. W. R. Beck, rector of St. John's Church. The buildings were destroyed by fire and the lot was purchased in 1888 by Bishop Dowling, then in charge of the diocese of Peterborough, when the population of the town totalled only 6,000 people. In October of the same year the corner-stone was laid.

On Wednesday afternoon, August 20th, 1890, "this magnificent and commodious building", as Mr. Dobbin describes it in his history of Peterborough, "was formally dedicated and opened, the culmination of many years of activity and effort on the part of the congregation of St. Peter's Cathedral."

The ceremonies were in charge of Bishop O'Connor, who had been appointed to the diocese in 1889. He was assisted by Bishop Dowling, who had been moved to Hamilton diocese, also by Rev. Father McEvay, Chancellor of Hamilton, Rev. Father Connolly, S. J., of Montreal, Very Rev. P. D. Laurent of Lindsay, Very Rev. J. Browne, V.C., of Douro, and Rev. Fathers M. Lynch of Port Hope, J. Quirk of Hastings, D. O'Connell of Ennismore, W. J. Kellty of Douro, D. J. Casey of Campbellford, M. Connelly of Emily, J. Sweeney of Burnley, C. S. Bretherton of Victoria Road, T. O'Connell of Fenelon Falls, M. O'Brien and C. Dube, of the Cathedral, E. H. Murray of Cobourg, M. Larkin of Grafton, E. Bloem of North Bay, W. J. McCloskey of Brighton, P. McGuire of Bracebridge, J. Molin of Lindsay, Rev. Father Campbell of Orillia and Monsignor Farrelly of Belleville.

Citizens of the town who were present, many of them making addresses during the ceremonies, included Mayor Stevenson, M.P., J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., Councillors Cahill, Kelly, Dawson, Moore and Rutherford, J. E. Belcher, C.E., architect, Doctors Halliday, Goldsmith, Pigeon, Brennan, McGrath and Moher, Messrs, D. W. Dumble, John Corkery, John McKee, H. L. LeBrun, T. Dolan, J. D. Tully, John Moloney, reeve of Douro, Town Clerk McDonald, Market Clerk Doherty, A. J. Gough, A.St A. Smith, T. W. Gibbs, F. Brownscombe and others to the total of several hundred of the townspeople.

Letters of regret at inability to be present, the majority containing handsome donations to the hospital fund, were received from the Rev. J. C. Davidson ,the Rev. E. F. Torrance, John Lang, M.P., the Hon. Senator Sulivan of Kingston, Peter Hamilton, Macfarlane Wilson, R. H. Fortye and Mr. Pearse.

The Fire Brigade Band was present and enlivened the proceedings with music.

His Lordship, Bishop O'Connor, was the first speaker, and was followed by Bishop Dowling of Hamilton. Speeches were also made by Mayor Stevenson, M.P., J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., D. W. Dumble, Dr. Halliday, Councillor T. Cahill, Rev. Father McEvay, Mr. Belcher, Dr. Goldsmith, Dr. McGrath, Councillor Moore, Dr. Brennan, Reeve Moloney, Dr. Moher and A. Rutherford, the contractor.

"The approach is by the former gateway, up the old avenue of stately and venerable trees. At the head of this avenue the drive sweeps to the left upon a raised terrace in front of the buildings, which brings the visitor to the front entrance. Here the broad gravel drive faces on one side the fine and imposing front of the new building and on the other the beautiful cedar hedge, the growth of years, which screens the basement portion from the view on the Stewart aspect.

"The building stands upon the ground, with a depth of 62 feet 6 inches, and a front facade of 88 feet. The exterior of the new building is worthy of its splendid situation and surroundings. The whole Gothic facade looking west, rises in its broken beauty of outline to the height of (including the basement) four stories, the whole resting upon a dressed limestone basement wall twelve feet in height, three quarters of which appears above the ground.

"The chief feature of the front is the main entrance, to which one gains access by ascending a flight of ten broad steps to the main entrance hall, 10 by 18 feet in size, forming a vestibule, separated by folding doors filled with stained glass, from the main corridor, and facing the main stairway. The facade is agreeably broken by a projecting central tower and flanking gables. A balcony over the central entrance projects over the Gothic doorway. Over the balcony is a large stained glass window, the central panes bearing in monogram the letters "I.H.S." Above the window there is a cut stone pedestal at the base of a niche for the patron of the Hospital, St. Joseph.

"The lateral gables are terminated upward by foliated finials, dormer gables on either side relieving the roof line between the lateral gables and the central tower, which is finishd with a terminal cross in iron, of conventionalized shape. The southern front has a handsome entrance to the main corridor which stretches the entire length of the structure.

"The south entrance door is reached from a broad verandah, which extends over three fourths of this front, and which has in the middle an octagonae projection, the whole being two stories in height, and presenting a pleasant spacious promenade for convalescent patients. This south front corresponds in general style with the features and finish of the front. The north entrance is somewhat similar to the south excepting that the verandahs and balconies have no octagonal projections.

"The eastward entrance is from a spacious rear yard which opens by two entrance gates on the highway. On this side there is one central entrance opposite the principal front entrance, underneath the main stairway; and approached by a wide verandah. There is also a side entrance to the basement. Around the whole basement are walled areas with cut stone copings, and throughout the whole building are cut stone sills to the windows. The window groups in the front are enriched by rock-face brickwork and the space over the cut stone arch of the central doorway is filled in with a drapery of tesselated terra cotta work."

The report also described in detail the interior finishings and the equipment, which at that time was capable of accommodating, at capacity, one hundred patients.

The hospital was under the management of the Sisters of St. Joseph in the Diocese of Peterborough, with the mother house in Lindsay at that time. Rev. Mother M. Anselm was the Superior in Lindsay at the time and Rev. Mother Clothilde was the first Superior of the hospital.

The plans for the original hospital building were prepared by John E. Belcher, C.E. Those concerned in its erection were: William Breckenridge, excavation; Mssrs. Long and Heslip, contractors who supplied the stone; Messrs. Heap and Curtis, the brick; Michael Hayes, the stonework; Messrs. Sheehy and McDonald, the brickwork; A. Rutherford, carpentry and joinery; P. McHugh, plastering; Thos. B. McGrath, painting; James Murty, tinwork and J. C. Smith, plumbing.

Mr. Dobbin, commenting on the hospital writes: "The hospital is conducted on the broadest possible principles, opening its doors to all creeds and classes. While its inception and upkeep is largely denominational, it enjoys the usual government grant. Indigent patients are paid for at a moderate fee. It has deservedly attained the most favorable reports for the admirable services it renders, due to the devoted and faithful Sisters and the staff in charge.' '

An addition of a north wing to the hospital was made and opened in 1908 and again in June of 1922, a further addition was made, bringing the hospital up to its present fine standard.

The present building is 153 feet long by 44 feet wide, besides additions for ward purposes. It has a full storey basement, three flats for patients, and the upper storey contains the operating theatres, X-Ray rooms and laboratory. The adtional work in 1922 was estimated to cost in the neighborhood of $142,000. The opening ceremonies were in charge of His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, and the opening sermon was preached by the Rev. J. E. Burke, C.S.P., director of Newman Hall, Toronto, who preached the funeral sermon for Sir Wilfred Laurier.

Isolation Hospital

The Queen Mary, or Isolation hospital, is the third hospital building of the city and is a comparatively modern establishment. Previous to its purchase, the other hospitals conducted isolation departments within their own buildings and the Nicholls hospital had a tent outside for tubercular patients.

The Isolation hospital, at an estimated cost of $12,000, was built on the old two-acre Hilliard lot in the north end of the town, during 1910.

If you buy out of town, and I buy out of town, and all our neighbors buy out of town, what in thunder will become of our town? Ever think about it?

The New DeLaval Magnetic Milker

Brampton Baby 2nd, one of the Richmond Jerseys. She has three records, of which the last made at ten years of age, is 10,320 lbs. of milk and 571 lbs. of fat.

Well known to Jersey breeders is the Richmond Jersey herd at Richmond, Que. The De Laval Milker is used most successfully at this noted farm, Mr. Alexander, one of the proprieters says, "I believe the Milker is the best investment in any kind of farm machinery I ever made. It has paid for itself already in the reduction of labor besides proving without any doubt its superiority over hand-milking in over 90 per cent of the cows on which it is used. I will state a case as an example.

Mourier's Fairy—22614—one of the best bred Jerseys in America, last year produced 915.5 lbs. of milk for the first month after calving. She was milked by one of our best milkers. This year she produced 1287.0 lbs. of milk, the test being slightly higher, in the same period. We used the De Laval Milker.

James Seymour and Sons, of Ida, Ont., made a world record in 1927 with their cow, "Idylwilde Korndyke," during a 305-day test. She was milked during the greater part of the period by a De Laval Milker. They say, "It is unnecessary to state that when she was milked by hand it was done in the most thorough, efficient and painstaking manner possible and when we began using the De Laval Milker the daily records showed that its operation was fully as efficient as the very best hand milking.

The De Laval Magnetic retains all the good features ever developed in the De Laval Milker, plus a simplicity of installation, minimum power requirements, ease of operation, uniformity and perfection of milking, with reliability and dependability of performance never before approached. It is a combination of years of practical experience and the most advanced science of modern engineering.

In the De Laval Magnctic the pulsations are controlled by means of a simple, efficient and patented application of electro-magnetic force, which is created and controlled at the pulso-pump and transmitted by wire to the units. Magnetic force is being harnessed today for many uses in industry and art, varying from the marvelous new pipe organs in which hundreds of electro-magnets instantly transmit each finger touch on the keyboard to a note control in a distant pipe, to the gigantic magnetic cranes for picking up and releasing hundreds of tons of steel.

The De Laval Magnetic not only retains the famous De Laval principle of controlled and uniform pulsations, but accomplishes this result with less power, less expense, less installation, and greater reliability than was ever before possible. With the Magnetic pulsation control is instantaneously uniform, simultaneous and perfectly balanced. The electro--magnetic pulsation control has no connection with the form of power used to operate the milker. Each outfit is self-contained and creates its own magnetic force.

The De Laval principles of milking which have resulted in increased milk production, cleaner milk, the saving of time and labor and greater profit in dairying on thousands of dairy farms the world over are rendered more pronounced and more effective through the use of electro-magnetic force in the creation and control of pulsations in the new De Laval Magnetic Milker. In this new milker De Laval offers dairymen an even more superior method of milking, based on principles tested on thousands of dairies during more than 11 years of actual use—all in all a greater De Laval Milker from which every user may expect even greater things in the way of better milking, cleaner milk, ease of installation, greater economy, dependability and ease of operation.

Mr. Eric Love, of Atwood, Ont., says: "We are very much impressed with our new De Laval Magnetic Milker. It was so simple to install and is so easy to operate. The new Magnetic control of the pulsator is the secret of snappy and quicker milking. The combined base and belt tightener is the smoothest outfit in its class."

World Champion Cow in 1928, Canary Korndyke Alcartra. Owned by B. H. Thompson, Boharm, Sask. During her entire life she was never milked in any other manner than by a De Laval Milker.

Thompson's wonderful high-producing herd of Boharm, Sask., has made many Canadian records as well as this world's record. In speaking of the De Laval Milker, he says: "We have used the Milker for the past five years to milk all of our cows and are still using it. During that time six or seven persons have operated the machines. The large records that have been made by the cows in the herd and the high average production speaks better than we can tell for the efficiency of the milker. Since using it we have had much less udder trouble and sore teats than when hand milked.

Mr. R. R. Stevens, of Bowmanville, Ontario, made a world record in 1922 with his pure-bred Holstein cow, "Orndyke Pietertje Korndyke," during the entire period she was milked with a De Laval Milker. He says: "While Orndyke is a wonderful animal and would make a splendid showing by hand milking, I can truthfully assert that the use of the De Laval Milker throughout this test has made it possible for her to show this wonderful production. I have been using the De Laval Milker exclusively for two years."

Mrs. Frances Brown Stewart First Proposed the Name Peterborough.

This is the forest primeval. The murmuring pines and the hemlocks,
Bearded with moss, and in garments green, indistinct in the twi-light,
Stand like Druids of old, with voices sad and prophetic,
Stand like harpers hoar, with beards that rest on their bosoms

* * * * * * *

The sombre prelude to Longfellow's Acadian saga suggests in its setting of primordial Nature a text for this abridged story of pioneer life in Peterborough as gleaned from the letters of Mrs. Thomas A. Stewart, whose first house of logs and moss and mortar was built at Auburn toward the end of the year 1822, and was occupied before winter had relaxed its grasp of the silent land.

This is an intensely human document of the hardships the earliest settlers encountered at every turn, defying their patience and courage and all the resources of heart and soul and body. For some year it was a lonely struggle in the depths of the unbroken woods until the coming of the Peter Robinson immigration, and at one stage the Stewarts almost admitted defeat, so slow was their progress, so few their comforts, so unrelenting their toil and so dear and distracting the memories of the home and culture they had left behind in the county of Antrim, Ireland.

Drama of Early Peterborough

And it was a local drama. Therein lies its chief interest during this centennial celebration and days of looking backward over Peterborough's years and its generations. At the time the Stewarts came here Toronto was the muddy village of York, and only Adam Scott lived on the subsequent townsite of Peterborough. He had built a crude sawmill, in which he also ground grain, where the factory of the Peterborough Canoe Company now stands. His house was in the block bounded by George, Dalhousie, Sherbrooke and Water streets.

Auburn was the name the Stewarts gave their home. Mr. Miles Hamilton now lives on the property, but the old log house disappeared long ago. It was close to the river, then an essential way of communication, and about a mile upstream was the home of Robert Reid, which he personalized with the names "Wilmont". Thomas Stewart and Robert Reid had married sisters, and were partners in a manufacturing business in Ireland. A third partner caused a reversal of their fortunes, and, as they looked about for a new start, they decided to come to Canada.

Mrs. Stewart's Literary Gift

Mrs. Stewart possessed a fine literary gift, was an industrious and lucid writer, and her letters have preserved a graphic narrative of experience in this community and district which affords a valuable work of reference for the present generation and posterity. No doubt, too, her letters to friends of her youth in Ireland sustained by their contact a tender but sterling spirit that yearned, perhaps for years, to return to the old scenes, the old home and civilization.

Her letters were collected and collated by her daughter Ellen, who married A. C. Dunlop. They were published under the title of "Our Forest Home", and in a second and larger edition that was brought some years ago. The two families, the Stewarts and Reids, crossed the Atlantic together, then by slow stages from Quebec reached Kingston.

A Glimpse of Muddy York

The following paragraph re-echoes Mrs. Stewart's first impression of the town of York, now the city of Toronto, which the little company reached on August 12, 1822, after a two days' sail from Kingston: "The town or village of York looked pretty from the lake as we sailed up in a schooner, but on our landing we found it not a pleasant place, as it is sunk down in a little amphitheatre cut out of the great, bleak forest. The lake in front is full of rushes which have been cut and left to decay in the shallow water, causing it to be very unhealthy. It is not a healthy town (fever and ague are common), and it is said to be much fallen off within the last two years; a deadness hangs over everything. Kingston is much preferred as a place of residence."

They were received with warm hospitality in Toronto, and being advised to apply for a grant of land, they were given permission to choose the situation in any part of the province they pleased. The township of Douro was recommended to them as an unbroken place, and so they were given 1,200 acres.

Sailed To Cobourg

As winter was approaching Mr. Stewart and Mr. Reid set out for their Crown property and returned in two weeks with a very favorable report. On September 28 the two families sailed from York to Cobourg where they met with a kindly welcome from the English Church clergyman, Rev. Mr. McAuley. Mr. Stewart was taken ill with fever, which was prevalent at that season on the lake front, and Mr. Reid started for Douro with a number of workmen to build log houses and clear some land.

Finally Mr. Stewart set out for his Douro possession, drawn by a yoke of oxen which he had hired to carry his luggage and the two men he took with him.

Threw Up a Shelter

As it came on bad weather and I wished to keep my baggage dry, we stopped at a good place to shelter the boat and build a shanty for the night. Fortunately we came to a place where some boards were laid up on the bank, so we pushed for the shore. Our party consisted of five men. In ten minutes we were in our new house for the night, well sheltered from the rain and wind, with a fire that would have roasted the largest ox in the county of Meath. A dry board to sleep on. Each one had a blanket with him. The rain now began to come down in torrents. Yet so great is the love of gain with the Indians and Americans, for our boatmen were Kanhus (not British-Americans), that when a canoe came from the other side of the river where there was an Indian encampment with the two Indians who came to trade with us, and offered guns for whiskey, tobacco or bread, our captain went over with them to see what they had, with a charge from me to bring some venison if they had any to sell.

In about half an hour he returned with two Indians and a few skins, also a large piece of venison that had been killed that morning. I bought the skin of the deer and the horns. For the venison, skin and horns I gave two quarts of whiskey, which was worth fourteen pence, only seven pence a quart.

So now to cook our supper we went next. One of the Indians whose name was Peter, and spoke very good English, was our cook. He took the venison and cut it with his knife and put salt into it, then took a stake, made it sharp at one end, ran it through for a spit, then stuck the other end into the ground near the pin to roast it well, turning it often. When it was done we all sat in a row near the fire, a long board laid upon our knees for a table. Our captain carved the meat, and seven persons never ate a heartier meal. Our Indian cook preferred a piece of bread and some whiskey to venison.

We went to sleep and slept very soundly until about 2 o'clock, when I was awakened by the Indians singing at the other side of the river. This was caused by the whiskey. Our old friend the cook remained all night to keep up the fire. About 9 o'clock in the morning we got ready for a start; we arrived at the end of our voyage (Peterborough) at about 1 o'clock. The landing place is at the flour and saw mill (no doubt Peter Robinson's and the very first building that was put up here). We landed our baggage and then went across the river in another boat to our township.

House Faced the River

Here, fortunately, Mr. Reid had sent a cart for some boards, so we put our things on the cart and away we went through the woods, about two miles and a half in line with the river. We at last arrived at the spot where Mr. Reid and our party were at work; he did not expect us and was much surprised. They were then busy building my house which is 40 by 28. The situation is beautiful on a rising bank above the river which runs with great rapidity and is very wide, with heavy timber on both sides. The timber is very large, principally maple, elm, beech, cedar and what you call arbor vitae, but we call hemlock. Mr. Reid's house is about three quarters of a mile higher up the river. I stayed two days with Mr. Reid, and during my stay my house was built. The day I reached there they were only laying the foundation. We all slept in a shanty with a large fire in front, no door, and here Mr. Reid and the working party, consisting of twenty-four men were stowed away, a huge boiler full of pea-soup and pork, and another with potatoes, and cask of whiskey and a pile of bread".

An Indian Encampment On The Otonabee River

In a letter on December 15th he wrote, in part: "We got to the ferry house (at Rice Lake) at dark, so called from the great quantity of rice that grows in it, which is very nice for soup, etc. We had a rough ride of it, as the road is very bad through the woods."

Next day at noon they began their water trip, rowing across the lake and up the Otonabee. The narrative continues as follows:

"As it was very late when we started from the ferry house, we were not able to go more than fifteen miles that night. To describe the Otonabee River is beyond my pen; but you may conceive a deep and slow running river about three times as wide as the Liffey (in Dublin, Ireland), lined at both sides to the water's edge with large trees, and the banks in general rising from the water to a considerable height, except here and there you can see a few acres cleared away and a neat log house built. Almost all are occupied by naval or military officers.

Mrs. Stewart's Journey Through Winter Woods

Early in February Mrs. Stewart prepared to leave Cobourg. Her story of the journey continues:

Feb. 11, 1823—"The time has now come to remove to Douro. Mr Bethune has provided us with teams; we feel much parting with our kind friends. We are taking one maid and one man-servant with us. Our journey lay through the townships of Hope, Cavan and Monaghan, at this time thinly settled; starting as early as we could we made but little progress the first day. On the second we travelled nine miles without seeing a house or clearing. This day the horses were urged on, and at ten o'clock on the evening of the 12th we arrived at Scott's Mill, the only house on the plains (Scott's Plains, now Peterborough; the mill stood on the site of the Peterborough Canoe Company's factory).

The Little Lake which we were to cross was frozen over, but not being considered safe yet for teams we were obliged to walk over, our children and baggage being carried by our servants and some men who kindly assisted. Our friends had sent an ox-sleigh to the edge of the lake to meet us.

Forest Below Auburn

The snow was about two feet deep, and late in the night, when we were in the dark forest (below our present day Auburn) it began to snow again. The progress was much more difficult than I ever expected; and as the sleigh was heavily loaded I was obliged to walk. Our lantern became filled with snow and the candle so wet that it could not be re-lit with the tinder-box. At last a light appeared and we soon reached our log house. The light proceeded from a large wood fire which rejoiced our hearts.

We found our house in a very unfinished state; the door had not been hung, nor any partitions erected. Where the chimney was to be was a large opening in the roof; the intense frost had stopped the mason work when about half completed. Finding things thus, rather puzzled us, not knowing where to lay our children at this late hour of a weary day, the floor being coated with ice and mortar. However, we soon discovered some shavings in the corner, these were spread on the ice, on them laid our mattresses, and cheerfully and thankfully lay down to rest after a supper of tea, bread and butter and pork. Being very weary we slept soundly, and on waking up in the morning I saw the stars looking down through the aperture left for the chimney."

Mr. Reid and his family were settled about half a mile to the north; their shanty was open in front and the fire outside, but they were much annoyed by the smoke and sparks blowing in and sometimes at night setting fire to the bedding. My father at once set about getting more comfort and employed a man to come and help him. A bedstead, rough it is true, but strong, was made, doors were hung, and rough boards brought across the lake were laid overhead for a ceiling. The crevices between the logs were carefully filled with moss, gathered from the woods, and fastened in with mortar.

A Beautiful Place

But winter, then as now, gave way to Spring, and the spirit of Mrs. Stewart's letters expands with the warmth and life of the new season,—"As the spring opened I was delighted with the beauty and novelty of the scene around us. Our clearing is pretty well open to the river; a few large pines and cedars remain standing, and add much to the loveliness. The river rushes along with great speed and noise, carrying down large masses of ice from the lakes above.'

And this in August: "We are going on here with smiling prospects, every day doing something to add to our comfort. T— has determined to have our cellar finished this autumn, and has already commenced to excavate a place about five feet deep under the house in which to keep our potatoes. He will partition upstairs, and altogether the house will be warmer. The chimney is quite safe since a free circulation of air is secured by clearing away the trees near the house. We are looking forward to a more comfortable winter. The Reid's house is probably completed now, so many grown up enough to be of material assistance is a great help.

Mr. Reid was laid up for some time with ague. All new-comers are subject to this fever, which is considered simple and easily cured. Seven of them dined and drank tea with us last Sunday. We observe that holiday in the following manner: the Reids come about eleven in the morning. T— reads the lessons for the day and Mr. R. the prayers. Bad weather never prevents as many of them as can do so coming."

Her Thoughts of Home

Mrs. Stewart mentions the effect of the summer's heat on her health, her love of reading and her delight upon receiving books from home; the care of her house and three children, and the endless making of clothes where there was no shop from which to buy anything. And then she proceeds: "I continue, however, to read a chapter or two from 'Mant's Bible' with the notes every day, and am also enjoying the "Lights and Shadows of Scottish Life", and looking forward to refresh my memory by the perusal of 'Bigland's Letters on English History'. And though I can read but very little at a time, yet even these scraps give me something to think about as I sit in my little south window plying my needle. As T— is out almost all day I have abundant time for thinking, and constantly in spite of every effort my mind will turn to 'home' and former times, and occasionally take a far stretch forward.

She Missed Newspapers

In this silent solitude you cannot fancy what a feast the dear home-letters afford me. Our post days occur so seldom that I generally receive letters from Ireland and England all at once. These letters come to Mr. Bethune's care (in Cobourg), and when opportunity offers he sends them to us. Papers, though old, are a great treat. A. M. (Anna Maria) is a great comfort to me every day; she is so thoughtful and takes little Bessy to the 'old shanty' where it is cool and shady, and where they all three play for hours every day. I am never anxious, as they cannot meet with any danger there. After A. M. has said her lessons and done a little sewing she turns nurse; when I am engaged she is very considerate, and remembers everything so well. She and E. can now put on their own clothes, and she ties E.'s. I lace A.'s corsets and tie her frock, and she washes and dresses little Bessy, who is the sweetest little engaging lump of soft white velvet that you ever saw. She is very gentle, animated and playful."

(Mrs. Dunlop, here interpolates this anecdote.) When coming to Douro we were given a pair of cats, our friends knowing how we would be tormented with mice. One was called Adam and the other Eve, on account of their being the first cats in this part of the province. About this time Mrs. Eve had a nice little family of kittens, which interested everybody who saw them. Their basket stood on a chest in the parlour to be out of the way. Little Bessy's delight was to be held up to look at these beauties, so soft and fat. We were all told not to disturb or handle them, but one day Bessie climbed up, and was discovered cuddled down in the basket. She was in great delight, but it was soon over, as disobedience, even in one so young, had to be punished.

Land Is Slowly Cleared; Crops And Flowers Grow

"Early in the spring the land in front of the log house was cleared as much as possible to make room for a flower and vegetable garden. T— had hired some Highlanders who had been settled in Otonabee to do the work of chopping, piling the wood into heaps and burning. It was all a hurried time; however, we have some good potatoes, turnips and oats. My flowers are very fine; hollyhocks, grown from seed I brought with me; mignonette, which fills the air with sweetness; a grove of fine bright sun flowers; and scarlet runners at one side of the house. I assure you it looks quite gay. The river in front of the house is most beautiful, and so swift, too much so to allow fishing, but farther up in the eddies we catch excellent bass. The Indians, coming in their canoes, bring also fish and venison, which they exchange for pork and flour. Our workmen shoot numbers of partridges, which, unaccustomed to any disturbance, come quite close to them when at their work. Wild ducks are also plentiful from the same reason. No one but the wild Indian has ever invaded their haunts.

A Few Settlers in County

The first year in the bush was thus passing with only a rough beginning of the house, and that not finished. There are only a few families scattered in the neighboring townships of Smith, Monaghan, and Otonabee; with the exception of Lieut. Rubidge all are farmers, and a few miners from England The Scotish farmers are a great help and comfort to us; one of our young men, Donald McIntyre, is so considerate; often when his day's work is done he comes in and grinds the wheat into flour for the next day's bread. Feeding these workmen makes a great inroad in our stock of provisions. If we had a boat it would be easier to manage, as there is a grist mill across the river".

Comfort of the Hearth

The fireplace radiated warmth and light and comfort in that log home. Writing in November, 1823 Mrs. Stewart describes their hearth as follows: "Our kitchen chimney is nearly eight feet wide and our other chimney nearly four feet. We seldom use logs in the kitchen quite so long as to fill it up, but in this room we have them nearly four feet long. We first put on a back log, which is about a foot or eighteen inches in diameter, and long enough to fill up the back part of the fireplace. Then we put in the dogs, which you have seen, I am sure, in old houses, and on the dogs we lay smaller split sticks about five or six inches thick and the same length as the back log, and pile on chips and pieces of pine till we have it as high as we require, and you cannot think what a lovely pile it is, or how cheerful it makes our little rooms in the evenings and mornings.

Every evening before tea and every morning after breakfast we have a fresh back-log put on by one of the men, and then we need only to take the kindled pieces out of the ashes, scrape the ashes off the back-log, put on fresh sticks and some chips, and in a few minutes we have a delightful fire which gives quite light enough all over the room for dressing, sweeping, sitting and laying the breakfast table. I could not help being amused at your asking why we burned the timber of the clearing, and did not keep it for firewood! We have as much wood for burning as we can use, or could use in thirty years, and we have only to draw it to the back door, where it is cut up."

"It is six weeks since we have had news from Cobourg, and I am sure there are letters there, but the frost is too hard to allow boats to ply, and not hard enough for sleighs."

What Settlers Lacked

The death of baby Bessy shocked the little settlement as they realized the distance they were from a doctor, clergyman or neighbour, and the difficulty of procuring the necessities of life.

When flour was wanted (lacking), wheat was boiled for food; Indian corn was boiled also as a substitute for rice, the hemlock twigs boiled for tea. Sugar made from the sap of the maple added greatly to our luxuries. My father brought a hand-mill from Ireland. This was set up in the kitchen. Being then a child, I can well remember the men coming home after their work to grind the wheat into flour, or rather meal ,for the next day's bread (black and bad as it was), the large log fire blazing in the fireplace giving light for their work. They often brought home pine knots as the turpentine in them made a bright blaze and extra light for their work.

The difficulties of traveling between Cobourg and Douro were very great. After the surveyor ran a line for a road the trees were blazed by an axeman knocking off a piece of the bark, and thus leaving a white mark; then the trees were cut down to leave an opening for an ox team to get through the woods. More than this had seldom been done as no settlers lived near to do more work. The road was nearly impassable in summer; in winter the snow filled the rough places and was much easier to travel."

First Wheat In Douro Sowed In Spring Of 1823

In the spring of 1823 Mr. Stewart sowed the first wheat in Douro township. He had about twelve acres of it and as many of corn and potatoes.

The following paragraphs are by Mrs. Dunlop, amplifying the picture of the district and of Peterborough in 1823: My early recollection of the "plains" (Peterborough's site) was a wild state of nature. The ground west of the river was densely wooded with pine, interspersed with oak, beech and maple, a creek running through the woods from north west to the river, near Scott's mill. (The creek now emptying in to the Otonabee at Rink Street and the George Street wharf then flowed along the present King Street or thereabouts to Scott's mill on the Peterborough Canoe Company's location). The trees were second growth and stunted from a fire having run through long before. Small brush, shrubs and occasional grassy spots bore traces of Indian camps or hunters' solitary fires. The wild flowers grew among these shrubs in great beauty, variety and sweetness. The perfume of the wild thyme, mint and other herbs, struggling in the uncultivated, gravelly soil, was interesting to us.

Adam Scott's Mill

The creek ran swiftly in places through the woods, and in other places spread out, causing the ground to be swampy. Scott's mill was for years a landmark to the straggling hunter or wild Indian. The frame structure was about 18 by 24 feet; within this small space was fitted up a run of very common stones, and a single upright saw. This poor little mill in the heart of the wilderness was neither in gristing or sawing adequate to supply the limited requirements of the early settlers; the flour was black and wet, as there was no machine to clean the wheat, and the machinery was forever breaking down.

Eerie Howl of Wolves

In our early years in the settlement the wild animals came boldly about the house. The wolves, dangerous and exceedingly troublesome animals, would sometimes prowl early in the night in our neighborhood. Often when our little family was sitting reading, or at work, some one would say, "There are the wolves". Then there would be perfect stillness as we all listened, and then the howl could be heard in the distance. As they moved on the horrible wild sound could be heard more distinctly. How well I remember as a child the feeling of awe that crept over me, as nothing could sound more lonely or wild than this midnight howl. Over and over again when we went to the door or the window, two children only who were old enough then to understand the sound would listen, holding each other's hands in fear, fancying they were about Mount Vision (a hill back of the house) a very wild, solitary place; the echoes increased the noise and it appeared as if hundreds were in the pack. After a fresh fall of snow their tracks were seen very near the house at times; they were great enemies to the poor deer; the howl generally showed that they were on the deer's track. Bears also were very plentiful and troublesome and would attack the house, fearless of man—these lords of the forest so long undisturbed.

Rumor of Immigration

This year (1825) brought hopes of an immiration from Ireland. Up to this date there was but one inhabitant of the future town of Peterborough. Adam Scott and his family lived on the Plains, working the little mill, no bridge to cross the wild foaming river. Peter Robinson who had visited the colony and seen the greatneed, went to Cork, in the south of Ireland and gathered five hundred emigrants to start with. My father took a great interest in this movement, although he regretted the choice had been made at that place, the people being well-known as very poor and thriftless.

On July 31st of this year (1825) a great event took place, the birth of the first white male child in the township, (William Stewart).

Ten Acres of Wheat

Mrs. Stewart wrote the following letter on January 26, 1826: "I often think of the happiness it would be to return home, than to live as we do here in a never-ending scene of bustle, turmoil and hard work. Now but three years are over, though we have a fine wide light opening in the woods, and ten acres of promising wheat under the snow, plenty of land ready for crops, and the stock increasing; yet there is a degree of anxiety and wearying hurry for ever, which prevents inside comfort.

Camp for Emmigrants

The arrival of the poor immigrants from Ireland has given us some variety. They are encamped on the Plains, a place about two and a half miles off. Their huts look very odd, being made with poles standing up, boughs or branches of trees interwoven, and mud plastered over this. They live in these till log shanties are ready for their families in Douro. These huts already cause the Plains to be called a village. The immigrants are under the care of Peter Robinson, a native of this country, very pleasing and gentlemanlike, of good property and a member of Parliament. Dr. Reade has come as the immigrants' doctor, and his wife, the first lady who has settled here.

Plain, Course Food

From six in the morning until nine at night there is not an instant of silence or quiet in any corner of this little dwelling, between four children and two clumsy, uncouth, bold servant girls, with heavy feet and loud voices. (The servants had been sent from Ireland to the Stewarts.) The mill at Scott's is again stopped. We have recourse to grind our wheat by hand-mill. The wheat is winnowed by sifting in the wind. Whatever blows off is all that removes the smut, which it is full of. The bread is coarse and black; we have barrelled pork and pea-soup.

Mr. Stewart is at present (1826) in York. When leaving home he takes his bugle, as he goes down the river in the scow, which is used to bring the immigrants and provisions from Rice Lake; as the boat goes further on we can hear the last sound of his farewell to us. You remember Mr. Stewart's dog, the French poodle, his faithful old friend "Cartoosh", when in his early days he went abroad on the continent with his manservant John, and this faithful dog. He cries pitifully when his master goes from home. When he hears the bugle when Mr. Stewart is returning home, Cartoosh is the first to welcome the sound, although miles away. The echo causes joy to all.

To Toronto By Stage; Weather 22 Below Zero

Mr. Stewart traveled from Cobourg to York (Toronto) in the stage, which in summer is a waggon, but in winter is a sleigh with a sort of oil-cloth cover or head; it travels day and night, and in all weather. It carries four passengers and the mail bags. It was full the evening T— left Cobourg, setting out at 7 p. m. it reached York at three next day. It was one of the coldest nights, stormy and intense frost—poor fellow, he was nearly famished with the cold, notwithstanding all the coats and other mufflings. When they reached York the thermometer was 22 degrees below zero. He made his way to an hotel, took a hot drink and went to bed; he felt no bad effects after the journey he had been exposed to.

He was treated with the most gratifying kindness by some, and very flattering distinction by everyone to whom he was introduced. He went to the Executive Council, which is the House of Lords here, the day of the prorogation of Parliament, and had a special request sent to him that he should go within the part enclosed for the big-wigs, where he was seated in the midst of all the members of the Upper House—a very unusual compliment, every one said. He was at some very pleasant dinner parties, and at a grand ball at Mr. D. Boulton's, Mrs. B— is a sister of Mr. Robinson. He returned much more comfortably than he went, as Father Crowley (the Catholic priest who came out with the Irish immigrants) was coming from York and was delighted to have him for a companion. So T— surprised me three days sooner than I expected.

The Governor's Visit

On Saturday last the Governor and his suite arrived (early in February). T— and Dr. Reade (who came out with the immigrants to attend them) were very busy making preparations for his reception and accomodation. All the immigrants were desired to assemble at the village to welcome His Excellency (Sir Peregrine Maitland). After dinner all the men and boys of this house set out, though it was a very cold, windy, snowy day, so bad that I said Sir Peregrine would not come, but T— was sure that he would, because he never traveled on Sunday. T— took his bugle with him to sound when he first came in sight to give notice of his arrival. It was growing dark, and he had actually set out on his way home, when a gentleman said the grand party was advancing, so back T— went and sounded his bugle. The immigrants formed a line on each side of the road for a quarter of a mile.

The Governor had a large party with him—five sleighs. All seemed pleased and gratified—Sir Peregrine very much so, and Mr. Robinson and his brother, the Attorney-General, particularly so. T— says Mr. Robinson shook his hand almost off and expressed strongly his approbation of all the arrangements. Sir Peregrine settled that he would go to the Cavan church the next day. So T— went off immediately after breakfast intending to get a place in one of the sleighs. I thought no more about them, and set myself down to my own reading, when, after some time, a note was brought from T— saying that the Governor requested I would dine tnere that day and that he would send his own sleigh for me and Anna and William. You know to this I could send no refusal. In some little time T— came home for me. The Governor's sleigh had broken down and could not come; but he had borrowed another.

The Eternal Question

You may imagine what a fine fuss this put me into. How should I dress myself, was my first thought. I knew none of the company would expect me to be fine, living as we do here, so I thought I had better put on whatever would take the shortest time for making my preparations. T—'s opinion on the very important subject of dress was a great comfort to me. We soon agreed that a very pretty Irish tabinet which I had never yet worn would be the best. In a short time, all my curlings, etc., having been completed, we set out. We went first to Dr. Reade's, as were all going together. After a time up drove Mr. and Mrs. Rubidge. We all talked and laughed for an hour, when the gentlemen agreed to let us have quiet possession of the parlour to adorn ourselves. They went to the Doctor's medicine shop, and we ladies spent one good hour in dressing our beautiful persons. I had but little show in the business as I had only my head to dress. Mrs. Rubidge and Mrs. Reade went without caps. Mrs. Reade had a large wreath of artificial flowers in her hair and wore a brilliant geranium colored tabinet which did not suit here. Mrs. Rubidge had on a white striped gauze, trimmed with pink satin. When we set out T— and Mrs. Reade, Dr. Reade and Mrs. Rubidge, Mr. Rubidge and my-

Peterborough Boats

The story of PETERBOROUGH Boats is one in which the citizens of Peterborough and especially the Old Boys will be interested.

The company whose products have carried the name of our good city PETERBOROUGH to All Parts of the World, is one of truly local origin.

Established in 1879 by the late Col. James Z. Rogers, the Peterborough Canoe Company is this year celebrating its

Fiftieth Anniversary

Peterborough Canoes were the main means of transport in the opening up of the great Canadian West, long before the transcontinental railways came to finish the job. They are still doing the same kind of pioneer work beyond the confines of the railways.

The building of quality boats requires a knowledge gained from long experience and the hard tests of heavy service. After 50 years of designing and building, this company was never in a better position to serve a boat-loving public.

Candle Days of the County Council Nearly a Century Ago

SHERIFF WAS AUTHORIZED TO PURCHASE 100 LBS. OF CANDLES ANNUALLY FOR COUNTY'S NEEDS

Revealing Resolutions From County Council's Minutes of February 2, 1850—Carries the Imagination Back to the Days Prior to Electricity.

VICTORIA AND PETERBOROUH WERE UNITED.

Lantern Ordered For Court Room—Wm. Cottingham of Emily Was Many Times Honored With the Wardenship.

Of all the minutes of Peterborough County Council surely none stands out more conspicuously as a definite symbol and milestone of its age than this one from the records for Saturday February 2nd, 1850; moved by William Cottingham, Reeve of Emily, seconded by Thomas Short, Reeve of Otonabee, that the Sheriff be authorized to charge in his account annually one hundred pounds of candles, to supply the courts and other ordinary purposes of the county

Eighty years ago was not only a pre-Mazda age, but apparently pre-kerosene. Those councillors who were then only beginning to lay the foundation of the county properties, administration and traditions, which have come down so splendidly and venerably to our time, groped in comparative darkness in their December sessions when the long nights dimmed the daylight almost at mid-afternoon and some one with a flaming taper must have touched the light to the candles that illumined their chamber.

Now we press a button and incandescence flashes at our summons, but who notices it? Not even farmer members who live far from power lines and electric switches. But they know the medium and degree of light is not important. It is highly useful but it is not essential.

Many Times Warden

That Reeve, William Cottingham, was accorded the exceptional honor of being chosen warden of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria for seven or eight successive terms. It is likely that he was either the father or grandfather of Walter Cottingham who came from Omemee to Peterborough to work in a hardware store, and later rose to be president of the Sherwin-Williams Paint Company.

Fix Their Own Salaries

The first mention of remuneration for these early trail-blazers in Peterborough county municipal affairs was a bylaw passed on October 9th, 1847, to abolish the payment of a salary to the warden of the District of Colborne.

Whatever happened subsequent to that deprivation of the Warden of his emolument, the Council developed a change of heart, and on February 1st, 1850, adopted a resolution to the effect that members be allowed 6s, 3d, for each day they attended sittings, and that members living more than 20 miles from the place of meeting be allowed one day's pay for coming to, and one day's pay for returning from the sittings of the council.

The present indemnity for the time devoted to public business is five dollars a day and railway mileage, and this recompense barely covers a councillor's expenses while in Peterborough.

County's Seal Accepted

The corporate seal of the county of Peterborough was formally accepted on Thursday January 31st, 1850, in the wardenship of John Langton. It has been in use 79 years.

From this dignified gesture the pages turn to a mere matter of internal economy as indicated in a motion by Thomas Benson, Reeve of Peterborough, seconded by Thos. Shortt, Reeve of Otonabee, that the county clerk be authorized to have constructed in the most safe and convenient situation on the jail premises, a place for the deposit of ashes, the expense not to exceed £5; and that the sheriff procure a suitable lamp or lantern for the use of the public hall of the court house and three pails for the use of the jail.

Gravel Road Petition

Of course they received importunate petitions in those gracious days. On Wednesday, August 21st, 1850, during a special summer session the Rev. John Gilmour and other "inhabitants of the town of Peterborough" requested the Council to take stock in the "intended plank or gravel road leading from Peterborough to the boundary line of Cavan."

The next day a bylaw authorized the Warden to subscribe for the sum of £300 of this stock.

Treasurer's Bondsmen

A minute of the meeting on February 2, 1850, accepted William Lundy and Edmund Chamberlen as securities for the treasurer, F. Ferguson. This motion was by Reeve T. Fortye of Monaghan seconded by Wm. Cottingham of Emily.

COUNTY SOLICITOR.

E. A. PECK, M.P.,

FERRY SERVICE FOR ENNISMORE

Fare Set By County Council Shillings and Pence.

PROVIDED IN 1844.

A fixed and permanent bridge, which it has been estimated will cost about $400,000 is the need and quest of the farmers of Ennismore township whose patience with the old floating bridge and its annual yielding to the combined assaults of wind and wave and ice has reached the thin end and breaking point.

It's a long span across Chemong (Mud) Lake from the Bridgenorth shore, and in these days of prosperity and ingenious engineers and contractors a request for such a bridge is entirely comprehensible; but there was a day when the settlers of Ennismore were made happy by the news that the county council was providing a ferry for persons, vehicles and livestock.

That was in February 1844, and the council of that day represented this section of the province known as the District of Colborne, 85 years ago.

Their Bylaws Were Models

And just to show Warden Frank Breckenridge and his colleagues of today that their predecessors of those rough and toilsome days nearly a century ago knew the niceties of bylaw phraseology and construction, the ancient statute is herewith reprinted in full.

"A Bylaw to authorize the appropriation of the sum of twenty-six pounds for certain purposes herein mentioned. Passed February 15th, 1844.

Whereas it is necessary and expedient that a sum of money should be appropriated for the erection of a scow and ferry boats on Mud Lake; Be it enacted by the authority of the municipal council of the Colborne District; That there be appropriated out of the first Wild Land Assessments that may come into the hands of the treasurer of the district for the use of the township of Ennismore the sum of twenty-six pounds currency for the purpose of building a scow and ferry boats on Mud Lake to ply from Galt's Landing in Ennismore to Edmison's Landing in Smith.

And be it further enacted, That the Councillor for the township for the time being, and two other persons to be elected by the ratepayers at a general meeting to be held after fourteen days, public notice, shall be a board of Commissioners who shall have the charge of the scow and boats and shall have authority to receive the tolls hereinafter established, and to contract with, and take security from a fit and proper person to act as Ferryman at the aforesaid ferry.

And be it further enacted that the tolls for crossing the ferry shall be collected according to the annexed rates, viz:—

A span of horses and waggon, one shilling.

A single horse, with or without a waggon, six pence.

A yoke of oxen and carriage, nine pence.

Horned cattle per head, three pence.

Pigs and calves per head, two pence.

Each passenger, three pence.

And be it further enacted that none of the said tolls shall be demanded or collected until a schedule of such tolls shall be legibly printed on a large board and put up at each of the landing places aforesaid.

G. A. HILL, Warden.

Juries Were a Drain On County's Treasury

Expenses of juries seem to have been a major item in the budgets of the county council eighty years ago. Perhaps that was due to the fact that juries were larger than in later years. At any rate in 1855 the county tax amounted to £1600 of which £535 was appropriated for juries. County salaries totalled £373.

Appealed to Governor

Appeals by the Council to the Governor-General were not uncommon. For instance a memorial was passed on Feb. 1, 1851, asking the Earl of Elgin, then viceroy to order such a reduction in the prices of public land in the northern and sparsely settled townships as would enable settlers to purchase at rates not exceeding two shillings and six pence per acre in the rearmost townships and five shillings per acre in the thinly settled townships; and that the proceeds be applied to road

Rules of County Council Legacy From Early Days

When the County Council evolved from the council of the District of Colborne it inherited in the transition a code of rules regulating the procedure of the Council and the conduct of its members.

These rules were revised in 1850 and as an afterthought several additional clauses were interpolated such as this very edifying precept:

"No member shall leave the Council Chamber during the sitting of this Council, without turning to the Chair as he retires, and making a bow to the Warden, in such manner that an opportunity may be afforded to any member to object to the absence of such retiring member."

Also this one: "Every Councillor, before beginning to speak shall rise from his seat uncovered, and shall address himself to the question or motion under discussion, shall avoid all personalities and improper language, etc—".

This bylaw of rules contains thirty-nine clauses, and is referred to as a reminder of the parliamentary methods which obtained in those days so long ago in the 'forties and 'fifties.

NASSAU LUMBER MILLS INSPIRED BRIDGE IN 1854

County Council Gave $250 To Assist Charles Perry in Project.

WAS BUSY CENTRE.

Sidewalk at the Locks Bridge Was Petitioned For in 1853.

Perry's lumber mills were once a bustling industry at Nassau. A reference to them appears in the County Council minutes of June 23rd, 1854 to the effect that a grant of £50 is made to Charles Perry to assist him in the construction of a bridge across the Otonabee River at Nassau Mills, on condition that he maintain the bridge for five years.

The next paragraph records a grant of £75 to Samuel Strickland to assist in the construction of a bridge at Lakefield, the money to be paid on the completion of the bridge, and on condition that Mr. Strickland keep it in repair for two years.

Another appropriation was £50 to Otonabee township to help pay for a bridge at Keene.

Wallace Point Bridge

During the last few years a recurrent proposal suggested the dismantling of the Wallace Point bridge. It may interest the present council to know that Reeve William Lang and Deputy Reeve Thomas Ryan of Otonabee presented a petition in Council on behalf of their ratepayers for a bridge "at or near" Wallace's Point on January 28, 1857.

A phrase in the following minute of a grant for road improvement may have been typical of the time: "On the road from Stoddart's landing, northwest through Ennismore past the widow Kevan's to the turn-off to Pigeon Creek Marsh and Lake, at Paddy Gallivan's, being the winter-travelled road to Bobcaygeon the sum of £30."

No Railways Then

Another little clause that paints in a section of the picture of the primitive, laborious ways of living and locomotion in 1855 was as follows in the road and bridge committee report, signed by Reeve F. Ferguson of Peterborough, as chairman: On the petition of R. W. Shaw for a grant of money to fill up holes on the Mail Road between Peterborough and Lindsay, your committee declines to recommend unless a sum be appropriated for county roads generally.

Statute Labor Problem

The roads committee in January 1855, W. S. Conger, reeve of Peterborough chairman, enquired into the road work done in 1854 and found that "no less than 18 of the 56 overseers appointed made no returns at all and 13 others return no less than 200 days of work refused to be given by persons liable to perform Statute Labor."

The Committee recommended the imposition of the penalty provided by law on all delinquents who failed to pay the monetary equivalent of the road work they had refused to do.

A few weeks later they increased the commutation rate for Statute Labor from 2s. 6d. (about 60c) a day to 3s. 9d. (about 90c).

Still No Footbridge

A petition in March 1853 from "Mr. Peck and others" asked that a footpath be constructed on the Otonabee bridge (at the Locks?). The report of the Roads and Bridges committee of which Henry Fowlds, reeve of Asphodel was chairman was: "Your committee are much pleased with the views entertained by the ladies subscribing this petition, now laid before them, believing that a sidwalk is, on that bridge almost indespensable, and a very necessary accommodation. Your Committee much regrets that the present state of the County funds does not admit of an appropriation, that would otherwise have given them so much pleasure."

A Flock of "Lock-ups"

A bylaw on June 23, 1855 authorized the establishment of lock-ups in "the town of Lindsay in the township of Ops; in the village of Metcalfe in Emily township; and in the village of Norwood in the township of Asphodel, providing that these municipalities keep these buildings in repair at their expense."

Increased Their Remuneration

Reeves realized that their sessional allowance of 6s 3d. a day was insufficient to defray their "traveling expenses and tavern bill", and to remedy that deficiency they increased the indemnity 8s. 9d. a day and 3d. a mile both ways. This bylaw, however, was not to take effect for two years.

Asked for Norwood Fair

On June 22, 1855, a resolution was adopted requesting the Governor-General in Council "to establish Fairs in the village of Norwood."

Asphodel was separated from Belmont and Methuen in June 1854. A special committee reported 67 resident free-holders and householders, 17 more than the number required to entitle them to stand alone as a municipality.

At the same time in Victoria county, then united with Peterborough, Fenelon and Bexley were made a separate municipality, being detached from the other two Verulam and Somerville.

The first Reeve of Belmont was Wm. Rea and in the same Council was Thos. Ray, reeve of Ops. There were also Two Fergusons, reeves of Peterborough and Eldon.

William Dick was the first reeve of Fenelon, Daniel Comstock was elected in the following year 1857, but after attending the January session he absented himself from the municipality and became otherwise disqualified. Mr. Dick resumed the seat in June.

Appealed for Prohibition

Nowhere is there a hint as to the attitude of the Councillors individually toward intoxicating liquors, but as a body they made an appeal for "bone-dry" prohibition in a memorial to the Ontario legislature passed January 26, 1854 as follows: "The memorial of the Municipal Council of the united counties of Peterborough and Victoria humbly sheweth:

That, feeling deeply sensible of the innumerable and aggravated evils the use of intoxicating liquors is inflicting on this Province doth humbly and respectfully petition your Honorable House to pass a restrictive liquor law, similar in its provisions and enactments to the well known Maine Liquor Law.

And your Memorialists as in duty bound will ever pray.

SAWDUST FOR FLOOR OF COURT ROOM WAS COUNCIL'S RESPONSE WHEN SHERIFF WANTED CARPET

Another Vivid Sidelight On the Niceties of Assemblies in the Forgotten Fifties—But the Council's Heart Was Warm.

IMPATIENT OF COUNTY'S PROGRESS.

"Straw Ticks" Ordered For Prisoners' Beds— Other Details of the Jail Menage in 1853.

The dignified but unpretentious annals of the County Council of eighty years ago ingenuously and graphically reflect both the material and spiritual aspects and actors of a scene which shifts and resets from year to year but with only superficial changes after all, except of course in its personnel.

Reeves and deputy-reeves come and go, but the County Council goes on—seemingly forever.

Here and there the minutes offer a clue that is full of meaning and colour, suddenly revealing the age with a sharpness of detail which surprises and may even shock us a little in the discovery.

For instance the finance committee on January 25th, 1853 included this clause in its report:

With regard to the application of Mr. Sheriff Conger for permission to procure carpeting to substitute for sawdust in the court room, your committee cannot advise in the present situation of your finances the complying with the request. (The Council bought a carpet in June 1854 for £3,-19s. 6d.)

Thos. Fortye, reeve of North Monaghan, signed that report.

Obviously those were crude and primitive days. Sawdust must perforce substitute for carpets in the court room, and there was no government compensation fund for workmen. But—from a bylaw passed June 17th, 1852 authorizing the treasurer to pay—

"to the order of Michael Walsh, on its being accompanied by the certificate of the head master of the Union School, Peterborough, of his regular attendance, the sum of 7s. 6d. per week, during six months, to pay his board, and the further sum of 10s. to purchase boots for the said Michael Walsh, he having lost an arm by accident and being desirous to fit himself for earning a livelihood by teaching school."

Not An Insurance Fund

The Council had its tender sentiment for human distress, but it was no insurance directorate. For example the finance committee report January 28, 1852, says:

"As to the petition of Patrick Leahy of Douro for remuneration for the loss of his barn, etc., by fire, your committee though sympathizing with Mr. Leahy cannot recommend the granting of his petition, the Council having no funds at their disposal for such purposes."

Another entry in the minutes throws a sidelight on the menage of the jail. It instructed the sheriff to buy for the use of the prisoners six pairs of blankets, one night pail, three chamber pots, six towels, one water pot, and one dust brush.

"Straw Ticks" for Prisoners

And the prisoners hadn't ostermoors to sleep on but they had the comfortable straw tick of that day, for the jailer was authorized to spend not more than £4 for bed ticking. The Finance Committee justified its recommendation by expressing their opinion that "such ticking is greatly needed."

Although the county treasury was usually low and money was scarce, the Council was not parsimonious and did not hesitate to reward special service in its own ranks.

Honorarium to Warden

On February 1, 1851, Reeve W. McDonnell of Ops, moved, seconded by Thos. Fortye of Monaghan "that in consideration of the services of Thomas Benson (Reeve of Peterborough) as late chairman of this Council, some token of approbation should be given to him, and that the sum of £12, 10s, be paid to Mr. Benson out of the funds of this county, merely as a mark of the approval of this Council for his diligence and usefulness while in that capacity."

County's Progress Slow

Thos. Brown, acting Warden in 1850, in the absence of John Langton, who was later elected to the Legislature, expressed the public's regret at the trifling increase in population and assessed property in two years. The gross population of the county in 1848 was 21,379 and in 1850 according to the census 22,062, showing an apparent increase of only 683.

"We must have lost more inhabitants during the last two years than the whole natural increase of the population", Mr. Benson concluded.

WARDEN OF COUNTY.

J. F. BRECKENRIDGE,

Reeve of the Township of Belmont and Methuen, and present Warden of the County of Peterborough.

Two Offices Combined.

The consolidation of the offices of county clerk and treasurer was predetermined by a by-law in 1851, which did not take effect until January, 1852. F. Ferguson, treasurer, was retired, and Walter Sheridan assumed the dual position.

Subscription for Railway

Railway communication was the need of Peterborough and Victoria counties in the early fifties, and the council was willing to subscribe £100,-000 stock in the proposed Grand Junction road. Otonabee was an almost unanimous and obdurate exception, and for that reason it was proposed that Otonabee be relieved from all responsibility and deprived of all advantages consequent on the action of the Council. But Reeve J. Anderson of Otonabee failed in this precaution which was defeated.

The county's by-law was virtually annulled by the amalgamation of the Grand Junction with the Grand Trunk.

It was a practice in those days to appoint an extra clerk for the sessions to assist in drawing up bylaws and other papers. He was paid the same wage as the members, Jas. Foley was appointed for the June session in 1850.

CITY AND COUNTY OLD FRIENDS

Far and dim beyond our longest memory is the municipal administration of our pioneer councils of Peterborough county.

The mists of time, even if less than a century, enshroud the first stirrings in our district of civic consciousness and organization in the same gray obscurity that stole over every unrecorded age of antiquity, the same darkness that has left only glimmerings of the aboriginal inhabitants of this place—the Indians who were still here when our first settlers came.

But in our imaginings and conjectures of those days when life was a daily, hand to hand struggle with nature in its primitive and untamed strength and forbidding sternness, we know as a certainty that Peterborough county preceded Peterborough town.

So scattered were the settlers, so few and small the community settlements, that York, now Toronto, was the centre of municipal government which was virtually the broader government of the settler's dealings with the Crown. He was either buying or receiving, as a gift, direct from the King or the young Queen, through a land agent, the rough timbered acres he was to clear, and on which in so many instances to establish a family in security and comfort.

First the District of Newcastle, then the District of Colborne, and as the townships gradually cleared with increasing life and energy and problems, the united counties of Peterborough and Victoria were marked off until 1858 when they separated and went their individual ways alone thenceforth.

Meanwhile Peterborough from the days of Peter Robinson's After the immigration Peterborough was only a corner of North Monaghan township. Eventually it was incorporated as a town and remained an integral part of the County Council until 1860.

Although the county and town have lived apart but in close and friendly contact, the old relationship of parentage has remained in the county's heart and is repeatedly revealed in the earlier records of the County Council. Today, of course, the city may be regarded as fully grown up, but it still receives and uses various county gifts and grants that sustain the old ties of seventy-five and fifty years ago.

If the city should ever be inclined to forget that old dependence and paternity it should remember this motion passed by the County Council, January 28, 1850—"that the clerk of the Council be directed to furnish the town of Peterborough a set of books, a supply of stationery and a Corporate Seal, similar to those provided for each of the townships, the same to cost £2,10s."

After they had been parted several years the County Council expressed the hope that the town would return to the fold, and declared that a welcome would be extended whenever reunion might be brought about.

In any retrospect of Peterborough years and history we find ourselves and our past, and no doubt our destinies, wrapped together with our county kindred and their hopes, and we are reminded by indelible records, which are rarely read, of our common interests, and even of old debts which possible we have failed to requite.

Hence, we turn over again some of the yellowed pages of the printed and bound minutes of those early Councils, and as we try to visualize the reeves and their times and conditions we offer a little tribute of gratitude for the fulness of the records covering ten years or more, and regret that this detailed chronicling of meetings and reports and bylaws should have been superseded by a colorless conciseness and a bare formality of reporting that disclose few interesting moments in the Council's deliberations.

self all walked, and in the same routine entered the drawing room of the Government House, which is nearly opposite Dr. Reade's.

Houses Only Cabins

You must know that all these houses that sound so grand are merely log houses and little better than the cabins are at home. Dr. Reade's house is a very small, miserable, inconvenient place, but is only a temporary one. The Government House is the best I ever saw for a log house, the parlor and drawing room good-sized, well proportioned and really pretty rooms.

The other ladies had been introduced to Sir Peregrine before. However, they were ushered up to his presence, their names told by Mr. Peter Robinson, each made a curtsey and retired a little. When my turn came he came forward and spoke to me for some time. He then talked to some of the gentlemen. I retired to join the other ladies, but was stopped by Mr. Robinson, who introduced his brother, the Attorney-General, to me. Then Col. Talbot came up, then Sir Peregrine Maitland joined our group, so you see what a circle I had all around me. I was very glad to meet Col. Talbot, of whom I had heard so many anecdotes; but in his manner there is nothing remarkable, which disappointed me a little. He has a great-coat, made of sheepskins, with the wool on, either of black sheepskins or dyed black, and a pair of boots of the same, which he wears over his other boots; and, as he is fat and short, you cannot imagine what a curious figure he is in this Arctic dress.

We had a large party. Besides us three ladies, and our three lords, and the gentlemen I have already mentioned, there were Mr. Maitland, son and aide-de-camp to the Governor, a fine, tall, very pleasing looking, rather handsome young officer; Major Hilliar, the secretary, also in uniform; Col. Burke and Dr. Connin.

Governor a Plain Man.

Sir Peregrine Maitland is not at all a striking looking person; he has nothing military in his appearance or deportment, nor does he in the least degree look like a person who had made an elopment. He is remarkably quiet and retiring in manner, his countenance sweet and placid, but too calm and composed for a general. In his appearance he is much more like a clergyman than an officer, but he is very pleasing. He talked to me a good deal both before and after dinner, as he thought proper that I should take precedence, and consequently I sat between him and Mr. Robinson.

He talked about the country and the immigrants, and then a good deal about planting and gardening, giving me some useful hints about transplanting young trees. After tea he retired to write letters, and retired to Dr. Reade's little "hotel d'amitie" (broadly "friendly home") where we were all to bundle in, at least a great many of us. Mr. and Mrs. Rubidge slept in the parlour. Mrs. Reade, her two little girls, myself and Willy (her son) five precious souls, all slept together in a tiny room divided by a little board partition from the parlour. There was no door, so that the partition was only a screen. Dr. Reade, T—— and Father Crowley all slept on the floor of the little shop. The next morning after breakfast we returned home."

Gave Name to Peterborough

Feb. 26, 1826—At the time the Governor visited the village, it was settled at the dinner party given in the Government House that the village should be called "Peterborough," in honor of Peter Robinson. This name was suggested by my mother. Orders were given to have the place laid out in park lots, to be valued at one dollar an acre. A bridge was built, and a mill soon after.

Looking back to the poor Indians, the original owners of the soil, we see what civilization has done. In our early intercourse my memory of them is of the wild savages of the forest. In their morals and mode of fire their enemies were the traders from the States, who came for the furs and traded whiskey to them. When in a drunken state they alarmed the settlement.

They came in large numbers down the river in their bark canoes, and often came to our house to sell or trade venison, fish, baskets, and birch brooms. They were sometimes very troublesome. When excited their worst passions were aroused. Oh, what a terror to us children to see these strange people coming through the trees from the river, rolled up in a blanket, red leggings, moccasins on their feet, long black hair matted and hanging loose over their faces and shoulders, red eyes always turning about, looking at us with great curiosity, trying to bargain for their articles. When we could exchange pork for venison, or flour for any of their goods, they were hard to bargain with, but we always found them honest. A hideous old man, known by the name of "Handsome Jack" from his ugliness, came often.

Jack Had Two Wives

One day we saw a party of them coming from the river through the trees toward the house. Handsome Jack and two squaws walking after him; these were his two wives; one, the favorite, was happy, and walked with him, with her papoose hanging on her back in its Indian cradle. One arm was loaded with baskets, brooms and the heavy skin of a deer; the other squaw was crying most pitifully, loaded more like a beast of burden than a frail, miserable woman. My mother made signs and found that Jack had beaten her severely; her face was disfigured with bruises and cuts; the poor things made signs that if Jack knew she complained he would murder her next.

Men and women, even in the coldest weather, never wore any covering on their heads, but drew the blanket higher up when they felt cold. All had jet black hair and eyes; very dark skin. When excited with whiskey the red glare about their eyes gave a shocking, wicked appearance. Poor creatures, they knew nothing but the misery of savage life.

Fire In Centre of Tepee

Christianizing the Indians had been planned when we came to the country. The Baptist missionary was the leader in the field, I believe. These poor people were easily and soon taught. Schools were opened for the young, who learned fast. They lived in wigwams made with birch bark, and built in the shelter of spruce trees; hemlock branches were laid on the ground and skins of deer or other animals spread over them; then they rolled themselves in their blankets and lay down at night, or sat in the daytime, with a fire in the centre which they kept burning all night. They turned their feet to this for the warmth and drying their moccasins.

A visit to the wigwams was curious and interesting, seeing the women making baskets and moccasins from the tanned hides of the deer. The squaws tanned the skins better than any white man can do it. Brooms were made from the white birch and baskets from the ash tree, and many very pretty ones were made from the birch bark, ornamented with dyed porcupine quills. These they bartered with the trader and settlers for bread, pork, flour and whiskey.

January 1827—A log school house had been built about 1826. My mother says, "An interesting event took place in the village about three weeks ago. Thirty-five Indians, men women and children, came to church, our log school house, used for a Church of England service by Rev. Mr. Armour. The Indians behaved extremely well during the service; they were very attentive and anxious to understand. After the service they came forward with their primers and cards or letters, requesting the ladies and gentlemen to instruct them, seeming really very desirous to be taught. They had been converted to Christianity in the summer before by a converted Indian who had been taught by an English missionary, and, though they had been often drunk, since their conversion have become quite sober and well-behaved.

Feb. 9th, 1827—Another son, Francis Thomas, was born at this time.

Two Immigrants Drowned

May 23rd, 1827—"I am glad to tell you that we have a beautiful field of wheat, looking as rich and nearly as green as if growing in dear old Ireland. This place is now looking very pretty. A very sad accident occurred Sunday evening. John Reid was ferrying over five immigrants from the opposite side of the river, at Mr. Reid's place, two men and three lads from fifteen to eighteen years of age. Some of them were tipsy, and by the obstinacy and ignorance of one of the lads the boat was upset. With great presence of mind John disengaged himself from his clinging companions; he then tried to seize one by the hair and dragged him to the bank with great difficulty, as the current is extremely strong. The other men could swim and got out safely, but the two boys perished. This is a dreadful shock to us, particularly to the Reids.

I have written a great deal with Willy sitting on the table beside me, which, you will allow, is not great assistance to me. He is a great fellow, and has a famous voice which he makes good use of. He is a very endearing, sweet-tempered wee pet."

Piano From Ireland

In the summer of 1826 a piano had been sent from Ireland, but did not arrive until the following winter. In crossing Rice Lake on the ice the team broke through, but the piano slipped on the ace and was saved. My mother was an accomplished performer, and delighted not only our own household, but many others who gathered to enjoy the music.

Stewarts Build Mill

Nov. 26, 1830—"Our mill is going on prosperously. We are only to have the saw mill now. The grist mill is to be added, and the dam finished next summer, when the water is low. Scott says he will engage them to be the best mills in the district. The foundation of the dam is completed. The carpenters are now preparing wooden patterns of the wheels, whi are to be sent to the foundry at Rochester to have metal castings made for them. We have a blacksmith at work; it is a source of great interest to the young people to go to the forge; they never saw a Smith at work before; their delight at seeing a horseshoe made was amusing to us. The wood for models of wheels had to be boiled and dried at a fire to harden before they began to turn them.

Dec. 20, 1830—There is an Indian encampment about a mile from us in the wood, near Mr. Reid's; we are beginning to get acquainted with them; they are terribly shy, so much afraid of our dogs and the turkey cock that we seldom get them to come near. They go frequently to Mr. Reid's, and are much delighted looking at prints and maps. Every Sunday seven or eight Indians and their wives sit around the table looking at them.

I went to the wigwam one day, where the Indian families live. The wigwam was seven or eight feet wide of an oval shape, made by poles covered with birch bark and branches of evergreens, spruce and pine, the floor covered with branches of hemlock over the ground, then skins and blankets were spread over that, and on this they sit through the day and sleep at night, a fire in the middle, a pole across on which they hang bits of venison to dry and smoke. One squaw had a baby a few weeks old, was making a little frock of cotton for it quite neatly, putting green braid on the band and round the top. Another was preparing a deer skin for making moccasins, another making a pair, a squaw making a basket.

An old Indian whose name is "Squire Marten", was making a pair of snow-shoes, his son, a boy of eighteen, was helping him. The boy whose name was Jim Bigman, was our interpreter; he spoke English well. Four squaws and a boy came to me today with baskets. They sat a long time by the kitchen fire. I showed them some beads I had in ancient days on a gown. The squaws laughed being much pleased, promised to bring me some more baskets for them. I want to tempt them to come here. I am in better health than I have been for two years. Mr. Stewart has gone for the first time to take his seat in the Legislative Council at York."

Building Dam In River

Sept. 25th, 1834—"These are busy times, for we are actually making a dam for the mill, which is by far the most troublesome and expensive part. Scott (Adam), who has undertaken the job, set to work with his men on the 16th. The first operation was to stop the water by a temporary dam, by felling trees and laying them across the st eam, filling up all the interstices with branches or stones, and then throwing earth over all to thicken and bind it together. The permanent dam is a much more tedious undertaking. For this purpose they are making holes in the rock, which is in the bed of the river and is solid limestone. These holes are made by long steel bars called jumpers, which men churn up and down, and by degrees work holes in the stone to some depth. Strong oak posts are, I believe, to be put into them, but they are not yet all made, as it is a tedious and laborious business.

It is exceedingly interesting to observe all the operations, and I go there at four o'clock every fine evening, accompanied by some of the children, take my knitting and sit watching all they are doing till they separate after sunset. Several of the men are employed in chopping down oak and elm trees for the posts; others cutting them in lengths, eight feet I think; others chopping off the bark, which is called scoring, and which prepares the log for the person who comes next, and with a broadaxe beginning at one end in a wonderfully rapid and exact way chops on, taking off the chips made by the scorer, and makes the side square or rather smooth and flat. Others are chopping down trees of all sorts on the bank of the river, which are drawn to the island by oxen. They are making a strong embankment of great logs piled on a gravelly point, at the end of the island, to prevent the force of the current from carrying away any of the island. Several of the men are in the water and in the bed of the river, some churning the jumpers up and down, others shovelling gravel away, others moving heavy stones out of the way.

The bank is very high at this part of the river, and I generally take my seat on a log just above where they are at work, and have a full view of all that goes on. It is very pretty as well as interesting, and I feel quite sorry if rain or anything happens to prevent me from going. Anna and Ellen come with me by turns, as we do not all leave the house at once. Mr. Stewart goes there about six o'clock every morning and does not come until after sunset.

Made Their Own Clothing

I have been very busy preparing winter clothing for Mr. Stewart and the three elder boys off a web of cloth made from our own wool, which made Mr. Stewart wish they should should be made at home. I cut them out on Monday and they were finished on Saturday, so they are all very comfortable and warm with good thick trousers and strong socks, all from our own sheep. The yarn for knitting was spun in the house, as well as knit by our own fingers."

Dec. 19th, 1834—Birth of sixth son in succession. Nine children now, and one girl had died.

"Our large family has been preserved to us through constant dangers in health and safety; when others are afflicted with sickness and death we are all in health and happiness. Our crops and flocks seldom meet with any of the disasters with which others are often visited, when whole fields are destroyed by insects, as was the case in many parts of this township last year and the year before, our crops remained untouched. When flocks of sheep are destroyed by wolves, as they are every night around us, ours have escaped. Cattle have died of a prevalent disease, our have escaped. I have invariably observed this mercy towards us although so unworthy of any particular mercy."

Dec. 24th, 1834—"Were I to follow my inclination I should spend my days between writing and reading; but those good old times are long gone by, when I could indulge myself. Mr. Stewart is very anxious to sell some land, but no one has any money to purchase or give even what he requires, which is twelve dollars an acre, for uncleared land within one and a half miles from Peterborough. Admiral Vansittart and Sir Charles Grey and others are buying about fifty miles from this, They have taken a wild tract of wild land."

A Christmas Dinner

Dec. 27th, 1834—Mrs. Stewart tells of Christmas Day at home as follows: "At five o'clock we had a good substantial dinner, the produce of our own farm; roast beef, roast goose, vegetables, and an excellent plum pudding made under Anna's direction. After dinner Mr. Stewart and I with some of the children took a walk by pale moonlight till near bed time.

Stafford Kirkpatrick (who lived at the west top of Sherbrooke street where Harold Morrow now resides) is getting himself forward in every way, and has all the law business to be had. He is highly esteemed and respected, and is consulted on all affairs of importance, public or private. Mrs. Kirkpatrick is a very pleasing, lovable young person."

A Drive to Cobourg

Jan. 30th, 1836.—(Mrs. Stewart recounts a long deferred trip to Cobourg). "So on the morning of the 12th we were all up at 5 a. m. Just as it began to grow lightish we set off. As we came near the village (Peterborough) it became full daylight; the sun rose most beautifully, the keen frost and smart team of young horses gave a light, cheerful feeling of pleasure. We passed through Peterborough where only a few people wandered out, yawning and chilly looking to see the promise of a new day. The remarks of the boys were very entertaining, particularly Frank, as he is a bit of a boy. About eight miles from Peterborough we came to the top of a hill. After being so long shut up among the pine trees all the way, here at once we saw over all the woods before us; cleared farms appeared like white spots here and there, and the beautiful blue distance which we never see here caused us surprise and admiration. 'Oh mama, where are we? What is that? What is this? Mr. Stewart stopped the horses and let us enjoy the view for a few minutes." (Cobourg was then called Amherst).

Douro Council First Meets

Jan. 1st. 1837—On this day was born another daughter. It was also memorable as the first meeting of the municipal Council of Douro. The family now consisted of four girls and six boys, "all healthy and sound in body and mind". Mr. Stewart spent two very busy months in the Parliament of Upper Canada, and in the fall the Mackenzie rebellion broke out, and about 200 volunteers started from Peterborough "for the front" upon receipt of the Governor's order.

Dec. 8th. 1837.—"The four eldest boys go to school in Peterborough every day, where we have a good master. It is a very long way for them. Sometimes the road through the woods is knee-deep in mud. There is a very dangerous bridge without battlements (guard rails) or anything to keep them from tumbling into the rapid current below."

Eldest Daughter Married

Nov. 20th, 1842—Mrs. Stewart's daughter Anna Maria was married to Dr. Hay of Peterborough, who came to Canada from Scotland in 1840 and died in 1857. And in 1845, another daughter, Ellen S., who arranged and edited "Our Forest Home" was married to Andrew Charles Dunlop.

The Stewart family moved into a new house about this time. In 1847 the bridge across the Otonabee collapsed. In that year also the railroad from Port Hope to Peterborough was chartered and much discussed. Many people were prejudiced against railways in those days. They thought the old waggon roads were good enough.

Immigrants From Ireland Bring Infectious Fever

The famine in Ireland drove many people to Canada. Many of the immigrants were stricken with typhoid, and a temporary hospital was opened for them on the Little Lake, then a good distance from the inhabited part of the town. In September Mr. Stewart, himself, died of fever. And so the family gradually dispersed. All the girls married, and the boys one by one followed. Some went to the United States. John and Frank returned in 1854, were married on the same day and settled as farmers.

Mrs. Stewart's Death

Mrs. Stewart's correspondence ended in 1872. She died in February of that year, probably of pneumonia. She was 78 years old, having been born in Dublin, Ireland, May 24th, 1794, the daughter of Rev. Francis Brown and Anna Maria Noble. In 1816 she met Thos. A. Stewart, son of William Stewart, and was married in the same year.

William Morgan

William Morgan, another of the first settlers of this district, was born in Herefordshire, England, in July 1804. Coming to Canada in 1834 he settled at once in the township of Otonabee on the Peterborough-Rice Lake road on an uncleared property of 200 acres. This he improved and occupied until his death in 1876. He was married in England in 1831 to Susan Powell, a native of Wales. Their family consisted of four sons and two daughters.

A. Powers Morgan

Anson Powers Morgan was the son of William Morgan. He was born in 1848 on the family homestead in Otonabee where he lived until 1866. He then spent two years as a clerk in the lumber business, and afterwards worked in a hotel until 1876 when he purchased the equipment and goodwill of the hotel kept by Thomas Chambers, and was well known as the proprietor of the Morgan House, at the southeast corner of Hunter and Water Streets. In 1869 he married Eliza Ryan, daughter of Thomas Ryan of Otonabee, who was also a pioneer and one of the first councillors of the municipality. He had one son, Harry Morgan, who is remembered as an outstanding hockey and lacrosse player on Peterborough teams, and one daughter, Lottie, who married Edward Cox, who was a brother of George A. Cox.

Three Sheriffs Hall

The three Sheriffs of Peterborough county since 1856 have been of the same blood and essentially the same name, James Hall.

Any sketch of them naturally goes back to their pioneer grandsire, James Hall of Clackmanan, Scotland, who came to Canada in 1820, with his wife who had been a Miss Russell, and their young family of seven children. They settled at Perth, Ontario, where Mr. Hall drew a grant of land from the Crown.

Their son James (the second) received such education as the schools of that district then afforded. As early as fifteen years of age James manifested a predilection for engineering, and purchased and studied the usual textbooks and such other works on the subject as he could procure. To this stock he subsequently added surveying instruments then in use, and after a course of self-instruction, which lasted three years, he started on foot to Toronto, 250 miles distant, and a great part of the way through a country which if not a wilderness was entirely "new", to be examined by the proper authorities for a Provincial Surveyor's certificate.

In this quest he was successful, and when the primitive means at his command are considered, as well as his youth, for James was barely eighteen years old, the result appears remarkably creditable, and certainly stamps him as a young man of whom great things might be expected.

First Tannery Here

After passing the examinations he returned to Perth and for a time practiced his profession as Public Land Surveyor in the county of Lanark. In 1830 he married Jane Albro, daughter of Samuel Albro of Halifax, N. S., and in 1834 came to the then backwood: village of Peterborough. Here he started the first tannery in the place, and also opened a store and for many years carried on a successful business.

In 1848 he was elected to the Parliament of Old Canada, and was at Montreal in that capacity when the Parliament buildings were burned by a mob on the visit of Lord Elgin. He was twice Mayor of Peterborough, and sat in the County Council for many years.

In 1856 this James Hall was appointed Sheriff of the county, and held the office until 1872, when he resigned at the earnest solicitation of friends to contest the riding of Peterborough for the Commons. He was elected by a large majority, and sat until the next general election, when he voluntarily retired from public life. He died in 1882.

Meanwhile his son, James A. Hall (the third James) succeeded him in the office of Sheriff in 1872, the duties of which he performed for fifty-one years until his death in 1923. His wife's family name had been Gilbert. Sheriff Hall, like his father, had won the respect and affection of a great many friends in this community, and his death removed a fine, old character, one of nature's gentlemen.

His successor in 1923 was his son Frederick, James, Albro Hall, (the fourth James), who had been Deputy-Sheriff under his father. His wife's family name was Bradburn, and their children includes the fifth James, a young man whose ability in baseball has made him particularly well known.

The Phelan Family

Patrick Phelan.
Edward Phelan.
Harry Phelan.
Nagle Phelan.
Basil Phelan.

Edward Phelan was born in King's county, Ireland, and came to Canada with his parents when he was but three months old. His father Patrick Phelan, settled first in the township of Dummer, where he lived several years. He afterwards moved to the township of Douro, opposite Young's Point, where he died about the year 1850.

Edward Phelan left home when about thirteen years old and engaged in lumbering for many years. He piloted the first timber that ever came to Peterborough, receiving for his services $16 a day.

In 1854 he went into the hotel business in what was known as the Phelan Hotel on Simcoe Street (now the Montgomery House), which he afterwards bought and enlarged. He first leased it in 1882, but resumed control in 1889. About 1853 he married Mary Sullivan of Peterborough. His residence was at the corner of Charlotte and George Streets for a time.

Ald. Nagle E. Phelan is a grandson of Edward Phelan, and Rev. C. J. Phelan of Campbellford is a son.

Henry Best

Henry Best, the eldest son of Thomas Best, was born in Peterborough in 1836. He attended the public schools until sixteen years of age, when he was apprenticed to the tinsmith trade. Four years later he went to the Pacific coast, by way of the Isthmus of Panama. After spending some time in San Francisco, he went to British Columbia, and spent nearly a year in the mountains, exploring and prospecting, after which he returned to San Francisco. Subsequently he sailed to Valparaiso, Chili; and was extensively engaged at the place in the manufacture of wooden cases for storing whale oil, his employees being mostly natives. This yielded encouraging profits; but disliking the country, he returned to San Francisco. He was subsequently similarly engaged at Panama; but after carrying on business there for about a year he began to yearn for the old Canadian home again; and in 1867 returned to Peterborough. Business chances, however, induced him to locate in Lindsay; but the year 1872 saw him again in Peterborough, as a permanent home, and the following year he purchased the business of his old friend, James Stevenson, into whose shop he had entered as an apprentice to the trade, 21 years previously.

His father, Thomas Best, was born in Hereford, England, being fourth of a family of six children. His early life was spent on his father's farm; but animated by that spirit of independence, etc., he left his native land for Canada, alone, in 1826. After a short stay at Kingston he made his way to the then new settlement of "Smith town" and located there. The outbreak of ship-fever among the new settlers, threatening to destroy the colony, had a tendency to change his plans and in 1827 he returned to England remaining three years, when he came to Canada a second time, and after a brief residence at Port Hope, again settled in Peterborough. This time he located just west of Little Lake, where he married a Miss Bruce, by whom he had a family of two sons and two daughters. He died here in 1877.

Peterborough Churches Grow With The City

ST. PAUL'S

In the year of 1843 occurred the disruption of the Church of Scotland and in the following years 1844 a number of the elders and ministers of the old Kirk in Canada made a decision to loose themselves from the mother church of the old country and to organize a Canadian Church under the name of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Among the number coming to this decision were the Reverend John Maurice Roger and the representative elder of St. Andrew's church in this city. The session agreed to move and on August 4 the action was approved by a joint vote of the congregation and officers of the old church.

Inasmuch as there was at that time no representative of the Presbyterian Church or Free Church as it was known, in Peterborough, the congregation used Old St. Andrews until the year 1875 when on formal demand of the church of Scotland, all but six of the congregation signified their approval that they should leave.

The congregation for the most part was homeless and the kind offer of the Methodist church to use its school house was accepted and served their needs until further plans could be made.

Immediate steps were taken to provide a site and a church for themselves and plans were made for a commodious church and the building was erected. This handsome as well as important edifice stands adjacent to Victoria Park at the corner of Murray and Water streets and was constructed at a cost of $20,000.

The new church grew so fast that in 1833 the attendance of the congregation became so large that it was necessary to enlarge the building by adding side walls and extending an addition to the rear of the building. This was done in May 1885.

In 1886 a splendid gift in the form of a magnificent organ was given to the church by the Ladies' Aid Society and in the autumn of 1907 this organ was further enlarged at a cost of $3000, the gift of the Nicholl's estate, given by the trustees.

Reverend John Maurice Roger who was for many years the pastor of the original church, St. Andrews, saw fit at the time of the break from the mother church, to follow in the steps of the majority of his congregation and became the first pastor of the first Canadian Presbyterian Church in Peterborough and here he continued his faithful services to the congregation of St. Pauls, until failing health made it imperative for him to resign his duties, soon after which he died, passing quietly away in 1878 on January 8th.

His immediate successor was the Reverend E. F. Torrence who was inducted on July 28th, 1878 who remained with his congregation until 1907 when he resigned. Calls were extended to the Reverend Robert Pogue who became the next minister. At the time of the call Mr. Pogue was the assistant pastor of Bethany Tabernacle in Philadelphia, Pa., and his call to the pulpit of St. Paul's in Peterborough was unanimous. On the evening of December 10, 1908 the first installation service to be held in the church for thirty-one years was celebrated and Mr. Pogue was duly installed.

Mr. Pogue was with his congregation until the time when St. Paul's decided not to enter the United Church of Canada in June 1925, when he resigned his charge to the Reverend William Allan who has been carrying on the work of the continuing Presbyterian Church in Canada in Peterborough. During his regime the church has prospered and one of the finest organs in the city has been installed.

ST. JAMES'

The dedication on Sunday March 28th, 1909 of St. James' Methodist church marked a new epoch in the history of the Methodist congregations in Peterborough. The increasing number of adherents to this denomination in the city made the erection of a church building a necessity and the number of faithful gentlemen who undertook to start the new congregation must have been pleased when their wish had been fulfilled.

The beautiful little edifice was well filled when the dedicatory services were held and a sermon appropriate to the occasion was preached by the Reverend J. J. P. Wilson of Lindsay, formerly of George Street Methodist Church Peterborough. The service of the dedication being read by the Reverend R. McCullough of Omemee, president of the Bay of Quinte Conference.

The trustee board which had been so active in the founding of the church stood in front of the platform. The membership consisted of Messrs. Stabler, A. W. Cressman, B. F. Ackerman, D. W. Dumble, W. G. Morrow, G. E. Rawlings and A. Press. The pastor, the Reverend H. M. Manning, read the lesson, and Mr. Roger Manning of Toronto sang at both services.

This was a great day in the life of this congregation but, the quarters soon became too small, after the period of organization was passed so a new building was to be built.

On Sunday April 27, 1917 the new Church was formally declared open and the old one was used as a Sunday School but so co-ordinated with the main building that the division could not be noticed. The church is situated on the southeast corner of Romaine and Aylmer streets.

The architecture is of Gothic design. The plans were prepared by William Blackwell and the entire construction carried out under the supervision of J. H. Fry. The sub contractors were as follows: Stonework, Herbert Sherwood; foundation, Fred Mahood; brickwork, Cuffe Brothers; slate roof, Alexander McLeod; heating, W. R. Turner; plastering, James and Joseph Wolstenholm; wiring, Alexander and Miller; plumbing, Adamson and Dobbin.

Through the generosity of Trinity Church the pews, organ and electros and some of the windows were donated.

The building committee was composed of the Reverend B. Greatrix, as chairman, A. E. Priest as secretary, and Messrs W. G. Morrow, B. F. Ackerman, A. W. Cressman, F. Kitney, Henry Robinson, Thomas Brown, Alvah Wilson, J. O. Fife and Samuel Deyell.

The opening of the church was in the hands of the Reverend Dr. Chown who was the general superintendant of the Methodist Church in Canada. The Reverend Benjamin Greatrix was the minister in charge of the congregation at the time of the expansion.

The ministers that have served the congregation of this recently organized but fast growing church have been H. M. Manning, J. G. Brown, M.A., John N. Clarry B. A., Benjamin Greatrx, E. F. Chapman, J. Douglas Rchardson, and the present pastor, the genial J. H. Dudgeon, who in the past years has been carrying on the work of guiding the members of the church.

During the pastorate of Rev. J. Douglas Richardson the congregation following in the footsteps of all others of the Methodist sect, joined the Union of the Presbyterian Methodist and Congregational Churches throughout the Dominion.

ST. GEORGE'S

The idea of inaugurating an English Church Mission in the south end of Peterborough was the outcome of conversations from time to time between Canon Davidson, the Rector of Peterborough, Archdeacon Warren and the Bishop of Toronto. The culmination of it all was the present St. George's Church at Braidwood and Lock streets.

The Bishop at the time of the origin was convinced that there was a need for church service in this district and appointed the Reverend J. H. Price as the first missioner. His Lordship also decided to transfer the charge of St. Mark's Church, Greystock, to the new mission from the charge of St. Luke's in East city.

As a preliminary step open air service was held in J. D. Manley's garden at the corner of Lock and Braidwood streets on Sunday July 7, 1912. Mr. Manley not only allowed the use or his garden but also lent the use of his piano and all the chairs in the house.

There were not enough chairs so people were requested to bring their own. It was a novel experience to see people bringing chairs on their backs and taking them home again after the service was over. There were fifty-one present at this inaugural service. Mrs. George G. Evans acted as organist and choirmistress at this impromptu meeting.

At the close of the service a meeting was held to discuss the question of forming themselves into an organized church mission. W. G. Howden, the Reeve of North Monaghan, proposed and J. D. Manley seconded, a proposition to that effect and the vote was unanimous in favor of it.

On the following Sunday evening July 14th the second service was held in the same place with a slightly larger congregation. At the close of this service a meeting was held for the purpose of electing temporary Church officers. W. G. Howden was elected the People's Warden, J. D. Manley, the Rector's Warden and A. Cuffe, Wm. H. Andrews and Fred Holmes as Sidesmen.

At this meeting it was decided to find a place for worship. The old shed in the exhibition grounds was decided upon. Permission was readily secured from the owners so the first service was held on Sunday July 21, 1912. There were seventy-one present at the inaugural service. By dint of hard work the old shed was made to look like a decent Mission by the following Sunday evening.

On Sunday August 4th, the first Sunday school was held with Mr. Manley as the superintendant and Mr. Holmes as his assistant while Claude Manley was the secretary.

The occupation of the shed ended on Sunday evening September 1 as the building was required for exhibition purposes after that date. On the two following Sundays the services were held once more at Mr. Manley's house, this time indoors.

But all this time the vestry had been looking around for a permanent building to be used as a church. At last the moment came when in agreement with the trustees of the Union Mission Church that was erected in Crawford's Grove but which was no longer in use the purchase of the building was arranged. It was then moved bag and baggage as it stood to the present site in Braidwood avenue which is a valuable one and was generously given as a free gift by T. H. Hooper of All Saints' church.

After the necessary repairs and alterations it was formally opened for divine services on Sunday, November 3, 1912. The Reverend Mr. Price under whose guidance the church first saw light, remained with the congregation for seventeen years, his ministry coming to a close with that Church in May 1920. The next six months the church was in the temporary care of the Reverend F. Elliott Baker, who stayed from June to November, 1920.

From December of that year until May 1924, the members of the church were led in worship by the Reverend W. R. Courage.

From June 15, 1924 up to the present day the Reverend J. L. Hughes, with his pleasing personality has carried out the duties as pastor much to the satisfaction of the members of the Church.

Since the date of the first service in the present Church the congregation has been steadily growing and improvements have been made. The present chancel was added during the ministry of Reverend Mr. Price in 1919, and the basement enlarged during Mr. Courage's time in 1923. Today there is a steady trend upward and the congregation is enjoying a favorable growth.

MURRAY STREET

Murray Street Baptist Church like many other of the city churches owes its beginning to an older institution. It is the daughter of Gilmour Memorial Church, so named in honor of its founder, the late Reverend John Gilmour.

A history of this church is involved with this famous personnage whose name has become a household word in the memory of many of the older citizens. He came to Canada in 1837, sent here by the New England Company to take charge of temporal and spiritual welfare of the Rice Lake and Chemong Indians.

While in performing his duties he did not neglect the white settlers, and in the first few years of his work, he with four other communicants established the famous church that now bears his name and is so well known on the Chemong road.

Not content with this progress he contributed land on Aylmer street to the value of fifty pounds for the erection of a Baptist chapel in the town of Peterborough, and a building was erected on this site to serve as the first meeting place for the Baptist sect in the town. During the history of the church the location of the building has twice been changed.

Soon the work outgrew the small building and it was found necessary to expand into larger quarters so the trustees purchased the building of the Bible Christians on Murray street, now the Legion Hall, which was a more commodious building. They improved this at a cost to the congregation of approximately $8,000.

This church was used, and for several years it was taxed to its utmost capacity to accommodate merely the members of the congregation without the admission of the numerous visitors.

Therefore in 1910 an ambitious building and expansion project was undertaken and one of the first steps was to purchase the site upon which the present church is built. The structure was erected at a cost of $65,000.

To the Rev. John Clifford went the honor of laying the corner stone and the date of the celebration was in June 29, 1911.

The church was opened with due ceremony nearly a year later, in May 1912, which attracted a huge congregation and a series of sermons was arranged for the occasion by the Reverend O. P. S. Wallace and Professor Gilmour and Trotter.

The church is beautifully situated, facing Central Park and is of Old English style in gray stone with the interior decorations finished in harmony with the exterior.

In recent years this church suffered a rather serious fire which did extensive damage to the organ and the auditorium but they were immediately renovated and the damage repaired.

The ministers in the order which they served the congregation are as follows: The Reverends, John Gilmour, Edward Roberts, Charles Carroll, E. J. Stobo, Senior, W. M. Walker, P. C. Parker, John Trotter, Jothan Basto, J. R. Webb, Dr. C. W. Rose.

The congregation is now enjoying worship under the competent and kindly leadership of J. H. Sutcliffe, M. A.

TRINITY

The beautiful Trinity Church where it now stands was not always located on that site or known as Trinity United Church. Its origin is closely connected with that of George Street United Church dating away back to the year 1873.

In this year the capacity of George Street Methodist Church to accommodate a congregation that was increasing in numbers was taxed to its capacity, and about the time of the building of the present George Street Church on the north east corner of McDonnel and George streets, the decision to make a new circuit to be known as Charlotte Street Church was made.

The growth of the town to the south and west called for provision to be made for an additional place of worship to look after the needs of that section of the community. A site was secured at the corner of Charlotte and Reid streets and on this site the building facing on Charlotte street, section now immediately east of the Clinic, between Reid and Rubidge streets was erected and was known as Charlotte Street Church.

On Wednesday June 25, 1873 the corner stone was laid, Mrs. Hillard placing the stone in place. After this, the work on the church was pushed with all haste and the building was opened on December 7, 1873, the Reverend Dr. Nelles of Victoria College carrying out the ceremony in the presence of a large congregation. On September 20, 1891 the formal opening of the church and new Sunday School was held. This new school was built as a wing to the original church and faced on Reid street. One thousand dollars was raised at an opening meeting to help pay for the construction of this new building.

Under successive pastors and in care of the board of trustees and stewards the church so prospered that it quite outgrew its original meeting place. At a meeting of the building committee that was held in the office of G. W. Morrow on Monday, May 26th, 1913 it was decided to commence work on the new church immediately. It was to be erected on the Aaron Cox property at the head of Simcoe street on Rubidge street. The plans of the architect had been accepted and it was decided to advertise for tenders up to the 18 of June of that year.

The architects were Burke, Howard and White of Toronto with F. Bartlett as resident superintendant. The contractor was Wm. Langford with A. Webb as construction foreman. The following men comprised the building committee: Dr. Morrison, Hon. J. R. Stratton, Dr. F. C. Neal, W. G. Morrow, R. Neil, T. E. Bradburn, John Williams, W. G. Morrow was the chairman, Robt. Neal the treasurer, Rev. J. P. Wilson, B. A., pastor, R. F. Downey, recording steward.

The corner stone of the new Trinity Church as it was now to be known was laid in the afternoon of September 22, 1914 by H. C. Cox of Toronto. The ceremony was made under the most favorable weather conditions and in the presence of numerous spectators. Among those present and the speakers were: The Reverends, Wm. Johnson, chairman of the district; Mr. Garbutt, president of the Conference; S. J. Shorey of Lindsay; James Rollins, representing the Peterborough Ministerial Association; J. P. Wilson the pastor; R. Pogue and Mr. Phelps; His Worship Magistrate Dumble; His Worship Mayor Buller, Messrs H. C. Cox of Toronto, G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., Dr. Morrison and W. G. Morrow.

The evening programme included a New England tea and a programme in the Church on Charlotte street. The Church was formally dedicated on Sunday January 2, 1916. The reverend S. D. Chown, D. D. general superintendant of the Methodist Church, received the keys in behalf of the congregation and in replying said: "I desire to thank you on behalf of the Methodist Church which extends from the Yukon to Bermuda." The act of W. G. Morrow in presenting the keys and the reply of Mr. Chown who also conducted the sermon completed the dedication of the new edifice.

The front pews were reserved for members of the city council and other dignitaries who were present. With the Reverend Mr. Chown was the pastor, the Reverend Mr. Wilson, and the Reverends B. Greatrix, and R. G. Peever. John Crane was organist for the church at the time of the ceremony.

The trustee board at this historical event were: The pastor, Dr. Morrison, R. J. Kidd, W. G. Morrow, Dr. F. C. Neal, His Honor Judge Huyke, W. C. Switzer, W. D. Campbell, A. B. Cunningham, and R. Neill.

On Sunday June 18th, 1922 two beautiful memorial windows and a bronze tablet were unveiled in the church. The honor roll was compiled by John Kennett and was placed in the vestibule of the church. Addresses were given by the Reverend J. P. Wilson, D.D., who was pastor of the church during the greater part of the war, and by Dr. A. W. MacPherson who was commander of the Rangers at that time. There was special music by the choir and the Caledonia Pipe Band while a quartette of buglers sounded the Last Post. The members of the Great War Veterans attended the service to do honor to their fallen comrades.

Pastors that have served this congregation faithfully have been the Reverends: George Edwards, Joseph J. Rae, D. O. Crossly, W. J. Jolliffee B.C.L., H. M. Manning, Geo. W. Henderson, T. J. Marshall, James P. Wilson under whose pastorate the new Trinity Church came into existence, A. J. Langford, and David Wren who is the present pastor and under whose guidance the congregation is still progressing to higher planes.

PARK STREET

Park Street Baptist church, like many other of the more recent churches in the city, looks to a pioneer parent church for its birth. This church, erected to look after the growing needs of the southern section of the city, was in the first place founded as a mission of Murray Street Church and continued in this capacity until the year 1895.

In that year it was decided to become a separate congregation, so in the month of May it adopted the name of Park Street Church and large extensions and improvements were made to the property after it became an integral body.

The Reverend John Potter, who was then the pastor of Murray Street Church, had the honor of presiding at the first services of this congregation after it became a separate unit. After the service an election of officers took place to carry on the work of the church.

Then in the weeks to come it was the duty of the congregation to select a pastor and the choice of the members fell upon J. W. Pady who was called. Mr. Pady was at that time studying at McMaster College and did not join the congregation until the close of the university term, when he entered the church, taking on the duties of the first minister. His pastorate continued until April 1896.

This left a summer vacancy in the church and James Chapman supplied for the period until the Reverend Mr. Trapscott was called as pastor. He remained only a few months.

In the year 1897 the Reverend O. C. Elliott came and remained to carry out his work until the month of June in 1901 when he was succeeded during the coming year by the Reverend J. H. Hannah, who in his turn at the close of his ministry with the Park Street Congregation, was succeeded by the Reverend A. H. Brace.

The ministry of the Reverend A. H. Brace was one of the most successful up to the time that he said farewell to his congregation on May 3rd 1908. It was also the longest pastorate up to that date. During his ministry he had baptized 105 persons and solemnized 40 marriages; there were seventy-two members on the church roll at the beginning of his term and by the close the number had more than doubled.

Financial matters also received his attention with the same degree of success as did the other matters. When he first came as minister of the congregation, there was a heavy mortgage on the church and the treasury was empty; when he left the mortgage was paid off and there was a thousand dollars in the treasury. This is a remarkable advance in the span of the church and attributes its success to the careful and hard work of the pastor.

The congregation so prospered that the first building became inadequate, and in 1908 a new building was erected and opened for divine services in the interests of the members of the church. Pastors that have served the congregation since the time of the Reverend Mr. Brace have been, the Reverends Riddiford, Connors, Dougald Brown, William Morrow and N. R. McLeod.

The present work is being carried on by the Reverend James L. Harton, who is well thought of by the members of his church and is truly a leader in the work. To Miss Margaret Mann goes the honor of being the oldest surviving member of this church.

BETHANY TABERNACLE

The Bethany Tabernacle now situated on George street is the outcome of the work of the Christian and Missionary Alliance that was first organized in Peterborough in the year 1892. The organization took place under the capable leadership of Pastor R. Zimmerman who conducted the first meetings that were held on Woodbine Avenue in Ashburnham.

It seemed hard at first to get a suitable place in which to conduct their meetings. After the first meetings that were held in East City the congregation moved to the Assembly Hall in the Market Building on George street and then to a large room on Water street opposite the Bank of Montreal.

The present building that is now known as the Bethany Tabernacle was erected in 1898 and dedicated in the same year with the remarkable record of being free from debt.

The pastors that have had charge of the work of the church are as follows: R. Zimmerman, G .S. Shaw, Robertson, A. E. Stenoagal, J. Free, E. E. Johnson, A. A. Doner, M. Billester and the present Pastor the Reverend R. K. Mills has been carrying on the work for more than four years.

This church has always had an active body of young people and it emphasizes particularly the mission aspect of its work. This is shown by the number of its members that have gone into foreign fields and who were formerly associated with this branch of the Christian and Missionary Alliance.

Those who have left to take up this interesting work are as follows: G. Dickerson, H. Wallbrook, W. Smart, L. Turnbull, W. H. Oldfield, W. M. Turnbull, Mrs. J. Smith, W. A. Shantz, J. R. Turnbull, Miss M. J. Quinn, Mrs. M. R. Hilford, W. H. Johnson, Miss N. E. Jones, Miss Q. A. Johnson, and Mrs. C. P. Green, a total of fifteen members in all.

The Young People's Society is very active at present and has grown to such an admirable extent that besides the care of the Sunday School it has the charge and care of two other branches of this organization in the city. A Sunday School on Orpington Road and another on Barnado avenue are under its direction.

Dr. William Turnbull who is at present Vice President of the Christian Missionary and Alliance Association which is an International Society with headquarters in New York City was once a member of the local congregation, and is a native of the city of Peterborough. Mr. Turnbull is also the editor of the Alliance Weekly.

Much credit for the success of the organization at present is due to its willing and efficient secretary A. J. Johnson.

KNOX

The suggestion of two ladies back in the year 1872 developed into the Knox Church which came into being in 1907. This was one of the first churches established to meet the rapid growth of the city. In 1872 an Interdenominational Ladies Visiting Association was formed in the city of Peterborough. Mrs. James A. P[illegible] and Miss Charlotte Dickson were appointed to the district south of Charlotte street and in their investigation found that part of the city woefully lacking in a religious meeting place, especially for Sunday School work.

The only unoccupied building they could find in this section of the city was a stable on the east side of Aylmer street between Charlotte and King streets, and much to their surprise they found it to be the original Peterborough Presbyterian Church. The owner allowed the use of this interesting building for the purpose of a Sunday school. It was then cleaned up and papered, benches were supplied by the committee and in May 1872 opened its doors for worship with T. W. Nesbet as its first superintendant and nine scholars in attendance.

By 1873 the school had outgrown its original quarters and a new place had to be found. A vacant lot on Dalhousie streets between Stewart and Rubidge streets was available and the owner, Walter Patterson, granted a lease to the trustees for twenty years at the nominal fee of one dollar. By donations and subscriptions a building was erected and the school was conducted under the leadership of W. W. Johnson. The intention originally was to keep it interdenominational but the work was carried on by Presbyterians. Some of the early teachers were: Misses Baptie Gundy, Gilmour, Neals and Patterson while the infant class was in charge of Miss Moffatt.

The work continued under Mr. Johnson until 1892 when the workers were informed that their lease had expired, and the property was wanted for other purposes. The property now occupied by Knox Church was then purchased but due to objections of the Presbytery the work was abandoned and lay dormant for ten years.

Then in 1902 the subject was brought up after an investigation by a committee from St. Paul's church and a building was erected by Rutherford Brothers and a committee from this church comprised of Messrs R. E. Wood, W. G. Fergson, T. A. S. Hay, Wm. Madill, J. W. Bennett, Robert Harrison, Adam Hall, James Gillespie, J. H. Rogers and J. H. Connal looked after the building. It was now St. Paul's Mission, and was opened as such with Reverend J. A. Wilson as pastor and assistant pastor to the parent church. The Sunday School was under the guidance of James Hall. The first communion service was held in March 1904. The next step was in March of that year when St. Paul's guaranteeing expenses, applied to have this congregation set aside as a separate mission station, and after a conference with St. Andrew's steps for organization were taken on June 6, 1905. Certificates of 44 were presented and the new congregation decided to call themselves Knox Church. On October 25, 1906 a recommendation from the Presbytery to become an entirely separate congregation as considered and unamiously accepted, and became recognized as such on January 1st, 1907. The Reverend Henry James Keith, B.D. M. A. was called as the first minister and was inducted on April 11th of that year.

The quarters soon became too small and at the congregational meeting held in January 1909, encouraged by a bequest and several large donations it was decided to erect a new building. On Sunday April 18th the corner stone of the new $23,000 church was laid by His Honour J. M. Gibson the Lieut Governor of the province. The pastor, Mr. Keith, conducted the proceedings, calling upon the Reverend J. G. Potter as representative of the Presbytery to read the Scripture after which the Reverend Mr. McKenzie led in prayer. Greetings were received from other churches as well as short speaches by his Worship Mayor Morrow and the Hon. J. R. Stratton M. P. The corner stone was donated by the Young Ladies' Bible Class.

The tudor gothic style church was formally opened for worship on Sunday, December 11, 1910 with the Reverend Dr. Marsh of Springville, Moderator of the Presbytery conducting the morning and evening services. The occasion was one for a week of services that were conducted by visiting clergy.

At the time of the opening the pastor who had guided the congregation to greater achievement was Mr. Keith. Many of the furnishings of the new edifice were the gifts of different organizations within the church, the Young People's Guild presented the pulpit, the Ladies' Aid gave the carpets, the Sunday School donated the pulpit chairs, and the offering plates were the gift of the Goforth Class within the Sunday School. The communion table was given by Mrs. George Campbell out of respect for the memory of her late mother, Mrs. Emma Cox.

On May 17, 1914 a wonderful new organ was dedicated in the church by the Reverend Dr. Hanson of Erskine Presbyterian Church, Montreal, and George Kenyon was the organist who delighted the large congregation with the possibilities of this new instrument.

The congregation up to the present time has been progressing in its favorable way and is recognized as one of the outstanding churches of the city. The following ministers have served their followers in this congregation: Reverends J. A. Keith, J. A. McKenzie, M. C. Mackinnon and the present minister the Reverend William McDonald is carrying on the present work of the congregation.

THE SALVATION ARMY

The Salvation Army was first introduced into Peterborough by Captain Ester Mills in the spring of the year, 1885. The first building used was the old Baptist church on Aylmer street where Gillespie's Garage now stands, between Hunter and Simcoe streets on the east side. This was used to advantage until the Salvation Army Barracks were erected and later the Temple on the present Simcoe street site.

This building was erected in the year 1888 while Captain Woodgate was in charge of the corps and during the time that James Stephenson was mayor of the city. The officers' quarters were in the building but were found to be very unsatisfactory so in 1892 new quarters were found on Bolivar street.

About 1897 a section of the front part of the Barracks was partitioned off and made into officer's quarters, the original quarters in the building being made into an addition to the Young Peoples Auditorium.

The building was first heated by a discarded steam furnace which was transported here from the Toronto Temple. Later, after many unsuccessful attempts by stove heating because of the unsatisfactory condition of the original furnace, a hot air heating plant was built. The building was not plastered and was cold as a barn and just as bleak.

In the year 1909 a move was made by which the officers, Major and Mrs. Walton, changed to new living quarters on Stewart street when an alteration was made in the interior of the barracks, a bandroom and an officers meeting room being built, while the entrance to the hall also was greatly improved.

The building was never very satisfactory until the renovation of 1922 was made. Up to 1909 the building was called the Barracks but at that time it was thought by the census board to be a good time to change the name to the Salvation Army Temple. The change was sanctioned by Headquarters.

At the time of these changes in 1909 the Young People's section had had a rapid growth after it had been originated in the city by Miss McCormick and her work carried on by Mrs. George Comstock.

Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls on her death left a sum of money to be divided among the Protestant Sunday Schools of the city. This was denied the Salvation Army who later recovered it through court action to the extent of $500.00 with a later addition of $350.00. This all went to the work of the army.

In the year 1917 it was decided to purchase the houses upon the land at 348 and 350 Aylmer street to make the necessary expansion for the Young People's section which was becoming decidedly cramped. This was during the leadership of Adjt. John McElhiney, who with the aid of R. C. Braund sought the support of Commander W. J. Richards in Toronto. Financial assistance was also received from Toronto and from R. C. Braund, which eventually in 1922 saw the erection of the Young People's temple on Alymer street. The building was entrusted to R. C. Braund and commenced on May 21st 1922. Adjutant Bunton, then in charge, arranged a mortgage on the property to the extent of $13,000 to aid in remodelling the old temple. J. J. Braund was the carpenter and builder. The structure was greatly improved and was vastly appreciated after the old meeting place. It was formally opened by Commissioner Sowton in November.

But on January 10, 1923 at 3 a.m. a fire destroyed the Senior temple on Simcoe street and damaged the Young People's building to the extent of $2,000. By the aid of the citizens, soldiers and Headquarters the temple was rebuilt under the guidance of W. J. Braund. Temporary meetings were held in the Great War Veterans Hall, and later in the Junior Temple.

The temple was re-opened in December of the year 1923. The fire and the rebuilding were during the time of Commandant Arthur Smith. The band instruments which were destroyed during the catastrophe were replaced and by 1928 the debt incurred had been reduced very substantially.

One of the outstanding events in the history of the Army i nthe last year was the Old Folks Tea which was held in November around Thanksgiving time. It was one of the most successful gatherings ever held in the history of the army, with the credit largely going to Ensign Ernest Green the present leader.

Browntown Temple was the outcome of the active interest which the Young People of the Army had in that section of the city. To the credit of W. H. Barnes it was that the lot and building were made possible for this expansion and ever since this organization has been one of the most progressive in connection with the Army.

Following is a list of the officers that have been in command of the Army since its debut in Peterborough: Captains: Ester Mills, Lottie Willis, Ella Alyea, Bertha Smith, William Poole, Alexander Bolton, Arthur Savage, Thomas Howell, Staff Capt.: Stephen Marshall. GEORGE STREET

The Wesylan Methodists in Peterborough as well as in other parts of Canada were foremost in the world of pioneer evangelization, so George Street Church was among the first in the city.

The first building of the congregation used by this denomination for divine services was a small frame structure erected in 1834 on land granted by the legislative council. The land is described in the deed of the grant as lots 1 and 2 north of McDonnel and west of George streets. The grant is dated November 1834.

The increase of the congregation soon required another and a larger church. This was built in 1844, being 60 by 30 feet. The older building was fitted out and used as the parsonage, and served the ministers faithfully for a number of years until the period from 1893 to 1897 during the ministry of W. R. Young B. A. when the splendid new parsonage was erected on Water street.

In 1884 the church was again enlarged by an addition of 30 feet, this part afterwards was detached and now forms the double dwelling on McDonnel street. In the next decade a handsome pipe organ was purchased.

The increase of the congregation soon required another and a larger church, this was built in 1874 when the large and magnificent church was erected on the very desirable property on the east side of George street, having a frontage on McDonnel and Water streets as well as on the main street. The cost of the church was $60,000, a very large sum indeed for those days. This showed the confidence of the congregation and the board of governors in the future, and this confidence was well founded as is shown by the popularity of the church in the present day.

The architecture of the church was modelled on that of the Metropolitan Church in Toronto and erected by the same architect. The spacious basement was used for social functions and served as the Sunday School until it became necessary in recent years to erect a more spacious and modern building immediately to the north.

In the years 1872 and 1873 the congregation grew so rapidly that it exceeded the capacity of the church, so it was decided that a separate circuit be made. This was done, giving birth to Charlotte Street Church.

The interior of the George street church was later remodelled at the eastern end to accommodate a new and larger organ. In 1909 the interior of the church was decorated again with rich but subdued colors.

The tower which up to this date had not been completed was finished during the incumbency of the Reverend M. Pearson.

A list of the clergymen and laymen that served this church is as follows: 1835—The Reverends John Black, Wm. Deverell. In 1836—J. Armstrong and H. Montgomery. In 1837—A Green was the presiding elder and G. Poole and S. Hulbert were the circuit preachers. In 1839—A Green was the presiding elder, with G. Miller and S. Solomon. In 1840—Wm. Davidson, Wm. McFadden, J. Sanderson, and Kennedy Creighton. In 1841—William Davidson, as chairman and William McFadden and Thomas Jefferies as circuit preachers. In 1842—Reverend Asa Hulbert, William McFadden and George Kennedy. In 1843—William Coleman and Robert Darlington. In 1844—Robert Darlington and Robert Demorest. In 1845—P. S. Ladow. In 1846—William McCullough and T. Cleghorn. In 1847—William McCullough and Charles C. Slater. In 1848 — J. Godson and Charles Turner. It was during the regime of these latter that the Peterborough circuit was divided off and Millbrook was separated from the parent church. In 1849-1851—Isaac B. Howard. In 1852—Reverend John Gemly. In 1854-1856—William Poole. In 1857-1858—William Scott. In 1859-1860—Henry Lanton. In 1861-1863 — J. Carroll. In 1864-1865—J. Brock. In 1866-1868—J. H. Johnson M. A. In 1869-1871—C. H. Davis. In 1921-1926—Harold Young M. A. B. D. From 1926—J. Edgar Todd.

At the time of the Union of the Methodists and the Presbyterians, this famous old congregation fell in line with the rest of the Methodist churches and became part of the union.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

The first priest who ministered to the Catholics of the little settlement of what is now the city of Peterborough, was the Rev. Father Ahearn, who was here for a few months in 1826, and was succeeded by the Rev. Father James Crowley.

During the early days of the settlement, a form of typhoid known as ship fever broke out, and was very destructive. It prevailed chiefly amongst the Irish Catholics, but was by no means confined to them, as it spread in every direction. Among others carried off by this fever was the wife of Adam Scott. In a charitable spirit, Father Crowley hastened from one plague-stricken hut to another, ever ready to go where the deadly sickness was at its first. Nor did he confine his kind ministrations to those of his own age creed. Whether the fever-stricken settler was Catholic or Protestant mattered not to him; he was every ready to bestow a word of sympathy and comfort upon all, and for many years the oldest residents of the town, in which for six years he lived and labored, retain a kind remembrance of his devotion and fidelity, and his smiling countenance was ever fresh in thei minds.

The Rev. Father Ahearn, who was the first resident priest here, and came in 1826, less than a year after the settlement of the immigrants, lived in a log house which was on the southeast corner of George and Charlotte streets on a lot later occupied by Edward Phelan. Here Mass was first celebrated in Peterborough. Father Ahearn attended as far as was possible to the spiritual needs of a vast mission, comprising the Counties of Victoria, Durham, Northumberland and half of Hastings.

After Father Ahearn there was an interregnum followed by Father James Crowley alluded to in the opening paragraphs. Several log houses, one of larger size than the others, had been built by the order of the Hon. Peter Robinson on the west side of what is now Water street, opposite where the Peterborough Club now stands; in the largest of these Father Crowley was wont to say Mass; in one of the others he lived. As soon as the growing prosperity of the town increased the value of the land, these old and unsightly buildings were burned, (most probably by incendiaries, states the historian), and Mass was then held in the Court House. This was a small log structure, 18 by 24 feet, standing on the site of the present Court House building.

On the first settlement of the town, the block of ground which is bounded by George, Chamber, Brock and Hunter streets, was granted to the Roman Catholic body for church purposes; and in later years a small frame church was erected on it. This was a one-storey structure which was burned to the ground on March 16th, 1838, destroying all the books, records and papers of the early church. The fire was caused by a defective stove.

Upon this, Bishop McDonnell of Kingston, who was in charge of affairs, sold the lot to Robert Chamberlain for six hundred pounds, using the proceeds, together with the liberal contributions of both Protestants and Catholics alike, in the erection of the present stone church on a lot granted by the Government.

The public grants to the Catholic Church in Peterborough, dated February 13th, 1834, consisted of the ground above mentioned, described as lots 1 and 2, south of Brock and west of George streets; also lot 14 (new survey), fronting on Hunter street (the site of the present Cathedral), and Park Lot No. 6, in the township of South Monaghan.

Father Crowley had been succeeded in 1833 by Father O'Hara, who remained for about a year, being replaced by Father Bennett, who was also relieved in a year's time. In 1835, the Rev. John Butler, of a well-known Tipperary family, was appointed to preside over the Peterborough church. He labored among his large and increasing flock for nineteen years and it was during his pastorate that the large stone church of St. Peter was built.

The church, as it was then, was smaller than the present edifice. It was described as standing in a commanding situation, on the summit of a hill in the western part of the town, and was a plain structure with a steeple and the arches of the windows curving upwards from the base in the style known as "carpenter's gothic." On the exterior no ornament whatever was attempted. It was built to accommodate a thousand people, at a cost of $12,000.

The naming of the cty as Peterborough brought to the Catholics associations of the fisherman-saint, and their church was dedicated as "Sancto Pietro in Vinculis,"—"to Saint Peter in Chain."

To John Corkery, Senior, of this city, The Examiner is indebted for many kindnesses in looking up records of the old church and schools of the city. Mr. Corkery furnished a sketch which give a fine idea of the church, as it was in its early years. It faced, as now, to the south, but at the rear, a sacristy took the place of the transept which was added later. At the southwest corner of the lot was a woodshed and another woodshed adjoined the church near the sacristy, while a barn and stable was erected, fronting on what is now known as Hall street, at the north behind the church. The priest's house was built on the lot somewhere near the spot where the statue of Christ the King now stands, and faced down toward Hunter street, while a well was in the extreme northeast corner of the lot. In the space which intervened between the priest's house and Hunter street, directly to the left of the Cathedral, was an orchard and vegetable garden.

The church contained a handsome and well-toned organ (still in use there), purchased in 1853 at a cost of $1,600.

The bell which hangs in the steeple of St. Peter's Cathedral is one of three which were cast in Spain over two hundred years ago, and which were said to contain a large amount of silver. Bishop McDonell bought them and sent one to Peterborough. It was the first bell put up in the town. The "Angelus," as is still the custom, was rung at six in the morning, at noon, and at six o'clock in the evening. In the interior of the church a marbel tablet commemorates the memory of the Rev. John Butler, being, as the inscriptions states; "a monument to his piety and zeal." A second tablet commemorates another priest, the Rev. Daniel Farrelly, brother of Monsignor James Farrelly of Belleville.

The Rev. John Butler died, aged seventy-one years, on June 16th, 1853, left here for Hamilton, being appointed as the first Bishop of that diocese. On May 11th of the same year, the Rev. Daniel Farrelly, above mentioned, was appointed, and died here on June 1st of 1858.

He was succeeded by Rev. Father M. Mackie and Rev. Dean Oliver Kelly, who was appointed about 1863 and left here in 1871 to go to Kingston. Next came Father M. Lynch, who remained here for about ten years and was followed by Father P. Conway, Father P. Rudkins, Father G. A. Cicolari, Father D. J. Scollard (now Bishop of Sault Ste. Marie), the late Monsignor Casey, Monsignor McColl (now of Lindsay), Rev. C. J. Phelan (now of Campbellford) and the present rector, the Rev. Paul Costello.

In 1882, Peterborough was made the center of a new diocese, being part of that of Kington, and comprising the Counties of Peterborough, Victoria, Northumberland, Durham, and the Districts of Algoma, Muskoka and Parry Sound.

On Thursday, September 21st, 1882, the first Bishop of Peterborough, the Rt. Rev. John Francis Jamot, who, in 1874, had been consecrated Bishop of Sarepta and Vicar Apostolic of Northern Canada, took charge of the diocese, and was formally installed by His Grace Archbishop Lynch of Toronto.

In 1884, during the summer months, many improvements were made in the church. A transept and sacristy were added, making the church cruciform in shape. The original portion of the edifice was also entirely re-modelled and re-decorated, at a cost of $20,000.

Bishop Jamot died in 1886 and was succeeded by Bishop T. J. Dowling, formerly parish priest at Paris, Ontario, in the diocese of Hamilton. He was consecrated on May 1st, 1887, and was later appointed Bishop of Hamilton.

His successor here was Bishop R. A. O'Connor, formerly parish priest of Barrie, in the diocese of Toronto, who was consecrated on May 1st, 1889 and died in January of 1913.

The present Bishop of Peterborough, the Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D. D. was named on June 21st, 1913 and was consecrated on September 24th, 1913. He has just been appointed as coadjutor, with the right of succession, to Archbishop Spratt of Kingston, and is at the present time the Titular Bishop of Armoria.

On February 24th, 1905, the diocese was again divided and Rev. D. J. Scollard of North Bay was consecrated as the first Bishop for the new diocese of Sault Ste. Marie, comprising Manitoulin Island, to the Height of Land on the north and from Nipissing District on the east to the Win-

Peterborough Always Had Plenty of Amusements

The first tradition of a playhouse in Peterborough put it in a spot which would hardly be imagined as harboring a company of mimic entertainers. And that was in a former Methodist church. Across the street from the present George street United Church still stand the houses which were at one time portions of the old church building of the Methodists of this city. It was an edifice with a tin steeple surmounting it, and later, it was split up into four sections. The double house which stands next to the service station on George and McDonnel Streets was a part of it.

But the old church building, after its abandonment, was used for a time by a travelling stock company, although there is no record extant of the plays presented there.

Another very old theater was called Hills' Music Hall, and it was placed in the center of what is now the market square. It was the first hall of its kind in the town, as it then was, forty years ago, to be equipped with scenery, and it had a belltower on the eastern end.

The man who erected it was E. C. Hill, a bill-poster who was also an organ-builder. He erected and lived in the old, but still dignified and handsome, house, which is at the corner of Brock and Donegal Streets, and is now owned and occupied by James Murty and his sister and brother. Mr. Hill built a pipe-organ into this house, which afforded him much pleasure during his occupation.

In Hill's Music Hall, which had a seating capacity of seven hundred, many well-known theatrical performers appeared. There was Joe Murphy, and the Holman Opera Company, and the McDowells in a comedy repertoire, which included the first presentation of the now famous plays, "The Private Secretary", and "Charley's Aunt."

When Hill's Music Hall was abandoned as a theatrical center, it was turned into a butter and egg market, and the vendors used to go upstairs and sit in the same hall that was wont, in former days, to re-echo to the laughter and applause of an amusement-seeking crowd.

Then came Bradburn's Opera House, in the market building. But that, as Rudyard Kipling remarks so sagely, "Is another story."

The old Opera House in the market block, which is now used as a third-floor hall by the Orange Lodges of the city and others desirous of presenting amateur plays on its stage, was for many years the bright gathering-place for theatrical fans of the city. At the time of its erection by Thomas Bradburn, it was considered, with its stage and curtains and good flooring and the aristocratic-looking circle of upper boxes, to be quite the equal of any theatre in the province. It opened on November 13th, 1876, with a play called "The Adventures", performed by the Ada Gray Company.

The walls of the old Opera House echoed to many a famous voice. One of its earliest actors was Will T. Hodge, who made such a smashing success in "The Man from Home," and who is now playing Broadway in a mystery story, "Straight Through the Door."

Others noted in Thespian circles who appeared there were the Dolly Sisters, the always popular Marks Brothers, Dan McHardy, Lillian Kennedy, Will and Sadie Scanlon, Laura Mapleson, who was called the Australian nightingale and who originated the principal role in "The Fencing Master," Charles L. Davis, in his notable rural play, "Alvin Joslin", Charles Clegg, for many years a double for the well-known actor, Denman Thompson, McKee Rankin, Ed DeOsier of Shakespearian renown, Walker Whitesides and Louis Morrison, who was a wonderful "Mephistopheles" in the opera of "Faust."

Dan Simons, a local player who has made a success of his career, had his first professional performance in Bradburn's old Opera House, with the Stevenson Repertoire Company. He and Jimmy Wallbrook, also a native of Peterborough, who later became the champion wooden shoe dancer of the world, appeared in dances and acrobatic stunts.

On January 11th, 1878, a man named W. J. Fowler gave an exhibition in the Opera House of a new device, the "telephone connection", using wires of the local telegraph agency. Citizens who were present talked to people in the town and in Lindsay and Port Hope, and got quite a thrill, doubtless, from the experience.

On January 27th, 1878, the first appearance in the city of a phonograph took place there and on February 26th, 1880, Edward Hanlon, champion oarsman of the world, was the guest of the Peterborough Rowing Club and addressed a gathering at the Opera House.

On January 11th, 1889, Dalton McCarthy spoke to the members of the Imperial Federation League and on November 7th, 1893, Margaret L. Shepherd, anti-Romanist and self-styled "escaped nun", addressed the members of the Orange Order after they had escorted her in a torch-light procession through the streets.

On April 9th, 1894, John L. Sullivan of Boston, champion pugilist and boxer, was in the city. He was evidently a man of reserve, because the chonicle records of him that he made no public appearance whatever except for the few minutes he was on the stage of the Opera House, keeping himself secluded in his hotel room.

Other pugilistic champions who made their appearances on the stage at the old Opera House were Jim Mace, retired champion of the world, and his companion, Jim Fitzsimmons, who were here on January 12th, 1897.

On January 21st of 1897, the first exhibition of moving pictures took place in Peterborough. It was called a "cinematograph" and was alluded to "as something marvellous."

On March 10th of 1899, the band of the 57th Regiment played for the first time in the city, in the old Opera House, under direction of Rupert Gliddon.

Circuses formed much of the entertainment of the people in the older days. Their arrival in the city constituted a gala event, but they were not always pleasant occasions, as murder followed in their wake at two different dates in the city's history.

On June 23rd of 1888, when Howe's Mammoth Circus was in the town, playing on the old market square, an employee named Farrelly shot and killed an Indian named Simon Elijah from the Oneida Reservation. The Indian had been tormenting him.

Farrelly was tried and condemned to be hanged on November 8th. But workmen in the town got up a petition for clemency and his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment in the Kingston Penitentiary.

In 1885, when Downs' Monster Circus visited the town, another shooting occurred. A man who claimed to be the brother of the sheriff of that year, approached the ticket-seller and demanded to be allowed in free to see the show, with his friends. The ticket-seller refused to allow this and was accosted by the other man, who, in the melee, raised a heavy board to strike him with. An employee of the circus, fearing injury to his comrade, and having a hand that was also very light on the trigger, raised his gun and shot the intruder through the forehead, killing him instantly.

In the resulting investigation, the blame for the murder was placed on the shoulders of another employee of the circus, who had an air-tight alibi. It was proven beyond doubt that he had been sitting quietly in an uptown hotel at the time the shooting occurred, and in the meantime, the real killer escaped.

When the circus left town, after the investigation, the men went out riding the box-cars with sawed-off shot guns in their hands, fearing the vengeance of an aroused populace.

A woman who, as a young performer, operated the circus calliope for that show, was in the city just a few weeks ago, and recalled the circumstances of the tragic event.

F. H. Dobbin, in his veracious and interesting history of olden times in Peterborough, records with great faithfulness many of the visits of the circuses. In the early days, they came more frequently than they do now.

In 1880, on June 11th, Forepaugh's Circus was in town, settling itself on the block bounded by Stewart, Rink and Bethune streets, and on September 9th, 1881, Cole's Circus was here, while on June 15th, 1882, Myers' and Short's Mammoth Circus visited Peterborough.

On September 15th, 1884, Forepaugh's Circus made its appearance here, and on August 15th, 1885, Downs' Monster Circus arrived, while Forepaugh's was back again on Aug. 21st, 1886. Howe's Mammoth Circus appeared on June 23rd, 1888, and on September 3rd, 1889 came Barnum's Show, while Robinson's "Big Show" visited Peterborough on September 8th, 1891.

There seems to have been a break in the appearances of circuses here for some years, or else Mr. Dobbin grew tired of recording their arrival and departure. On August 24th, 1895, he mentions the visit of Sells' Brothers Circus and on June 29th, 1899, Forepaugh and Sells' Circus arrived.

They were mentioned sometimes as playing over in Ashburnham and also on the market square, which at that time, of course, was a much larger expanse than now.

John McMahon's Old-Fashioned Circus was one of those which appeared on the square and it is described by William Bowman, who remembers it well, as being "small but good". This show specialized in highly-trained performing animals and had one of the cleverest team of riders in the circus world of that day, Orrin Hollis and his wife, who did bareback riding stunts.

It is related of one of the old-time circuses, owned by a man named Dan Rice, and a real old timer of a 'wagon' show, that, the bridge being out of repair, it forded the river to play in Riverside Park, the elephants wading over in true story-book style.

Then there was John McMahon's circus, playing on the market square with Miss McMahon handling Rameses, an elephant with umbrella ears who was reputed to be over four hundred years old. This circus came this way about 35 years ago.

Penny-in-the-slot machines had once a dramatic appearance in the city, when two or three local enthusiasts got together and placed a number of them in the store now occupied by L. Green, clothiers, at 432 George street. That was about thirty years ago.

The first week's business was so successful that it took the proprietors many long hours to count the resultant pennies. Whether the labour was too arduous or whether the public, after peering into the machines, grew tired of the novelty, is not known, but the business gradually languished and fell into that "innocuous desuetude" which the late Grover Cleveland was so fond of talking about.

Very few people, possibly, are aware of the fact that one of the stellar lights of the comedy screen, in the person of the late Larry Semon, was born in Peterborough, about forty-one years ago, when F. J. and J. J. Daly were proprietors of what was known as the "Caissie House," now the Grand Central Apartments.

But, as his commentator remarked, "he went to Lindsay when he was about four days old," therefore Peterborough can claim nothing in regard to his education and the influence that environment may have had in making him one of the successful comedians of the moving picture realm.

Some of the older performers and singers of the city stretch back into the shades of half a century since. There was Nettie Martin, born in the city, who was a sister of Sidney Martin of Midland, and who married a Dutch comedian named Phil Peters, and played with him for years, quite successfully, in "Muggs Landing."

There was Mary McFarlane, as she was known on the stage, in private life Mrs. W. Bowman, mother of Billy Bowman, and a singer of great repute, both in Canada and the United States. She was on the boards for many years and achieved a large following with her splendid voice and her Scotch dialect songs.

Other singers who were well known to Peterborough audiences in the older days were Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Sproule, the late Henry Rush, and Thomas Rush, Tom Dunn, who was an exceptionally fine baritone, and had much success on the other side after leaving here, the late Alex Elliott, D. H. Moore, still a veteran and popular member of the choir of St. Paul's Presbyterian Cnurch, and Levina Hallihan, now Mrs. Heber Ward of New York City, also her teacher, Mrs. W. J. Morrow of New York City, who was formerly Miss Annie Delaney of Peterborough, and was a very fine singer in concert and operatic roles.

Miss Levina Hallihan, born in this city, possessed a very beautiful bird-like soprano voice, of high range and much sweetness and power. When R. J. Devey entered a dramatic contest sponsored by Earl Grey, then Governor-General of Canada, and an enthusiastic patron of music, the Earl heard Miss Hallihan sing in Toronto, in the title role of "The Geisha", which was the play chosen by Mr. Devy, conducting what was called the Peterborough Amateur Opera Company.

Later, Earl Grey paid a visit to Peterborough and Miss Hallihan sang again in "The Geisha" at the Grand Opera House. The royal coat of arms placed on one of the boxes form a souvenir of that visit, which was on April 23rd, 1910. The Governor-General was so pleased with the singer's voice that he started a fund to send her abroad, and popular subscription helped on the good work. Miss Hallihan went to England and studied there for several years. Later, on her return and visit to New York City, she met and married Dr. Ward.

Danny Simons, who has made such a success in roles of the "Bringing up Father" type, and has a large following both here and in the United States, is a native of Peterborough, and so is Oscar O'Shea, who made a splendid impression everywhere on his tour with "The Rosary", as the priest who has one of the principal roles. Mr. O'Shea has often played here, since then. The original play, with Mr. O'Shea as one of the drawing cards, was held over at the Grand Opera House in Toronto for three weeks, on one tour.

Mr. O'Shea had a peculiar experience at one time, when he battled with timber wolves in a small dressing-room of a theatre. He was playing in a vehicle called "Daniel Boone", in which timber wolves were used. They escaped from their cage and attacked one of the actresses in her dressing-room, and Mr. O'Shea, going to her rescue, was the hero of the piece in a dramatic bit of unrehearsed action.

The history of moving picture theatres in Peterborough is, compared to the story of other types of performances, a comparatively recent one. It is not a quarter of a century since the first cinema house was opened here, although it was a long time before that when the first animated picture was shown.

According to the memories of those who can recollect the beginnings of the moving picture industry in the city, the "Wonderland," a little animated picture theatre which was opened in the shop where Coleman Brothers now sell paints and varnishes, at 445 George street, was the first venture of the kind. This was opened up by a man named Scott, who is now in the moving picture business in New York City. It was afterwards conducted by Ernie Hannah, who is now in Montreal, demonstrating the "White" cars. Scott, in the meantime, removed to the shop at 432 George street, now occupied by L. Green, clothier.

In "The Wonderland," the showing of pictures alternated with local vaudeville stunts, in the line of singing, dancing and feats of skill.

Then there was the well-known "Crystal", a moving-picture show, opened up by Wesley Edwards, now of Toronto, and situated just about where the Government Liquor Dispensary is located. This place gave a large performance for a nickel, including comedies and feature pictures and the popular innovation at that time, which was to flash the words of a song on the screen, and, while the piano played the melody, the audience joined in singing. There were vocal solos from local people as further additions to the program.

Following in rapid succession, and situated in the same block as the Crystal and also across the street from it, where the Paris Cafe now does business, were the Red Mill, the Princess, the Tiz-It, and the Strand. Stanley Coons, a son-in-law of Wesley Edwards opened the Red Mill, and a Mrs. Jones, with her family came from Toronto and opened up the Princess, changing its name to the Tiz-It, after conducting a competition for a name for the place. The late Jack Clayton had a great deal to do with the old Red Mill and the Princess, and one of the Chinese residents of the city also had a hand in the game.

The Strand Theatre, also placed near the old Crystal, was conducted by Schneider Brothers for a short time before they moved to their present moving picture house, the Regent, on Hunter street, where the former "Times" had its offices. The Regent Theatre was opened on June 3, 1920, and is one of the two remaining picture houses of the city.

But in the meantime, the late Dr. F. L. Robinson had opened a very handsome place, the Empire Theatre, on Charlotte street, where McBride and Franks' store is now located. It was opened about 1909 and ran for five years.

Then there was the Royal Theatre, which still remains "dark" and unused, after its closing about four years ago. It was opened by M. Pappas, now of Toronto, in 1908, and had a very successful career at 5, 10 and 15 cent prices, with plenty of music furnished mainly by a mechancal piano. The Royal went in for pictures of a dramatic and popular type and the first serial picture shown in the city, with Kathlyn Williams starring in "The Adventures of Kathlyn", opening at the Empire Theatre, had its conclusion at the Royal.

The Royal Theatre burnt down in 1918, on January 7th, in a disastrous fire which did much damage to the remaining stores in the block just above it. This happened during the showing of a very much liked serial which had to do with the adventures of Stingaree, an expatriated Englishman who lived and throve as a road-agent in the Australian wilds. Thus the burning had a sorrowful effect on the eager fans who had been following up the adventures of the versatile Englishman. During the same year, the Royal reopened and ran continuously up to November 28th, 1925.

The Capital Theatre, Peterborough's premier moving picture house at present, and owned and managed by the Paramount Corporation, who also lease the Grand Opera House, was opened by John Green, district manager, on April 18th, 1918. It has a seating capacity of about 1100. The first feature was "Inside the Cup" and a gala event was made of the opening, with several musicians imported from Toronto to give solo numbers.

The first manager was Edward Abbey, and following him were Harold Hitchinson, John Kennedy, Bert Crowe, J. D. Fletcher, and the present manager, J. A. Stewart.

In 1897, the first animated pictures were shown in the city by John C. Green, with the original Pathe cinematograph. They were single reels and they pictured some of the scenic beauty between La Havre and Paris, also a troop of cavalrymen crossing the River Seine. They were presented in Bradburn's old Opera House in the market block.

What might be called a real 'scoop' in the world of moving pictures was the taking by the American, George Leighton, of views of Pope Leo 13th in the Vatican Gardens at Rome. They were the first and only pictures ever taken of a Pontiff of the Church in the Vatican Gardens, and they were presented in the old Opera House here, after a nine week's successful run in Massey Hall, Toronto. They were taken by the American Biograph and Mutoscope Company of New York City and their appearance here was accompanied by a lecture delivered by William Bowman, which was pronounced at the time as being eminently satisfactory and entertaining.

The pictures, which were in fifteen reels, concluded with the blessing by the Supreme Pontiff. Their production was said to have cost about $75,000.

Animated pictures were a portion, also, of the entertainment which the old Peterborough Street Railway Company used to offer their patrons, when, after a nickel ride on the cars, one might disembark at Jackson Park, and there, on a fine summer evening, sit on the grass and watch various reels unfold themselves on a large, white-covered board raised above the level of the ground, on stilts. There was usually a band somewhere about. The nickel covered a good deal in those days.

And then there was Walter L. Main's Circus, admission two bits, where another grass seat afforded accommodation for those who liked to sit and watch animated figures disport themselves on a rude screen. One of the first of these moving pictures at this circus was the story of a fast express which went on a runaway career. The heroine, in a desperate effort to flag the oncoming engine, rushing madly towards destruction, divested herself quickly of a red flannel petticoat and waved it as a danger signal.

In the early days of the 'movies' here, effects were extremely different. Those were the times of "close-ups", when the idea of extreme grief, as in the case of Theda Bara, one of the earliest favorites, was to place the lady's visage as near the watchers as possible, give it a very large appearance and send glycerine tears coursing madly down it. Nowadays, the glycerine has been discarded and the use of another means is sanctioned. An inhaler used for colds in inhaled briskly and the resulting vapor breathed gently into the face. This is said to induce the lacteal fluid to generate, while, in the case of young children, the little boy or girl is gently steamed as an introductory process and then when tears are desired, a repetition of the process is mentioned, which usually causes tears to flow at once. The treatment is said to have absolutely no ill effects.

However, be that as it may, in those times effects were certainly different. Watchers of "Broken Blossoms" will remember the thrilling and delightful agony of mind engendered by the sight of the pretty heroine, enclosed in her tight closet, and the manner in which her countenance projected itself again and again, with distorted features.

And in those days, too, Mary Pickford was a negligible quantity. The writer well remembers admiring her and Owen Moore, playing together in early pictures, when she was a bright girl with long braids. Her name was never flashed on the screen, but that of her sister Lottie was featured to quite an extent.

The Grand Opera House, Peterborough's present theatre for the presentation of performances on the legitimate stage, was built in 1905 by Rupert Bradburn, brother of W. H. H. Bradburn, M. P. P., and now a resident of Los Angeles. It was opened in December of the same year. A fixed assessment for ten years was placed on it, for the value of the land, $3,600. This was raised later to $20,000.

Two years later, in February of 1907, Mr. Bradburn removed to California, and sold the Opera House to Messrs. J. J. Turner and Sons. The late Mr. John Turner was actively associated with its management for many years, and took a great pride in the theatre and a great interest in the plays presented on its stage, the proscenium extension of which is said to be one of the largest in Canada, surpassing that of the Royal Alexandra in Toronto.

On January 2nd, 1913, the Opera House was bought from the Turner Brothers, at a price rumoured to be in the neighborhood of $50,000, by A. J. Small, the ill-fated magnate who acted as a somewhat despotic czar of theatrical affairs throughout Eastern Canada, and who sold his interests later to the Trans-Canada Theatres, at another rumoured price of about $107,000. Later, it came back into local hands and is now under lease to the Paramount Corporation of Toronto.

One of the Reuben Fox boys of Toronto opened the Opera House with "The Yankee Consul," on November 15th, 1905. It was supposed to have opened with Elsie Janies, in "The Little Duchess", but Miss Janis played in Lindsay instead, and an excursion was run to that town from Peterborough for the express purpose of seeing her performance. That was on October 16th, 1905.

The second show was a dramatization of Winston Churchill's popular novel, "The Crossing," and in Christmas week came "The Serio-Comic Governess," a musical comedy.

From the account compiled some months ago by a contemporary we are indebted for the list of plays which follow. He says:

"The theatre was dark until January 25th of 1906, when "His Highness the Bey" arrived with such song hits as "Sweethearts of Boyhood Days" and "In Kankakee", and then on February 8th came "Peggy from Paris." For weeks after many a parlor re-echoed the strains of "Lil, my Easter Lily" and "I'm the Only Star thatTwinkles on Broadway."

"Eva Fay, an alleged clairvoyant, was here on February 22nd, and lingered awhile with highly satisfactory receipts. Her audiences seem to have been persuaded that she possessed some mysterious power. Someone asked her about the future population of Peterbough, and she answered: "The number comes to me of 50,000 in 1915.!" (At that time, also, a very mysterious still unexplained murder occurred in Hamilton. Mrs. Fay was consulted by many local people anxious to solve the mystery and her directions with regard to digging up sidewalks, et cetera, must have caused a great deal of havoc in Hamilton if they were ever carried out there by friends of local enthusiasts).

"Charles Grapewin and Anna Chance in "It's up to You, John Henry", amiable, droll entertainers, in an andante comedy with a memorable song, "The Tale of the Stroll", played on February 27th and the next night the offering was "The Sign of the Cross."

"The Gingerbread Man" came to us for the first time on September 26th, 1906. Eddie Redway as John Dough, Homer Lind as Fudge, Ross Snow as the king of the fairies and Gertrude Zimmer as Maizie were ony a few of that splendid cast. The music was charming, embellishing a quaint, tenuous plot involving characters from nursery rhymes. There wasn't a dull, dud song in the whole score. They are still favorites in instrumental form. "John Dough", "The Land of Bon Bon," "The Evil Eye", "Old Rameses" and "Queen of my Dreams" are the musical background.

"The Gingerbread Man" returned in October of 1907 with only Ross Snow of the former principals.

October 2nd, 1906, saw the production of "Red Feather" a DeKoven comic opera with Cheridah Simpson as the star, and Guy Brothers returned once more on October 4th. In between, on September 28th was "The Smart Set", a negro show of musical type.

"The Second season opened on September 5th with "Dolly Varden." The bright gem of the company was Lilian Spencer as Dolly. On the 15th, there was the "Arrival of Kitty", with the song hit, "I Like Your Way". The Black Dike Band came on the 20th; "The Shadow Behind the Throne" on the 21st, and John Griffith in "Richard Third", on the 22nd.

Oscar Sigman and Ruth White played here on April 26th, 1906, in "The Tenderfoot" and Kolb and Dill, in "I. O. U.", playing here on March 13th, 1906, were literal side-splitters. They have since been in the movies for awhile, and now have their own show in a snug circuit up and down the Pacific Coast.

"On March 28th, the Lincoln J. Carter melodrama played here, "Her Only Sin". Youths who never saw a Carter show never saw a real thriller.

"Here was another fairly active fortnight of those first days. In December, 1907, there was "The Burgomaster" musical comedy by Pixley and Luders; every song a hit, the favorite being "I Love You, Dear", and "Only You". In the fortnight, there was "The Man on the Box", "A Dutchman's Honeymoon", "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," "The Fatal Flower" and "Hooligan in New York."

"Another tide of splendid attractions came in September of 1913, with May Robson on the 13th, Maude Adams on the 18th, Lawrence Brough in "The Lady of Ostend" on the 20th, Fiske O'Hara in "Old Dublin" on the 29th, and "The Rosary."

"On October 3rd came "The Pink Lady", and on the 4th, Henry Stanford and Elsa Ryan in "Peg O' My Heart." On October 11th, there was "Bunty Pulls the Strings", with the original "Bunty" in Dawsey MacNaughton. On the 20th came Cyril Maude in "The Second in Command" and on the 27th "The Quaker Girl," with Harry Short, Victor Morley and Dorenice McCabe.

"This calling back of the past is mainly to indicate the profusion and the variety of the former theatrical fare of a one-night stand city. And the memories of those days are crowded with such names and titles as "The Chocolate Soldier", "The Royal Chef", "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway", "Paid in Full", "The Lion and the Mouse", and especially "The White Sister", with Viola Allen in the title role. There was that uproarious farce, "Painting the Town", with Brainard and Halliday and "The Time, the Place and the Girl", which was the best of the Joseph Howard musical comedies seen here. Martin Harvey in "The Breed of the Treshams," Lou Dockstader and his minstrels and a host of other figures and faces flit dimly about in the shadowland of the wings."

And then there was Blanche Ring, and Margaret Anglin, in "Green Stockings", and Ethel Barrymore with her glorious voice and haughty dislike of an empty house which made her perspiring manager (on the occasion of one visit here during a hot June season) rush madly about "papering" the house so that the star would have no reason to refuse to go on with the production.

And "Every woman", that wonderplay of former years, and Stewart Whyte's fascinating pantomimes, one of them, "Little Red Riding Hood" having its premier performance in the city, unknown to the theatre-going public, after the producer had sat in the darkened auditorium through a painful afternoon, swearing at his unfortunate players, all of whom, with the exception of his wife, were forced to stand the inquisition in irritable silence. And "The Bird of Paradise" of glorious memory, and "Wildfire." Sir Harry Lauder's crooked coronach has tapped the stage and his favorite song, "The End of the Road" has echoed through the house on several occasions. Amelia Ilia Bingham came here in "The Climbers," and Robert Mantell in Shakesperian stuff, while the Ben Greet players, with their outdoor settings, once made a visit to the local house in Shakespearian repertoire.

"The Corsican Brothers" was another notable production of later years, and "White Cargo". The "Dumbells" have come again and again and Ruth St. Denis capered across the stage in her famous dances. The glorious voice of Edward Johnson had made the house ring with its resonance. Bertha Crawford, Canada's famous coloratura, has been here and Madam Nordica, the wonderful soprano.

One singer who gave a concert program in five languages was Madam Blanche Marchesi, daughter of the famous singing teacher of Paris. She was a very large woman and she had a small man as pianist, upon whom she turned the fire of her glance when she went off key.

Naming Of Streets Tells Much Of History

(By W. J. E.)

Peterborough's history might well be written about her streets—Who has voiced that thought has spoken a truth, the full scope whereof he may not have realized, for in the naming of her one hundred and fifty or more streets, avenues and, yes, even her alleys, (thank heaven they are few in number) kings, lords, governors and those of her native sons and daughters most prominent in the growth of her physical, literary, social and religious being, have been memorialized. Smile if you will at the thought that one of the George's of British royalty has been honored in the naming of her main thoroughfare while the Emperor Louis Napoleon III has been accorded nominal honor in the designation of a one-block, one-way by-way. Truly, the city's streets are an index to her past, —let us delve more fully into that history for the source of the christening.

Formerly known during the early years of the nineteenth century as Scott's Plains, Peterborough gained her present designation in 1827 through a merited compliment to the Hon. Peter Robinson to whose successful labors in promoting immigration, the country felt itself so deeply indebted. Associated with him in this work was Colonel Alex McDonnel, whose name is borne by a well known thoroughfare of today. But it was not until many years later that the number of streets was sufficiently large to warrant individual designation. When that stage was reached many were named for reasons quite obvious to present-day folk, as for example, Cedar, Crescent, Cambridge, Oxford, Centre, Concession, Elm, Cross, Division, Donegal, Homewood and Woodbine (both fancy), King, Lake, Lock, London, Moneghan Road, Prince, Princess, Park, (Jackson's Park), St. James, Rink, Smith, (next to the township) Victoria, (after Queen Victoria), Kirk, running by St. Andrew's Kirk, and Water. Interest is therefore centred more about those streets, the derivation of whose names may not be so apparent, and since those relating to her native past must be of greater historic import, we shall consider them first—let royalty and lords, for the time being, take second place.

A Great Organizer

As, truly, it has been said that Peterborough's streets are an index to her past, and pardoning the monotny of alphabetical placing—that indispensable requisite to all well-ordered indices—the student turns but a few figurative pages to find that Auburn came by that designation after the naming of the Hon. T. A. Stewart's "Auburn House", and almost, it would seem, in the same chapter, it is learned that Albertus street bears the name of the greatest organizers of all time, in the district. George Albertus Cox, born in Colborne in 1840, came to Peterborough eighteen years later as an agent for the Montreal Telegraph company; became agent for the Canada Life Assurance company in 1861 and gradually assumed responsibility for the entire district. Later, he was induced to take the Presidency of the Midland Railway, and from a state of financial embarrassment, brought it, within a few short years to a respectable standing as a profitable organization. His organizing genius was even later responsible for the establishment of the Central Canada Loan and Savings company, and with his removal to Toronto, Mr. Cox acquired large interests, became President of the Bank of Commerce and a member of the Canadian Senate. He passed away in that city on January 16, 1914.

For many years a member of the Board of Education, and an active business man and manufacturer after his arrival, Anson Sperry came to Peterborough from Schenectady, N. Y. at the age of nineteen years, to engage in cutting of shingles, and later in the milling business with Harry Denne. He was a prominent Liberal and highly respected for his integrity and uprightness of character. He died in 1899, but a Peterborough street still bears his Christian name.

Burnham Family Prominent

Through the history of the naming of the city's streets, there is no name more prominent than the name of Burnham, for eight thoroughfares no less, have commemorated individual members of that family. There is Burnham street for instance, so called in honor of the Rev. Mark Burnham, son of the Hon. Zaccheus Burnham of Cobourg. The Reverend gentleman was a graduate of Queen's College, Oxford, and after 23 years as rector of St. Thomas, was appointed rector of Peterborough St. John's. In 1858 he hesigned from immediate parochial duties and began self-inspired duties as a preacher in Otonabee and Warsaw which he continued to discharge until within a year of his death in May of 1877. He was for many years a member of the Old Grammar School Board and was known throughout the entire district as a wise counsellor and true friend. Mark Street also shares in preserving the memory of his name.

Charles Burnham's Christian name has been honorably affixed to a local street as has the Christian name of Frederick E. Burnham while George street, in East city commemorates the memory of Dr. George Burnham sr., brother of the Rev. Mark Burnham's father. Dr. Burnham came to Peterborough to practice his profession in 1835 and for many years was chairman of the Board of Education. He was a charter member of the Masonic lodge in Peterborough and took an active part in matters relating to temperance and education.

John Street looks to a son of the Rev. Mark Burnham, for its appellation, and again the street index brings the student in profitable contact with an early Peterborough man, whose prominence in political life was more than an established fact. John Burnham came to Peterborough with his father, entered municipal life as a member of the Ashburnham council and, becoming reeve in 1875, held that office until 1896. He was a warden of the county for three years and was elected to the Dominion house in 1878 and in 1882. John Burnham found time in his busy life to take an interest in the militia being a captain of the 57th battalion. A state of exhaustion brought on by long periods of insomnia hastened his end in 1897 and the entire community was bereaved at his passing. Maria street and Sophia street have been named after Maria Burnham, wife of James G. Rogers, and Sophia Burnham, respectively.

Of Local Interest

While perhaps there is not so great wealth of Peterborough history surrounding some of the others, there is local interest in the naming of Babb's lane, after John Babb; Bethune St. after James Grey Bethune, merchant; Barnardo, after Dr. Barnardo who founded the Barnardo Orphans Home; Boswell avenue after the Boswell estate; Inverlea, after the name of Judge Dennistoun's estate; Brown street after Colonel Brown, Waterloo veteran; Caddy, after E. C. Caddy, Civil Engineer; Carlisle after John Carlisle; Cameron, after A. J. Cameron P.L.S. Chambers after Thomas Chambers; Cricket place, because of its nearness to the old cricket grounds; College, next to the old Grammar school; Conger after William S. Conger, M.P., Dennistoun, after County Judge Robert Dennistoun; Erskine, after John Erskine, merchant; Fairbairn, after T. M. Fairbairn, Peterborough, M. P. P., Flemming Place, after Sir Sanford Fleming; Frank, after Frank Brown; Gilmour, after the Rev. John Gilmour; Gordon, after Gordon Smith; Haggart, after John Haggart, sr.; Hall, after John Hall, first collector of Inland Revenue in Peterborough; Hazlitt, after Thomas George Hazlitt, lumberman; Hart, after Mrs. Hart Stevens; Hartley, after John J. Hartley, town councillor; Harvey, after James Harvey; Hunter, after Peter Hunter; Jackson, after B. A. Jackson; Rogers, after James G. Rogers; Kent, after Thomas Kent; Knox — Mrs. Knox Munroe; Lafayette—where the owner, (Mr. Blackstock) lived in Indiana; Lee—Thomas Lee; Lynch—John Lynch; Manning—Mrs. A. E. Dixon (nee, Miss Manning); McGill—Charles McGill; McFarlane— Donald McFarlane, Margaret—Margaret Boswell; Munroe—John Munroe Carlisle; Pear—Pearl Boswell; Reid—Robert Reid; Rogers—R. Rogers, warden of the county; Robinson—Peter Robinson, after whom Peterborough was named; Rutherford—Arthur Rutherford, town councillor; Stewart—Hon. Thomas Alexander Stewart, M.L.C.; Sutherland — Daniel Sutherland; Townsend—being the first southern boundary of the town; Ware—Charles Ware; Wescott — Robert Wescott. There are other streets such as Dublin and Downie, whose names have been derived from Irish origin; Euclid, after the great founder of the science of Geometry; Lundy's Lane, commemorating the Battle of Lundy's Lane; and then, the student turns again to the history of those Peterborough men whose biographies are to be found in such mines of information as Frank H. Dobbin index History of Peterborough.

One of First Settlers

Benson avenue, encountered by the student in his street index history, harks back for its name to the earliest days of Peterborough when John R. Benson came from England and, in 1832, married a daughter of Moore Lee (who, with Mr. J. Hall, had bought from the Government, the dam and mill at that time recently erected). He opened a store on Water street, afterward engaged with Mr. Lee in Milling, and carried on what was for years known as Benson's Mill. Later on, he built a dam just above what is now Inverlea Park, and yet later, went west with one of the first volunteer expeditions and remained some years in Winnipeg. He returned to Peterborough where he died in 1875 at the age of 73 years.

A pioneer who, for fifty-four years watched the growth of Peterborough, and after whom another Peterborough street is named, Edmund Chamberlain came to Canada in 1810. A builder by trade, he took such contracts as provided for the building of the old Court House and jail, and the old stone building so long known as the Protestant Home. He afterward became Superintendent of the works at the locks, Peterborough, and slides at Ranney's Falls, on the Trent. He was one of the pioneers who sat around the first council board in Peterborough and was a member of the town trust.

Coming to Peterborough within a few years of Mr. Chamberlain's arrival, William Cluxton, whose good name also graces a local street, accepted a situation with Hall and Chambers, grocers and bakers and in 1835 entered the drygoods business of J. R. Benson, becoming manager of what was known as "The Yellow Store" on Aylmer street. His business career carried him to Port Hope as a manager of a store there, but later he returned to Peterborough and went into business for himself. He branched off into the produce trade, and became a buyer of grain to the extent of nearly a half million annually. For eight years succeeding 1852 he held the management of the Commercial Bank of Canada, as well as many positions of public trust, such as the presidency of the Midland Railway, the Marmora Mining company, the Little Lake cemetery company and the Peterborough Water Company. Mr. Cluxton was also a magistrate of many years standing; a captain in the militia and in 1872, was elected to the Dominion House. He died in 1901 at the age of 83 years and his funeral was one of the largest ever seen in older Peterborough.

The name of Samuel Dickson, lumberman who built the Dickson raceway or water power canal as it was known, is carried by another Peterborough thoroughfare. Mr. Dickson was a native of County Cavan, Ireland, who came out to Canada and settled in Peterborough in 1830. He was a member of the council for many years, and lost his life while fighting the flood waters that threatened to carry away his dam and mills in 1870.

Magistrate Remembered

Newspapers of but a few years ago often referred to Magistrate David W. Dumble, after whom a Peterborough street has also been named. Born in Ireland, he came to Peterborough and studied law in Cobourg and, after spending two years in the office of Chief Justice Harrison, of Toronto, was admitted to the bar in 1864. Later he came to Peterborough to practice law, and on the death of D. G. Hatton, Mr. Dumble became police magistrate. His keen interest in educational matters locally was responsible for much progress along such lines in the town of Peterborough.

Dunlop street has been named after Andrew Charles Dunlop who came to Canada in 1835 and took up land in the township of Otonabee. Two years later he joined the Peterborough volunteers and remained in that organization until it was disbanded. Mr. Dunlop was a Justice of the Peace for many years and in 1875 he retired from farming to move into the town.

Was In Rebellion

The name of Dr. John Gilchrist is one recalled by a local thoroughfare, and in that recolection, the student finds one of the most noted men of his time. Dr. Gilchrist practised medicine in Keene as early as 1825 and then removed to Peterborough where he worked until 1847, conducting a store and saw mill in addition to his medical duties. Dr. Gilchrist, having been an active spirit in the Mackenzie rebellion of 1827, was one of three men arrested on "suspicion of treasonable practices" and was afterward honorably discharged. He was the first treasurer of the Colborne District (1842-46) and was holder of the Government Land Agent's office for a number of years. In 1841 he became a member of the Upper Canada Assembly.

Hilliard street looks back to the time of George Hilliard, M.P. for its name. That gentlemian came to Peterborough from Dundas, Ontario, in 1827, engaged in the store business here and in Omemee, and later went into lumbering and flour milling. He was twice elected to the Dominion parliament, and was most prominent in church and municipal matters.

Maitland avenue has been named after Maitland Boswell.

Morrow street has been named after W. G. Morrow, a native of Peterborough and Vice-President and Managing Director of the Toronto Savings and Loan company. Mr. Morrow was also President of the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing company; a director of the Central Canada Loan and Savings company; the Imperial Life Assurance company; the Peterborough Curling club and a member of the city Council from 1907, to 1911, the last two years being mayor. He was also treasurer of the Board of Education from 1887 to 1910 and chairman of the Public Library Board during 1912 and 1913.

A. H. Peck, a member of the Ashburnham council at the time of union with the town of Peterborough, and interested in the brewing business, has also been remembered in the naming of the streets, as has Charles Perry, Mayor of the town in 1861-64, and a noted lumberman who began cultivation of the American lumber market, as owner of the Nassau Mills in 1858. He was also a member of Parliament, winning over his opponent by 17 votes in the first election after Confederation.

Walter Patterson, leather manufacturer, Commissioner of the Town Trust and prominent in local Masonic circles, has been remembered in the naming of Peterborough streets as has Captain Charles Rubidge, R. N., W. H. Scott M.P.P., Walter Sheridan, County clerk; Thomas Cahill, J. P. and town councillor; C. A. Weller, County judge, Warden John Walton and Town Councillor William Langford.

Royalty and Lords

Little can be said locally of the naming of such streets as have been honored with the names of royalty or men of national and international repute beyond the listing of those streets which include:

Aberdeen avenue—Earl of Aberdeen, Governor-General in 1891.

Bonnaccord—Motto of Earl of Aberdeen and named by the Rev. J. M. Roger.

Cemetery of the Stewarts

Remains Solitary Landmark

The little cemetery plot on the old Stewart farm at Auburn remains to this day a solitary landmark and memorial of that pioneer family whose baby girl was buried there in October, 1823.

A clump of poplars indicates it in the midst of the farm land that still rises gently and with the same graceful ascent from the river as it did 107 years ago. Over the crest and a short distance down the highway are the greens of the Golf Club. Down at the foot of the slope run the trains to and from Lakefield, and across the Otonabee and high up against the western skyline is the Queen Mary (isolation) hospital. Southward four hundred yards is the home of Miles Hamilton, on the site of the original "Auburn", the name Thomas Stewart and his wife Frances Brown Stewart gave to their log dwelling.

The remains of the several Stewarts who had been buried in the family grave-plot were removed to the Little Lake cemetery some time after it was opened to receive the dead of this community. And whether by design or oversight the empty burial place which was the destination of a sorrowing, little funeral more than a century ago, has survived the agriculture that has transformed the rough forest of the Stewart's first years into pleasing and productive farm lands.

A few weeks ago an Examiner reporter discovered the place on the property now occupied by A. Valos. The lilacs were in full bloom, fragrant attendants to the sentinel poplars; warblers were flitting about in the trees, calling to each other, and a Bobolink was gaily singing to his mate in a nearby meadow.

The old tomb has been empty these many years, and is now a tangle of trees and shrubs and long grass. A long fragment of a column of granite, remnant of a forgotten family monument, is all that suggest the original purpose of this sweet-scented bower. Neglect followed upon its disuse, but its trees have escaped the axe and its sod the plow. Even those who did not know its story a sentiment perhaps unconscious felt that it was nipeg Diocese on the west.

The first residence of the Bishop was with the priest, in the house before mentioned in this article, standing on the Cathedral lot and facing towards Hunter street.

On February 20th of 1883, a year after Bishop Jamot's arrival to take charge of the diocese, a committee of men met to arrange for an episcopal residence. Members were Messrs. Duffus, Pope, Dolan, Cahill, Sullivan, LaPlante and Halpin.

The Bishop's residence was then at the northwest corner of Brock and Downie streets, in the large white brick house now occupying that corner and later, it was transferred to the residence now used as the Bishop's house, formerly belonging to a Mr. Roper, while the present priests' house was taken in the residence formerly owned by Mr. Hall.

The first sexton of St. Peter's Church was Peter Simons, father of the late Peter Simons and of the late Mrs. Anna Dunn, who passed away some months ago at a ripe old age.

The two other Catholic churches in the city are of comparatively modern erection. The Sacred Heart Church was begun in 1907 and was opened in 1909, with Bishop O'Brien, then Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D. D., as its first pastor, to be succeeded late by the present pastor, the Rev. J. J. O'Brien.

The Church of The Immaculate Conception was opened on December 6th, 1914, with Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl, now of Lindsay, as its first pastor, and a successor in the present incumbent, the Rev. Dean O'Sullivan.

On July 23rd, 1899, the cornerstone of the original House of Providence was laid by the late Bishop O'Connor, and later, additions were made and the present building was completed in 1913.

St. Joseph's Hospital has its place in another article in this issue, as have also the Catholic schools.

St. Vincent's Orphanage was opened in November of 1909, and the Convent of Mount St. Joseph, the mother house of the St. Joseph nuns in this district, was opened on January 1st of 1895 by the late Bishop O'Connor. It was formerly known as "Englewood" and was the residence of the late Mr. Sherwood.

FIRST BISHOP

The Rt. Rev. Monsignor John Francis Jamot, D. D., first Bishop of Peterborough, was born on the 23rd of June, 1828, in the parish of Chatelard, a small village in the diocese of Limoges, France. His father was Gilbert Jamot, a retired gentleman, and his mother Jeane Cornabat, both of good family; the former purchased his estate and mansion near Chateard after the great revolution of 1793.

He began his studies for the church in the diocesan seminary, and on October 9th, 1853, was ordained a priest. For a year after his ordination he taught classics in the College d'Ajain, in the diocese of Limoges. He then spent a short time in Rome, after which he went to Ireland where he remained for seven months at All Hallows College, Dublin, for the purpose of becoming proficient in the English language, it being his intention to go to Canada as a missionary. He then came to Canada and arrived in Toronto, in which diocese he was to labour, on May 10th, 1855.

He was sent to Barrie where he was the first resident priest and where he remained for eight years and three months. In August, 1863, he was transferred to St. Michael's Cathedral, Toronto, and was made Vicar-General and Chancellor of the diocese. He most worthily performed the responsible and arduous duties of his office for a period of ten years and a half.

In the early part of 1874, he visited France, where, on the 24th of February, 1874, in the Basilica of Notre Dame du Sacre Coeur, at Issoudun, he was consecretared Bishop of Sarepta and Vicar-Apostolic of Northern Canada.

After a visit to Rome, Bishop Jamot returned to Canada where he took charge of his vast mission, his headquarters being sometimes at Sault Ste. Marie and sometimes at Bracebridge. He had the well-earned title of being one of the most zealous missionaries of the Church. His labours among the people of Northern Canada were a continuous record of zeal and ardour in his Master's cause, that recognized no obstacle between him and the advancement of the banner of the Cross; his impartial devotedness to the poor abandoned settlers on the shores of the northern lakes, and the history of the dangers, privations and sufferings to which he cheerfully exposed himself, in seeking the home of the wild Indian in order to bring the light of Faith to the pagan inmates, form an interesting tale. On the creation of the diocese of Peterborough in 1862, Bishop Jamot was appointed its first Bishop, and on September 21st of that year, arrived in his Episcopal See where he was received most enthusiastically.

SOGGARTH AROON

The Rev. Charles Mulvany, commenting in his History of Peterborough, publish in 1884, on the loyalty of the priest and peasant to each other, in the early days of the settlement here of the Irish immigrants, quotes a poem by John Banim. ("Soggarth" is the Irish word for "priest", and "aroon" means "dearest friend".)

"Who on our cabin floor,
Soggarth aroon!
Bless'd the bride, chaste though poor,
Soggarth aroon!
Who with his kind words' ring
Made our sad hearts to sing
At the poor christening,
Soggarth aroon!
"Loyal and brave to you,
Soggarth aroon!
I am no slave to you,
Soggarth aroon;
[illegible] fear to you,
[illegible]mar to you,
[illegible] to you!

ALL SAINTS

This important church like many of the churches of the town began with no heralding of trumpets, away back in 1882. It was inaugerated by a few Christian women and has rapidly grown into a large congregation which worshipped for many years in a commodious church on the corner of Rubidge and Sherbrooke streets. Then as the field broadened the church became too small and the large new church now at the service of the congregation was built.

Peterborough was growing rapidly, especially in the southern part, and in order to meet the needs of the Anglicans, a mission was started under the supervision of Mr. Belcher and a building was erected in which services were held. This is now the school house of All Saint's church. By means of generous contributions in work and money it was erected free of debt. Mr. Belcher continued the care of the mission and so successful was he that soon the small building was taxed to capacity.

However it was not until 1882 that a greater effort was made successfully by Mrs. Archer, Mrs. Quartermaine and Miss Lily Barlee.

These ladies acted as the Sunday School teachers with Mrs. Quatermaine as organist and W. F. Sherwood as the first superintendant of the Sunday School.

The first real meetings of the church were held in the old Mission school after which the South Ward Public school served as a meeting place. Later Miss Chamberlain gave the use of a small house at the corner of Dalhousie and Bethune streets, when it was decided to erect a small building in 1897 and then to erect the church which was to serve the congregation for many years. The church was 85 feet in length with a commodious meeting room and the basement served as the Sunday School room.

Additions were found necessary to accommodate the growing congregation and the building was enlarged, making room for a new organ which was installed with the further addition of a vestry.

On the occasion of the dedication service there was a large gathering of the local clergy including the Reverend V. Clementi who had been a long and faithful supporter of the church. The address of the day was made by His Lordship Bishop Sweetman, which proved to be very pleasing to the gathering. It took the form of an outline of the work done and an outine of the work ahead of the members of the church.

In 1900 a new pipe organ was installed which added much to the services, inspired the congregation, and helped to build up a very excellent choir. For many succeeding years the modest but comfortable building answered the needs of the parish but as early as 1908 a movement was started to provide a larger and more commodious church. Subscriptions were received to such an extent that it encouraged the church wardens to go ahead with the plans.

On July 13th in 1908 the corner stone was laid with Masonic observance by his honor Judge Hardy of Lindsay, past grand master for that town.

The occasion was one for a large attendance of the local and visiting clergy and the Masonic Order turned out in large numbers. The number present to witness this step forward in the history of the church is remembered as an outstanding function in the annals of the city.

A little over a year later the new church was opened for worship and the day was one of celebration for the congregation. His Lordship Bishop Sweeney of Toronto, officiated at the opening service assisted by Canon Davidson and the pastor the Reverend H. R. Trumpour.

The service drew together a very large congregation, which was gratified by the termination of a successful work. Mr. Trumpour served his congregation until 1913, when the leadership was taken over by the Reverend R. B. Grobb who was pastor of the church for twelve years when he was succeeded by the present rector the Reverend J. Douglas Paterson who has served faithfully since 1925.

ST. JOHN'S

The early history of St. John's Church in the district now known as Peterborough is filled with stories of romance and of the hardship of early pioneer settlers and to go into any great detail of the growth of the organization would involve a complete history of the city and its pioneers.

The spiritual wants of the settlers from almost the city's earliest date were supplied by the Reverend Samuel Armor who was born in Londonderry, Ireland, and was a graduate as Master of Arts from Glasgow University. While studying in Scotland it is thought that he met Margaret Douglas who was to become his wife and help-mate in future years.

In the year 1820 he decided to go to Canada and sailed on the same ship that carried his father and Sir John A. MacDonald to the new world. On his arrival at his destination, York, he discovered that there were no churches of his denomination and so on the advice of Dr. Strachan he took orders in the Church of England, being ordained on September 3, 1826 by the Right Reverend Charles James Stuart, Lord Bishop of Quebec in the parish church at York. In 1826 the Reverend Mr. Armor came to Peterborough where shortly after his arrival he became the first head master of the local Government school. The building where he taught in Peterborough was a plain log structure situated at the corner of McDonnel and College streets and served a double purpose of a school and church. The ground on which it stood is now part of the playground of the Central School.

Mr. Armour after some years of devoted service was appointed rector of St. John's Church in Cavan, and was succeeded by the Rev. R. H. D'Olier as Rector of Peterborough. Mr. D'Olier was a member of an aristocratic Huguenot family whose ancestors had fled from France on the promulgation of the edict of Nantes 17[illegible] after which they had settled in Ireland. After graduating and taking the Holy Orders he married Charlotte, daughter of George Lennon, of Drumraney house, County Westmean and acted for some years as Vicar of Ballymore. Failing health made it imperative that he have a change and go to Canada.

Settling first in Kingston and becoming rector of St. Georges Cathedral there he found that the air was not suitable for his health, and the hope that the dryer climate of Peterborough would prove more beneficial gave him the rectorship of St. John's Church. Here he labored for some three or four years, but finding that his physical condition did not improve he returned to Dublin where he died in 1839.

During Mr. D'Olier's stay in Peterborough great progress was made in the plans for the erection of a church. These plans had been adopted two years before his arrival in the village, as tenders calling for the construction of the edifice had appeared in the year 1831 in the columns of the Cobourg Star.

The contract was in due course awarded to Joseph Scobell, a very capable builder, for the sum of 1300 pounds, but alterations and extra work increased the cost to 1500 pounds and this with interest on the borrowed money brought the sum total to 2150 pounds.

The installation of a clock in the tower added considerably to its appearance. This was procured by private subscription for the sum of 100 pounds. It was made entirely of wood and was of fine craftsmanship, but its regulation caused so much trouble that it was discarded and now it rests in the Public Library under the care of the Peterborough Historical Society.

The first subscription list was dated November 23, 1833 and contains approximately one hundred names of subscribers, many of whose descendants still live in the city and county. The corner stone of the church was laid in the year 1835 and four years passed before the building was completed, on the site of the present church.

The land was granted to the church through the influence of the ablest men in the district, most of whom at that time were Anglicans. These grants took the form of certain deeds which were handed over to the trustees of St. John's church on November 5 1835. The lands so granted consisted of a block of farm lands lying in Smith Township in the vicinity of the present waterworks, also a tract of land where the Canadian Woollens factory is built and also an acre of land on the east side of McDonnel street running from McDonnel to Murray street.

After Mr. D'Olier's resignation of the charge a successor was appointed in the person of the Rev. C. T. Wade of whom little is actually recorded. The Reverend R. J. C. Taylor was the next rector who was a resident of the town for some years prior to his appointment. He was known to his parishioners as Parson Taylor, a name conferred upon him because of his genial personality. In 1850 he had the satisfaction of seeing Peterborough incorporated as a town, with T. Benson, a member of this church as its first mayor. Mr. Benson met a tragic death in the railroad disaster of Des Jardines canal in the year 1857.

The advent of the Reverend Mark Burnham approaches the memory of of those now living. Mr. Burnham, an Oxford Graduate and a native of Cobourg moved to Peterborough in 1852 to take charge of St. John's church. He never was actually inducted as rector but labored in the parish for three years, retiring voluntary to conduct missionary work in the settlements of Otonabee and Warsaw. During his rectorship another improvement was made to the church in the installation of a fine pipe organ.

On his resignation his place was filled by the Rev. J. W. R. Beck in 1856. Mr. Beck's pastorage was destined to be the longest in the history of the church. Under his guidance St. John's cast off the old time conservatism and introduced the form of service as it is carried on today. He was aslo responsible for the birth of St. Luke's church which came into being under his guidance.

The work by which Mr. Beck will be best remembered is the extinction of the old debt on the church, the erection of the Sunday School, and the complete renovation of the church building. A chancel was added and new seats were installed. In 1882 a new organ was installed, a weekly Eucharist was instituted, the choir was properly vested and the grounds were laid out in their present picturesque condition. Mr. Beck was ably assisted by A. Poussette and J. E. Belcher; the latter gave his services free as architect for the work on the improvements to the building. Mr. Beck's death took place in 1889.

The church was reopened for service on All Saint's day 1882. The Rev. J. C. Davidson, who was shortly afterwards joined by the Reverend C. B. Kendrick as assistant, took the place of Canon Beck. These new leaders were faced with a large debt on the church incurred during the recent improvements and only by hard and persistent work was this burden lightened.

In order to meet the need of the Anglicans of the city, now growing rapidly, a mission was started and a building was erected near the corner of Rubidge and Dalhousie streets and services were conducted by the Reverend W. C. Allen. However success was not apparent and the work was discontinued until the year 1882, when another attempt was made and the growth of All Saints' Church was the ultimate outcome of this attempt. Another offshoot from the parent church was in July 1912 when a parish was opened to cover the south part of the city. The first services were held in J. D. Manley's garden at the corner of Lock and Braidwood streets and services by the Bishop of Toronto on Sunday Morning November 3, 1912. This was St. Georges Parish.

In the year of 1913 a memorial prayer desk and choir stalls were presented to the church by the choir guild. The year 1914 saw the outbreak of the Great War and over 200 members of the congregation offered their services to the country. The Rev. J. C. Davidson went overseas as Chaplain of the 93rd battalion from Peterborough and saw a great deal of active service in the hospitals of France and England. All during the trying years of the war special prayers were offered in the church, and a special form of service for daily use in the homes was introduced.

In the year 1917 another step forward was made when a new and modern lighting system was installed. One of the greatest efforts ever launched in St. Johns was started in 1920 which resulted in the formation of an Anglican Forward Movement branch.

In this year Canon Davidson received the honor of being appointed Archdeacon of Peterborough. Other events that happened in this year were the erection of a memorial tablet to the soldiers who had fallen in the Great War and the consecration of the chancel. The latter was rendered possible owing to the extinction of the debt on the mortgage which had been contracted as far back as 1882. The year 1920 saw the close of the Archdeacon's duty in this city and he was duly honored on leaving by the mayor and city council.

During the greater part of Mr. Davidson's absence from the parish during the war the Reverend Canon Cornish, formerly of Yorkton, Sask., took over the duties.

While Archdeacon Davidson still held the titular office of rector he was succeeded by the Reverend Dr. Blagrave, formerly of St. Mark's Church in Toronto. Dr. Blagrave has been very active in matters relating to his own parish and diocese. He is a member of the executive of the diocese as well as of diocesan committees of the provincial synod of Ontario, a member of the general Board of Religious Education and member of the Corporation of Bishop Strachan school and of Trinity College Toronto. During his term of rectorship the church has taken many steps in the way of making it a better church.

One must not forget the chimes that are often enjoyed by people in the city. A tablet in the front porch reads: "The peoples chimes (13 bells) were generously placed in St. John's church marking the 75th anniversary of its opening by present and former citizens of Peterborough of all creeds. Dedicated June 22nd, 1911 (Coronation Day). The following names are enscribed on the tablet: W. G. Morrow, mayor; W. F. Johnson and A. H. Stratton wardens; A. Eliott and G. C. Wainwright, treasurers; F. R. Yokome, for the press, and J. C. Davidson, M. A., rector and chairman.

ST. ANDREWS

In the year 1833 John Roger, a pioneer clergyman of the Presbyterian denomination, sent out by the Church of Scotland as a missionary, settled in Peterborough and organized the first congregation, the original St. Andrew's Church.

On May 30, 1835 a grant was made to this church of lot F, fronting on Brock street. The first of these is the site of the present St. Andrew's, the original being erected in 1836.

The first church was of the plain stone type, but very substantial. This was to be known for fifty years as the church and did service as the place of worship with the Reverend John Roger as the minister.

The disruption of the Scottish Church took place in 1843 and the pastor with the majority of the congregation declared themselves in sympathy with the new or Free Church.

Notwithstanding this step the two factions continued to worship together and to use the church property as if no separation had taken place. However in 1857 the growth of the congregation along with a formal order from the Scottish Church compelled the members of the Free Church party to step out and eventually erected the church of St. Paul.

After this date there followed another vacancy of two years after which the Reverend D. J. Macdonnell was on November 20, 1866, ordained and became the minister in charge. His pastorate continued until the close of 1870 when he was called to Toronto. On leaving he was presented with a gold watch and chain and his wife with a sewing machine on behalf of the members of the congregation.

The Reverend K. McLennan now became pastor of St. Andrews and he remained with the church until the close of 1876. He was presented on December 8 of that year with a purse of gold to show the esteem in which the church members held him. During his regime the congregation by an unanimous vote went into the union of 1875 and thus separated from the old Scottish Kirk and became a member of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

On the 29th day of June 1877, the Reverend Alexander Dell was inducted as pastor, and carried on the work for some years, to be followed by the Reverend McWilliams, and then in succession by the Reverend J. S. Potter who remained with the congregation until 1910 when he accepted a call to a Montreal Church.

The Reverend James Rollins was inducted as pastor on December 20th 1910. Early at the outbreak of the Great War he found it his duty to serve overseas as Chaplain of the Canadian troops and during this service his place was filled by the Reverends T. H. Mitchell and W. L. Rowand.

On his return Mr. Rollins again resumed his duties of ministering to the members of the church and remained their leader until 1924 when the Reverend James Gordon took over the task. His ministry terminated in the fall of 1928 when he accepted a call out of the city and the present minister the Reverend C. V. McLean became pastor of the church.

For many years the congregation made use of the old stone church which was more unsighty than uncomfortable when in 1884 the decision was reached to build a new edifice. The plans were received on 1884 from the architects, Gordon and Holwell, of Toronto and were accepted.

In March of the following year the old church was given over to the contractors to be demolished and the building of the new one commenced. The laying of the corner stone took place on June 25, 1885 and the new church opened sometime in December.

In 1913 a new organ which was one of the marvels of the city at that time was built into the church. In 1917 the entire church was redecorated and in 1924 a new and modern Sunday school was built.

In June, 1925, St. Andrew's entered the United Church of Canada, receiving some of the congregation from other churches in the city that did not enter. So the history of 1857 seems to repeat itself.

ST. LUKE'S

The Parish of St. Luke's, Ashburnham, was formed chiefly through the exertions, and by the liberality of the late Rev. Mark Burnham, B.A., who not only gave the site for the church, but also aided in its erection, and for two years contributed generously to the clergyman's support. The present parish was set apart as a mission on July 1, 1876. The first service was held on July 9, 1876, the late Bishop of Toronto, Right Reverend Dr. Bethune, officiating in the morning, and the first incumbent, the late W. C. Bradshaw, preaching his first sermon in the evening. The only building then erected was a small school room.

The first vestry meeting was held on July 3, 1876 at which the following gentlemen were present: Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, Rev. Mark Burnham, Messrs H. T. Strickland, Jacob Friend, A. Ingram, Wm. Mills, J. Z. Rogers, G. C. Rogers and A. H. Peck. It was decided to name the church "St. Luke the Evangelist."

The first wardens elected were H. T. Strickland, People's Warden and John Burnham, Rector's Warden, the latter holding office for 21 consecutive years.

Very soon the little school house was found inadequate to the needs of the constantly increasing congregation, and at a congregational meeting held on Monday, September 4, 1876, it was unamiously decided to build a new church. A committee consisting of Rev. Burnham, H. T. Strickland, H. Curtis and J. Burnham was formed to look after the work.

The foundation stone was laid on Ascension Day, May 10, 1877, at a special service. The church was opened under auspicious circumstances on September 23, 1877 and subsequently concentrated in May 1878, all indebtedness having been removed. The first lay delegates to the Synod were Messers H. T. Strickland and John Burnham.

In 1880 a pipe organ was placed in the church, with W. J. Hallet as organist. In the same year steps were taken to raise funds for the building of a parsonage. The efforts were so successful that the first rector was able to occupy a handsome brick parsonage in 1881.

Through the liberality of the congregation aided by the generous anonymous donation of a member, an endowment was raised and the parish constituted a rectory, the first incumbent, the Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, being duly inducted as Rector by the Bishop of Toronto on 26th of October 1884.

In 1885, the old school room was torn down, it being found too small for the increasing number of Sunday School scholars. A very commodious and well designed structure was erected with modern ideas. The corner stone being laid by J. Burnham in 1885.

In 1886 a new chancel was built, and opened on December 12 by the Rev. Dean Allen, M. A., who was the special preacher for the day. Two years later the present organ was installed. In the same year Rev. Mr. Bradshaw was granted a leave of absence due to ill health, and Rev. G. Warren was appointed in his place. Mr. Bradshaw returned the next year but in the year following resigned and his place was filled by Rev. J. W. McCleary.

Mr. McCleary resigned due to uncertain health in 1892 and his place was filled by Rev. Herbert Symonds M. A. who preached his first sermon May 15, 1892, the vacancy in the meantime being filled by C. W. Hedley, B. A., then a student at Trinity College.

In April 1901, the Rector received an intimation from the Governing body of Trinity College School that he was chosen to become headmaster of that school, and he placed his resignation in the hands of the Church Wardens. Rev. R. A. Sims took charge of the church during August and September in 1901, and the Rev. E. A. Langfeldt accepted the appointment as Rector and entered on his duties on September 22, 1901.

Dr. Langfeldt's resignation took place at Easter 1911, and the Rev. F. J. Sawers was appointed in his place. He served the congregation for four years when he left to take charge of St. Peter's parish in Cobourg. The Reverend W. H. White then took charge of the Parish in February 1915.

After six years of service with St. Lukes Mr. White resigned in February 1921, as he received an important appointment in Toronto. The Reverend George J. Bousfield, the present Rector, succeeded him in April, 1921.

MARK STREET

The first regular preaching services of the Mark Street Church in Ashburnham were held in the town hall of that village by the Reverend J. W. Butcher, the minister of the Peterborough Circuit of the Bible Christian Association in the year 1871.

The congregation was organized by the Rev. G. H. Copeland who is still living in Toronto, who held the first service in the town hall on Sunday, January 21, 1872. Under his pastorate, ably assisted by William Wand, the congregation so prospered that the church from which it recently moved was built and dedicated on the first Sunday in September, 1872.

The Reverend Cephas Barker of Bowmanville preached in the morning and the Rev. Charles Fish of George Street Wesleyan Methodist in the evening.

In June 1873 the Rev. G. H. Copeland was succeeded by the Reverend William Quance and he in turn by the Rev. John Cannon; the Rev. Moses Motherall; The Rev. J. W. Blatchford, the Rev. Mr. Roberts, and the Rev. Mr. Jolliffe. During Mr. Jolliffe's ministry he was assisted by the Rev. T. Brown, now of Lindsay.

At the time of the different unions of the Methodist denominations in 1884, Mark Street Church became the head of a circuit and has since been served by the following ministers. The Reverends, Foster McAmmond, 1884-1886; J. C. Wilson, 1886-1889; A. C. Wilson, 1889-1891; Mr. Thom, 1891-1894; C. Beer, 1894,1897; J. E. Moore, 1897-1901; A. L. Thompson, 1901-1904; J. G. Lewis, 1904-1908; C. H. Coon, 1908-1911; C. E. Cragg, 1911-1914; Mr. Phillips, 1914-1915; R. A. Whattam, 1915-1919; G. Ross, 1919-1923; R. Bamforth, 1923-1925; R. T. Richards, 1925-1927; A. E. Thornley, 1927 to date.

Under the pastorate of the Reverend J. E. Moore, D. D., Mark Street Church enjoyed a marked season of prosperity. The church building was re-seated, the interior re-decorated, and a basement constructed for social and Sunday School purposes.

The lot upon which the present church was built was purchased during the pastorate of the Rev. C. E. Cragg. The Rev. R. T. Richards was the first minister of the church after the United Church of Canada came into being and was followed in July 1927 by the Rev. A. E. Thornley, M. A., under whose pastorate the new church was built.

The total cost of the new church building, including the land, is about $24,000. Cash has been raised to the amount of $22,700 and there are unpaid subscriptions amounting to about $12,000.

The work on the new church began in August 1928 and the building was opened on March 3, 1929. The general contract went to T. E. Ephgrave and sub contracts were let to Archibald and Richmond for heating and plumbing, the Miller Powell Company for electrical work and William Saxby for plastering.

The church proper has seating capacity for 450 persons, accommodated in a main auditorium and a spacious balcony. The exterior walls are of red brick with white stone trimming while the interior walls are of cream finish. The finish of the wood is of edge grain fir and medium oak, while natural finish maple flooring has been employed.

The ceiling is of heavy panelling and the chancel has been beautifully appointed in seats of quarter cut oak. Two large sets of doors on Hunter street and one on Mark street and another at the rear afford ample exit either in the case of an overly large congregation or in the case of emergency.

The Sunday School has been located in the basement and boasts of a main auditorium, a stage and class room that can be divided from the auditorium by heavy folding curtains. A white ivory finish adds to the brightness of the hall, while a ladies' parlor, a vestry and a large complete kitchen has been provided.

The Reverend Dr. J. W. Pedley, D. D., ex-president of the Toronto Conference was the special preacher of the day and he was assisted by the Rev. J. E. Moore, D. D. and the pastor the Rev. Mr. Thornley.

FREE METHODIST

The founders of the Free Methodist Church in Peterborough were eight in number who met together on January 28, 1906 in the mission rooms at 366 1-2 Water street. Their ideal then as it is today was not to become a large church but to form a congregation that would carry out the original doctrines of John Wesley. The first pastor was the Rev. H. B. Lock and the first District Elder was the Rev. R. Burnham.

Rev. Lock remained with the congregation until the fall of 1908 when he was succeeded by the Rev. Miss Lotta Babcock during whose time a great advance was made by this denomination. From 1906 until 1908 the congregation outgrew its birth place and the members of the church sought a site of land upon which to build a Free Methodist church in Peterborough, and the location at 294 Aylmer street was chosen.

A building fund was started by Miss Babcock and the church opened its doors for worship in the summer of 1911.

In the fall of 1911 the Reverend C. Cunningham followed Miss Babcock as pastor of the congregation and the succeeding ministers have been: Rev. E. Snyder, 1916-1918; Rev. B. E. Stevenson, 1918; Rev. A. Sims, 1919-1922; Rev. Bessie Reid who is now in China, 1922-1923; The Reverend F. A. Daw, 1923-1925.

From 1925 to the present day the Reverend Frank Loft has been the pastor of this congregation. On his coming to the congregation E. J. Lee was the Chief Elder while F. A. Daw now holds the position.

While not a large church the Free Methodist of Peterborough has en-

A PIONEER PETERBOROUGH INDUSTRY

WELCOMES THE VISITORS

Adam Hall, Limited, Was Founded by the Late Adam Hall in 1878, and for Half a Century Has Been One of Peterborough's Constant Manufactories

50 Years History in Brief

FROM a farm in Smith Township, Adam Hall came to the then quite small town of Peterboro, and, after gaining some experience in the hardware business, started in the same business for himself. Peterboro being the centre of a large lumbering district, was the natural source of supply for the lumber camps. From his constant dealings with the lumbermen, Mr. Hall discovered that the old style cast iron ranges and stoves were not suitable for camps that had to be on the move frequently, and he conceived the idea of a light, portable range, not easily broken in handling.

Developing this idea, the new firm turned out what is believed to have been the first iron and steel range made in Canada. The body was steel, and the top, fireboxes and doors were cast. From that time on for half a century has been a continuous evolution of improvement, until now the product of Adam Hall, Limited, is standard for use in lumber camps, pulpwood camps, railway construction camps, mining camps, power development camps, etc. They also produce for domestic use, their well-known Tropic Range, Tropic Circulating Open Fireplace Heaters, and Tropic Quebec Heaters.

Their trade extends from Vancouver to Newfoundland, and north to the Yukon and Alaska, while a nice export trade is being built up with the United States. The progress of this growth was gradual, and began in a small way while Mr. Hall conducted his hardware business. The ranges, due to their ease of handling and efficacy in use, soon became known, just as Mr. Hall himself was personally well-known to the lumbermen, and worked in co-operation with them, far and near. In 1910 the demand for the Adam Hall stoves and ranges had extended all over the great Canadian northland, and the hardware business was discontinued, Mr. Hall devoting his entire time to the production of his cooking and heating stoves and ranges.

In 1911 a limited company was formed, and the two sons were taken into the management of the enterprise, Mr. Hall remaining President of the company until his death.

To-day, the sons and grandsons are carrying on the historic business most successfully. W. T. Hall occupies the position of President, and A. L. F. Hall is Secretary-Treasurer. Mr. W. T. Hall's two sons are associated with him and his brother—Douglas M., as Superintendent of the plant, and Terrance A., as Accountant.

In 1914 the manufacture of domestic stoves was started, and the original of the present highly developed "Tropic" range was launched. Succeeding years brought many changes of style, pattern and design, each one bringing this popular range nearer to its present state of efficiency.

At the same time, important changes took place in the style of the camp ranges, the immense 16 to 20-hole ranges giving place to a sort of sectional idea, where two 6-hole ranges are linked together to form one of 12 holes. This does away with the enormous expanse of iron and steel when made all in one piece, and makes handling easier.

The firm has a strong connection and numerous lumber, mining, construction, pulpwood and other concerns are placing orders with the company to-day, who started two score and more years ago.

THE HISTORY OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS

the interest of the public life of the community from the time that it was known as Scott's Plains.

In 1825-26 during the Robinson Immigration a Dr. Reade, who was a surgeon in the Royal Navy, and who accompanied the immigrants to their destination, was the first doctor in Scott's Plains. He built a large log house from which he used to practice and on Sundays this same building was used as a church in which mass was celebrated by the Reverend Fr. Crowley. This was located on the site that is now occupied by the City Engineer's office. Among other houses erected on this section of the southeastern corner of Water and Simcoe streets were Peter Robinson's general office and storehouses for the food of the immigrants.

Mr. Reade stayed with the immigrants for about six years and administered to the sick of the colony.

Another interesting fact regarding this site in the eariy years before the present buildings were built, but while there were still log houses on this land, was the first public pound. Here all stray cattle, horses, oxen, sheep and dogs that were at large were rounded up and taken care of until the owners showed up and claimed the stray beasts. This is probably the ancestor of the dog pound that is now at the police station. The location of this place of round up was almost in back of the city clerk's office of today.

In the years 1863 and 1864, Daniel Hopkins erected the buildings that are now on the corner, down to the lane of Simcoe street. The corner section of these was occupied for a long time by the Bank of Toronto and a few years later, where the city treasury office is now, the Peterborough Fire Brigade, that was partly a paid and partly a volunteer organization, was housed. The rooms above were used as dormitories for the men.

Next door to the fire department was a store that was occupied by George A. Cox, who used the premises for an insurance and a telegraph office. This was the first telegraph office in the town and was a branch of the Great North Western system. Mr. Cox was also the first agent for the Canada Life Assurance Company here.

Some years after, the building that is now occupied by the Hydro was used by J. Flavell, today, Sir Joseph Flavell, as a flour and feed store. He later sold his business to C. W. Brown who carried on the business for a while, then moved to British Columbia.

The rooms above the Flavell feed store were tenanted by His Worship Mayor H. Smith who carried on his law practice there until he moved to Winnipeg.

In the mid-eighties, when James Stevenson was mayor of the town, the present buildings were acquired by him and sold to the city after which they were fitted up with the city offices and the council chamber. The present police office and city jail were built as an annex to the structure, and have been used in that capacity ever since. The weighing scales were later built at the rear of the buildings for the matter of convenience and to centralize the functions of the municipal matters.

In recent years minor changes have been made and the offices redecorated so that today they are quite modern. The offices now under the one roof are the City Treasurer's office, City Engineer's Office, City Tax Collector's Office, Utilities Commissioner's office, The Sanitary Inspectors Office, The City Assessor's Office, The Chief of Police's office, the City Police Station, the City Court Room and the City Council Chambers.

CUSTOMS HOUSE

In 1889 when James Stephenson was member of Dominion Parliament he first mooted a Custom house for Peterborough and the Honorable Mackenzie Bowell who was prime minister at that date visited the town of Peterborough to look over the site which was to be at the corner of George and Charlotte streets on the southeast corner.

The new custom house which was in the course of construction for some time, was completed by May 27th, 1892, when the builder, Thomas Rutherford, handed over the keys to the contractor J. E. Asquith of Ottawa who was in the town at the time and formally took over the building.

Such a building for government offices was badly needed in Peterborough and its completion marks another epoch in the growth of the community.

The Daily Review of that date states: "The custom house that has been reared is an ornament to the town of Peterborough, located on its principal street, and it will afford a splendid accommodation for the offices of the customs and inland officials. Its location could not be improved upon as it occupies a prominent corner, being within easy access of the business man of Peterborough. The bringing of the government officials under one roof was very desirable."

The building was designed by Thomas Fuller of Ottawa who was at that time the chief architect for the Dominion Government. The plans called for a three story building of red brick with a one storey annex on the east side. The building was to face on George street with a side entrance on Charlotte street.

When it was finished it had a very substantial appearance, the main building covering an area 49x34 while the annex covered a space of 31'x17'.

The building was entered through a vestibule into the first storey where was situated the appraiser's office, the collectors office and the customs officer's private office as well as the long room where the work of sorting and appraising took place. Situated on this floor were the two fire proof vaults.

The second storey was to hold the offices of the inland revenue while the third storey was to be the home of the caretaker. The floors were finished in hardwood and the wood trimming was finished in oil.

The building was ready for occupation in July when the officials moved in.

Those who were responsible for the building of this imposing structure as it was in that time were: Thomas Rutherford, the builder, J. E. Asquith the government contractor, J. E. Belcher, the resident contractor, William Langford, the clerk of works, stone work by John Hayes, brickwork Edward Webb, plastering by Thomas Sabine, plumbing by Adam Hall, paint by Sharpe and Smith, while Mr. Rutherford himself did the carpentry work.

The custom house still stands in its first location as a monument to those who erected it and to James Stephenson who first suggested the idea. Few changes have taken place in it since it was opened. The disappearance of the annex was perhaps the greatest change that the building has undergone and people of today will see on the corner of Charlotte and George streets a building that has watched Peterborough grow and has witnessed many a change in the community.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Not always was Peterborough blessed with a magnificent building known as the Peterborough Public Library, but like many other great things in this life it had its beginnings in a humble way. The first library was situated on Hunter street, then on Water street on the second floor of the building that is now the Goodwill apartments.

On Tuesday evening of June 5th, 1868, when a group of energetic citizens convened for the purpose of establishing a library this organization had its birth in Peterborough. The meeting was called in the town hall, in the council chamber, where R. Romain acted as chairman and D. W. Dumble the secretary.

The name chosen for this organization was the Peterborough Mechanic's Institute and the officers were appointed. William Helm was the first president, Robert Grant the first vice president, and R. Romain the first secretary. The first directors were: Messrs J. Carnegie, Wm. English, W. I. Kennedy, D. S. Eastwood, D. W. Dumble, R. Renfrew, James Whyle, Andrew Douglas, R. Rutherford, R. Romain, Peter Hamilton and Donald Frasher, R. Romain was then appointed treasurer and the motion carried to make the entrance fee for ordinary members $2.00.

The following declaration was drawn up and a copy registered in the Registrar's office and submitted to subscribers who wished to become members: "The undersigned mechanics and others residing in or near the town of Peterborough having subscribed in money over one hundred dollars hereby declare their intention to establish a Mechanics Institute at the said town of Peterborough under the provision of an act entitled an act respecting library associations and Mechanics Institutes'.

The corporate name of the said institute shall be the "Peterborough Mechanics' Institute," and is formed for the purpose of diffusing scientific and literary knowledge, by a library of reference and circulation, by the formation of a museum of specimens in zoology, geology, or other subjects of nature. Science or manufacture knowledge shall be spread by lectures, philosophical apparatus, conversations and by any other method the committee shall deem suitable.

The following shall be the first trustees for managing the said institute: John Carnegie, the younger, William English, William Kennedy, D. S. Eastwood, Robert Renfrew, James White, Andrew Douglas, Robinson Rutherford, Robert Romain, David W. Dumble, Peter Hamilton and Donald Frasher. A constitution was later drawn up to regulate the entry and conduct of members within the organization.

Some of the first magazines in the reading room, whose presence graced the tables on July 1st, 1868, were The All Year Around, Argosy, Art Journal, Bailey's Magazine of Sports, Boys of England Magazines, British Workman, London Society, and many others. Some of the first papers were: Globe, Leader, Montreal Gazette, Hamilton Spectator, New Yorker and others. The library was open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. except a few minutes during the delivery of the mails.

The first annual meeting of the Mechanic's Institute was held on Tuesday June 8th, 1869. At this meeting very successful progress was reported. The reading room was opened in July and was well supplied with periodicals and papers by the end of August. The number of volumes of books purchased at the outset was 126, and during the year 225 more volumes were added while the number of volumes loaned was 252.

Other work beside the lending of books was carried on. Night classes for those who were unable to attend school were carried on in arithmetic, writing and bookkeeping by Mr. McFaul, and a class in mechanical drawing was carried on by D. Frasher. Both classes were very successful and largely attended. During the year a very satisfactory exhibition was held. In all a most successful first year was enjoyed. At this meeting the new officers were elected.

The officers for the second year were: Wm. Helm, Wm. J. Mason, Alex Smith and Wm. Johnson while the directors were: Walter Beal, Wm. Hamilton, Fred Heubec, Robert Robertson, Wm. English, John Carnegie, Thomas Donnelly, George A. Cox, John Erskine, John Bertram, Amson Sperry. The same work was carried on for the second year and success was the outstanding factor of the second annual report submitted on Monday May 16th, 1870.

After the first annual meeting it was moved by W. Hamilton and seconded by W. Robertson that W. W. English be appointed librarian of the institution and to him came the honor of being the first librarian in Peterborough.

By grants from the government, by the town, by membership fees and by local contributions the library grew in public favor and went ahead by leaps and bounds. In 1875, seven years after the first reading room was opened the institution enjoyed a membership of 270, with 4323 books being taken out during the year. The total number of books in the library were 1610 representing a cost of $2,607.

After fifteen years of existence the institution had a member for every day in the year, 365, who took an active part in the affairs of the institution. The books numbered 6,550, which showed an outlay of $455.17 for an added 322 books over the previous year. The officers for the Mechanics Institute at this time were: President, A. P. Pousette. 1st vice-president, Rev. V. Clementi, 2nd vice, A. Macfarlane; sec.-treas, John Corkery; directors, Messrs. J. E. Belcher, John Clarke, E. Courtney, James English, Wm Gillespie, J. F. Jefferies, F. J. Lewis, G. Munro, Robert Robertson, G. M. Rogers, and R. J. Toker.

The classes for the year were more than ordinarily successful. The subjects treated were mathematics, drawing, English, grammar and composition, writing, bookkeeping, and commercial arithmetic, divided into four classes, all of which were sufficiently well attended to entitle the institute to receive the government grant. In fact the fees received from the pupils together with the grant more than covered the expense. The directors were really gratified with the interest that was taken in these classes.

The old Mechanics' Institute has passed into history now, but during its existence it filled a position that was one of real merit and need, and those who first took an interest in the public need and who established a school for those who were not able to attend the day school are to be highly complimented on their work.

Carnegie Grant Obtained

In the early part of this century public interest became acute and an Andrew Carnegie grant was applied for and finally received to the extent of $25,000, and in addition to this a grant of $11,000 was received from the estate of the late Charlotte Nicholls so the decision to build a handsome building was made. Mayor G. W. Morrow, who was also chairman, and Alderman B. Batten, Morgan and Graham composed the property committee. The cost of the new library exceeded $30,000 so the committee decided to ask Andrew Carnegie for an additional grant of $5,000, providing that the city agree to spend at least $3,000 a year in the upkeep of the organization.

A deputation, consisting of Mr. Morrow and E. H. D. Hall went to New York and interviewed Mr. Bertram who was Mr. Carnegie's secretary and was successful in obtaining the additional amount.

The first minutes recorded by the new library board are dated October 10th, 1910 when there were present: W. G. Morrow who was the mayor, H. R. H. Kenner, D. Spence and E. H. D. Hall who were appointed by the council, Duncan Walker, H. Ritchie and A. Mowatt who were appointed by the Board of Education, and J. Corkery and Dr. F. P. McNulty who represented the Separate School Board. Mr. Hall was the first chairman and George Peters was appointed librarian. Mr. Peters was the librarian of the Mechanics' Institute for many years and was a very efficient worker. The task of drawing up rules and by-laws for the new institution was given to Mr. Kenner and Dr. McNulty.

Soon F. M. Delafosse, who is the present librarian, was appointed to the duties of this office, with Miss Cahill as his first assistant. The library, after delays in the building plans, was opened on February 1st, 1911, for the general public.

By steady growth under the guiding and efficient hand of Mr. DelaFosse the library enjoyed a growth to such an extent as to warrant the separation of the children's library from that of the main reading room and the formation of a separate department took place on the 23rd of March in 1919 under the care of Miss E. Munro. This branch also was made possible in a large measure due to the support given by the ladies of the city who were heartily in favor of the project.

Mr. DelaFosse, in speaking to The Examiner, was very lavish in his praise of the founders of the Mechanic's Institute library in their selection of books which formed the nucleus of an excellent collection. Some of these are still in use. He also is hearty in his praise of the assistants who have worked with him in the new building and he has had very efficient and cordial co-workers.

Those who have been with him are: Miss Cahill, Miss Dorothy Aylmer, now Mrs. Eric McDougal, Miss E. Munro, Miss G. Hunt, now Mrs. R. Perry, and those now in charge of the library under his guidance and who cannot be too highly praised in their work are Miss Sullivan, Mrs. Strong, Miss M. Knapp and Miss I. Thomson. The last named has charge of the Children's department.

Today the circulation of the library is well over 100,000 and this is only one small item representing the success and popularity that the building has enjoyed under the care of Mr. DelaFosse whose conscientious efforts and careful thought and selection of books has made it today more popular than ever.

The Old Institute

J. R. Courtney who was secretary of the Mechanic's Institute for some years tells reminiscences which come to him of the first library in Peterborough. "The rooms used by the Mechanic's Institute were on the corner of Hunter and Chamber streets over Primeau's Barber shop, reached by a stairway off Hunter street. The quarters occupied a space about 30x 30 feet divided into two rooms. One was used as a reading room and was furnished with a long table and a few chairs. The other was used for the books. In 1869 the library was opened with 126 purchased volumes and with 225 volumes from the Union School library. One of the directors acted as librarian and books were issued two or three evenings each week.

"In 1880 a removal was made to the second floor of the building on Water street where the Goodwill apartments now are, and there it remained until its removal in 1911."

RELIGIOUS DENOMINATIONS

The history written by Dr. Poole, who, by the way, was one of the outstanding figures in the period of the town in which he lived, and who resided for many years at the house now known as Number 300 Simcoe street, gives an idea of the religious denominations of Peterborough in the year 1852 and also in the year 1861. The village of Ashburnham is separated in these figures.

In 1852, Peterborough had 540 adherents of the Church of England and in 1861, 757; in 1852, 565 Roman Catholics and in 1861, 1226; in 1852, 490 Wesleyan Methodists and in 1861, 830; in 1852, 4 Episcopal Methodists and in 1861, 14; in 1852, 22 Bible Christians, and in 1861, 95; in 1852, 414 Free Church and in 1861, 546; in 1852, 44 Church of Scotland and in 1861, 218; in 1852, 79 Baptists and in 1861, 117, while other Methodists totalled 12 in 1861 and other Churches were 33 in the first year and 26 in 1861.

The Village of Ashburnham had in 1861 Church of England adherents, 281; Roman Catholic, 323; Wesleyan Methodists, 113; Episcopal Methodists, 24; Bible Christians, 5; Free Church, 97; Church of Scotland, 132; Baptists, 1; Other Methodist, 16 and Other Churches, 1.

Music to the Fore in Peterborough's History

Music n Peterborough had its place in the very beginnings of the community, as is always the case where people from the Old Land congregate together. The Irish immigrants who came here in 1825 brought their fiddlers along with them and history records the part that music played in the program of the visit here of Sir Peregrine Maitland, in the early days of the young colony.

One of the first mentions of Bands in the history of the place is that of the Rifle Company's Band, which officiated at the funeral of Colonel Alexander McDonnell, assistant to Hon. Peter Robinson, whose death occurred in November, 1861.

In 1874, Finch W. Miller, who is one of the veteran citizens of Peterborough, was brought out from England by the officers of the 57th Regiment, to teach the band of the Regiment. Prior to that, the music for the Band had been in charge of a man named Rackett and at a later date, of a man named Marshall.

The 57th Band members were almost identical with Band of the Fire Brigade. The former band could play no political music and when occasion demanded it, the members simply exchanged uniforms for those of the Fire Brigade Band and played what they wished. The 57th had a snappy outfit with white tunics and blue trousers, with a red stripe and a red cap. The Fire Brigade band wore the Horse Artillery uniform, with gold braiding across the front of the blue coat.

Sometime in 1876, a competition among bands from Victoria, Durham, Northumberland and Peterborough, took place in the old drill-shed on Murray street. The Philharmonic Band, led by Professor Gillespie was beaten by the Fire Brigade band, led by Mr. Miller, and the first prize of $50 went to them.

In 1877, the Fire Brigade Band under Mr. Miller, gained second award in a Band competition held in Cobourg, and in Toronto, the following year, in competition with fourteen other bands from the province, they gained third place, with $120 and a diploma for the bandmaster.

Later on, Mr. Miller esigned from control of the Band and R. Gliddon of Toronto was appointed bandmaster. The first appearance of the 57th Band under Mr. Gliddon's leadership was made in the old Market Hall, on March 10th, 1899. A few years ago, Mr. Gliddon also resigned and Bandmaster W. H. Peryer was appointed.

Speaking of the bands of early days, the Rev. C. Mulvany, in his history of Peterborough says:

"The Band attached to the Peterborough Fire Brigade is considered one of the most efficient musical organizations in Canada, and much credit is due to the present bandmaster, F. W. Miller, for the care and skill he has exerted in bringing the band to its present high state of excellence. This band has a fame that is not merely local. They won first prize not only at the Peterborough Central Exhibition, but also when matched against no less than eighteen of the principal bands of the Province at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition they caried off the first prize, and thus became the Champion Amateur Band of the Dominion. The instruments number twenty-one.

"There is also the City Band, sixteen men under the leadership of A. Freeman."

The above bands flourished in the late seventies and early eighties of the past century and at that time, a little orchestra led by Finch Miller, with players in John Butcher and J. McIlmoyle, was also much in demand at social events. In 1887, Professor Doucette, who died later in Denver, Colorado, had a small orchestra and there was a Sons of England band in operation about the same time. Other names associated with the musical life of the city in its early years were those of Professor Seward, Professor Sloane and Professor Davies; a man named Edge Hartley, who ran a music store on Hunter street, a music teacher called Alfred Hoover and a David Galletley, a Scotchman who was the first leader of St. Andrew's Church choir, at the time when there was no organ in the church and a tuning fork was used to get the pitch. Professor Galletley died in Banff, Alberta.

In the late nineties, with Captain R. Gliddon in charge, the Regimental Band had the following members; Sgt. G. Grange, F. Miller, F. Staples, R. Irwin, S. Tivey, A. Seward, J. Legg, J. Halpenny, C. Wesley, A. Voss, W. Pollard, W. Staples, C. Westbrook, W. Hodson, P. Blade, F. Pollard, Gibson, G. Wesley, J. Gibson, R. Shelton, J. Harper, H. Carveth, J. Butcher, H. Edmison, E. Hodson, W. Bell, W. Westbrook, P. Bish, J. Irwin, W. Leach, E. Madill, J. Lillico, R. Longmuir, R. Heideman, H. Clark, W. Wesley, J. Crowe, R. Mein, J. Harper, G. Chambers and R. Beach.

On March 30th, 1880, a Benefit Entertainment held in the Orange Hall at the corner of Simcoe and George streets, had on its program the names of Messrs. Reynolds, F. Miller, Geen, Morris, Brown, Hill, Chowen, D. D., Galletley, J. Miller, Strain and the Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, also the Misses Hamilton, Grundy, Logan and McNeill. Tickets for this event cost 15 cents.

These old programs were kindly loaned by Finch Miller and William F. Green, the genial secretary of the Oddfellows' Temple here, both of whom took part in most of those old entertainments.

On June 17th, 1881, in Bradburn's Hall, the presentation of a "Sublime Musical Cantata" entitled "Belshazzar's Feast", was given as a "Farewell Mark of Respect and Affection to the Rev. Mr. Roberts". This symbolized in music the Fall of Babiyon, and the part of Belshazzar, the King, was taken by David H. Moore, who is still one of the senior members of the choir of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. The cast included: the Misses Eliza Johnston, Hattie Johnston, Heather, Louisa Wells, Stephens, Galletley, McNeil, E. Roberts, J. Roberts, E. Miller, Etta Montgomery, T. Elliott, also Messrs. D. D. Galletley, George Johnston, D. H. Moore, Richard J. Chowen, W. Hill, J. Miller, Stephens, J. Logan, Baguley, A. Stewart, J. Logan, McLean. The orchestra was composed of Messrs. John Butcher (violin), A. Freeman (cornet), J. P. Metheral (flute), James Miller, Senior, (violoncello), and J .H. Hallett (organist). Finch W. Miller conducted. The Rev. T. W. Blatchford acted as reader for the presentation. Miss Eliza Johnston was Queen Nitocris, David D. Gattetley was Daniel, Miss Louisa Wells was a Jewish Maiden, Richard J. Chowen was Hannaiah, Miss Hattie Johnston and George Johnston were a lady and lord of the Court, and William Hill was High Priest.

In 1885, a concert was given for the purpose, as the first page announced: "Of purchasing a new chest of wissels called an organ for the Methodist Meeting House, which is on George street." They were facetious people in those times, as the program inclines to such fictitious names as "Dame Perseverance", Father Helpall Miller" (Finch W. Miller), and such like, but memory of older residents served to bring back a few of the names of those in the cast, such as George Schneider, David W. Dumble Mrs. James Kendry, Mrs. Hudson, Mrs. Thomas Bradburn, Mr. Heathfield and Mrs. Harrison of Keene.

On Friday, December 9th, 1887, a "Conversazione" was held "In commemoration of the fifth anniversary of the resuscitation of Otonabee Lodge of Oddfellows, in their hall Cluxton-Cox block, corner George and Hunter streets."

This entertainment included such names as those of Dr. R. W. Bell, the F. B. B. Orchestra, Miss Louise Yokome, Thomas Dunn, Miss Aggie McDonald of Montreal, the Misses Vair and Cottingham, Mrs. J. H. Roper, Miss M. Beck, Miss F. Stevenson, the Peterborough Harmony Club and Mr. R. M. Roy, who gave a Mystery entertainment.

Poet Immortalized Excursion

In one of the opening years of the present century, the 57th Band took an excursion which was immortalized in poetry by one who called himself the "Times Musical Poet" and called his effort "The Olympic Excursion of the 57th Band." It went as follows:

"When the Olympic Club got started on its trip to Stoney Lake,
And everybody was happy and had all that they could take
Of fun and roaring frolic, of every modern brand
But best of all to hear was, the famous Gliddon's Band.

"We had "Down in Old Kentucky",—such tunes as make you sigh,
And gentle "Annie Laurie" and "Comin' Thru the Rye",
And "Cake Walk", "Midnight Alarm", a feller couldn't stand
And keep his feet from shufflin' that day, to Gliddon's Band.

"President Lech and Ab Stratton—they threw their coats aside;
Then Bob Fair, he shouted: "Here, make the circle wide!"
The president took the centre—the others gave command;
They danced the Georgia break-down that day to Gliddon's Band.

"Then in came Billy Bunton, as lively as could be;
He shouted to the doctor: "Make room, make room for me!"
Then Jimuel Lundy joined 'em—'twas fun on every hand,
To see those chaps advancing that day, to Gliddon's Band.

"They danced all 'round the circle—'twas glory in yer soul,
And "Keep the music going and let the music roll!
This ain't no time for sighin', in this delighted land.
"Hooray!" the people shouted, "Hooray for Gliddon's Band!"

"There never was such music, or such a merry day;
The young and old alike danced many hours away!
And when the trip was over, you heard on every hand:
"Three cheers for the Olympic and three for Gliddon's Band!"

GRANT OF $1,000 TO CRIMEAN WAR PATRIOTIC FUND ON JAN. 11, 1855

Peterborough County Never Wealthy, But Ever Staunchly Loyal.

THE FLOOD IN 1870.

Otonabee's Voice Elected Warden in 1872 When Council Deadlocked.

The war fund contributions made by Peterborough county council totalled $145.209, and although it was the largest patriotic gift the council has ever made it was not the first.

On January 11, 1855, the following resolution was adopted, indicating that the county fathers have always been leaders in quiet and effective loyalty:

"That this council cheerfully responds to the call made upon them for aid to the Patriotic Fund, and deeply sympathises with the widows and orphans of those brave men who have so nobly sacrificed their lives in their country's cause, and recommend that this council do grant £200 for that purpose."

Presumably this was a Crimean war fund for which the Council generously dipped into its scanty treasury. And its sentiment of loyalty has ever been deep and warm, if not marked by effervescent emotion.

The County's Flag Pole

For example on June 19, 1867, this resolution was adopted:

That, as the flag staff has not been erected in accordance with previous instructions, a committee be appointed to erect a suitable flag staff for this county in connection with the public buildings of this county,if for no other purpose than to show our nationality, especially when we take into consideration our present position commencing a new era in our governmental arrangements, the committee to be formed of the Warden (P. M. Grover, reeve of Asphodel), W. A. Scott, (Reeve of Harvey), A. C. Dunlop, (reeve of Ashburnham) and John Walton, (reeve of Smith).

Apparently Mr. Dunlop attended to the details of this commission, for he was singled out in October by a vote of thanks which also mentioned his "adornment of the court house grounds with trees."

Bought Dr. Poole's Book

At that same 1867 June session in the year of Confederation the Council decided to buy two hundred copies of Dr. Poole's book, entitled "A Sketch of the Early Settlement and Subsequent Progress of the Town and County."

The council expected that "the placing of this valuable work in the reading rooms, libraries and other public places in the province, and in the hands of government immigration agents for distribution to intelligent intending settlers would tend to benefit this portion of Canada by making known its prosperity, development and resources."

Otonabee's Prerogative

At the opening of the January session 1872 it became the duty of James Miller of Otonabee to elect the Warden. On the second ballot John Walton of Smith and S. S. Peck of Minden each received ten votes. The Statutes provide that in the event of such a tie the reeve of the township having the largest assessment shall give the casting vote. So Mr. Miller named Mr. Walton.

Five Bridges Carried Away

A flood in 1870 swept away five bridges in Otonabee over the Indian River. Reeve Miller and Thos. Blezard, deputy, asked the county for a grant of $800 to assist in rebuilding them, provided Otonabee gave an equivalent sum, but their appeal was turned down.

Appointed J. Coyle Brown

For years J. Coyle Brown, a devoted and sometimes it seemed a slightly faddist educationist, was public school inspector in the county. He was appointed by the Council 1871. The applicants for the newly created position were James Stratton, publisher of the Examiner, who had been for some time a superintendent of schools ,John H. McFaul, John Moore, Peter N. Davey and Mr. Brown.

The committee on appointments recommended Mr. McFaul. The Otonabee representatives favored Mr. Brown, and Burleigh and Smith reeves proposed Mr. Stratton.

To Publish Minutes

Times have changed vastly since the following resolution of May 4, 1852: Moved by D. Costello of Ennismore, seconded by Peter Pearce of Asphodel, etc., that the clerk be instructed to have the minutes of the Council published in the Peterborough Despatch, if the same be done without charge.

The next day the clerk was instructed to insure the Court House for £4,000.

The Best Known Initials in Peterborough

TO the thousands of people who now live or who once resided in Peterborough, what initials are better known than C.G.E.?

These initials identify the city's largest industry, one which had its humble beginning thirty-nine years ago. Its steady growth and expansion have always been a matter of civic pride.

As Canadian General Electric Company Limited has thrived during these years, so it has promoted the prosperity of Peterborough. It has provided training and opportunity for the youth of the city and given employment and livelihood to hundreds of families. Today its plant covers approximately 46 acres and in it are manufactured electrical products which are famous throughout the length and breadth of Canada.

From the Peterborough Works of Canadian General Electric come the generators, switchboards, motors and control which play an important part in electrifying the Dominion's industries. Here also are produced wire and cable, meters and porcelain devices.

Wherever the sons and daughters of Peterborough may go, North, East, South or West, they will always find "Home-Town" products with the familiar initials, C.G.E.

Large as are the Peterborough Works of C.G.E. they represent only one phase of the widespread ramifications of Canadian General Electric Co. Limited. Three other manufacturing plants of the Company are located in Toronto and a fourth in Montreal. In eighteen of the principal cities of Canada are sales offices and warehouses which expedite distribution of C.G.E. products. Truly this is a nation-wide organization of which all Canadians can well be proud.

C.G.E. products range from small motors which operate fans and vacuum cleaners to the heavy-duty apparatus utilized in power plants, paper mills, mines and various other important industries.

The Edison Mazda Lamp Works of C.G.E. at Toronto supply the majority of quality lamps used in Canada. The Ward Street Works of the same city produce lamp bases, wiring devices and the popular Hotpoint Electrical Appliances. As Canada continues to develop its potential waterpower resources and as Canadians become greater users of electricity, so the business of Canadian General Electric Co. Limited will continue to expand and provide new prosperity for its thousands of employees.

The Best Known Initials in Peterborough

TO the thousands of people who now live or who once resided in Peterborough, what initials are better known than C.G.E.?

These initials identify the city's largest industry, one which had its humble beginning thirty-nine years ago. Its steady growth and expansion have always been a matter of civic pride.

As Canadian General Electric Company Limited has thrived during these years, so it has promoted the prosperity of Peterborough. It has provided training and opportunity for the youth of the city and given employment and livelihood to hundreds of families. Today its plant covers approximately 46 acres and in it are manufactured electrical products which are famous throughout the length and breadth of Canada.

From the Peterborough Works of Canadian General Electric come the generators, switchboards, motors and control which play an important part in electrifying the Dominion's industries. Here also are produced wire and cable, meters and porcelain devices.

Wherever the sons and daughters of Peterborough may go, North, East, South or West, they will always find "Home-Town" products with the familiar initials, C.G.E.

Large as are the Peterborough Works of C.G.E. they represent only one phase of the widespread ramifications of Canadian General Electric Co. Limited. FROM PENNSYLVANIA

"I am looking forward to Old Home Week with much pleasure," says Mrs. A. J. Sherman, 167 W. Wyoming avenue, Germantown, Phila, Penna., who left Peterborough more than thirty years ago. Mr. Sherman is a master mechanic with the Midvale Steel Company. Mrs. Sherman was born in Warsaw and her maiden name was Emma Louise Garlick.

Look Forward To Visit

J. B. Robeson and his wife who was formerly Ella M. Garlick, are looking forward to Old Home Week. Here is what they say. "It is always with pleasant memories we think of the time we lived in the "Old Home Town" and are looking forward to this opportunity of renewing old acquaintances and re-union of members of family whom we have not seen for many years. It sure will be a 'grand and glorious feeling.'" Mr. and Mrs. Robeson resident at 892 Palmerston avenue, Toronto, leaving Peterborough in June, 1900.

Found Great Improvement

When Andrew Simpson, of Renaston, Sask. who left here in 1897, came back to visit Peterborough eight years ago, he found a great improvement in Peterborough. He says, "Peterborough is a fine city and it was good to see the improvement." Mr. Simpson resided at 504 College street and a mother and sister still reside at this address.

From Togo, Sask.

George B. Swain, of Togo, Saskatchewan, left Peterborough in 1905. His wife was Susan J. Cunningham and he is engaged in the hardware business. Mrs. Harry Manley, R. R. No. 9, is a sister of Mr. Swain.

Is Best Old Town

"The Old Home Town is the best old town after all" says Alfred Haggerman, 171 Trowbridge street, Buffalo, N. Y., who left Peterborough in 1920. Mr. Haggerman is a salesman and formerly resided at 161 Hunter street E. His mother and two brothers, Cecil and Stanley reside in this city.

Business Expansion

As the city has developed so has this staple old industry of making locks. The standard, old porcelain knobs are now triumphs of the craftsman's art in glass and brass.

Locks themselves are so greatly improved that they are practically impregnable. As quality improved, so has business grown and quarters have had to be enlarged several times, the most recent being the absorption of a large building alongside the original works.

This expansion will no doubt be pleasing to all former employees, and citizens who have during the years past made their home elsewhere.

We trust that your visit to Peterborough will be a most happy one, and bring back to you many pleasant recollections of years ago.

WHIPPINGS SEEM OUTSTANDING IN SCHOOL BOY'S LIFE OF 1858

F. H. Dobbin Tells About First School and Early Teachers.

"TYRANTS" RECALLED

F. H. Dobbin

It is hoped and expected that one of the most interesting features of the Old Home Week will be, for those who participate in it, the sessions of the really Old Boys and Girls who at times more or less remote, attended the local schools, and coming back will revisit the scenes of their early studies, meet those with whom they associated and recall the days of boyhood and girlhood. Early impressions are ever the most lasting. Indelibly stamped on the tablets of memory are the incidents of earliest years. Then the activities of early manhood and girlhood intervene, and the real work of life begins. But the slate is never entirely wiped clean. In later years we may recall, often vividly, the associations in which we shared with playmates and those of other families.

So let us dip into the galleries of memory and recall something of incident and routine when we attended school in the first school that the town possessed, the old Free Methodist Church, that stood at the corner of Hunter and Sheridan streets, overlooking the river.

The building was of the early rough-cast, lath and plaster construction, outside, with the old pioneer idea of frame building, each post and beam mortised and with tenons securely pinned. The trustees of the school interests built an additional floor, adding another storey to the building. The basement, or lower part, was given over to the boys, and in the upper rooms the girls were classed and classified.

Teachers were not required to produce certificates. Anyone who had the enterprise and something of practice could be employed. For the teacher had to be both mentally and physically equipped, especially the male teachers.

The school routine was such as to infallibly breed deep enmity between the teacher and the boy. The rule of the Irish hedge schoolmaster seemed to prevail, that pithly laid down the law that if the mind wouldn't mark, faith, he'd soonmark the back.

Writing of the scholar's experience during the years 1857 and 1860, is a disagreeable one. Flogging was the rule and not the exception. The first sympton of disobedience brought its painful reward. Today, if John comes home from school saying that he has been whipped or so punished, the parents at once think of the police court for the teacher. If the writer, who attended the school during the years so mentioned above, did not get at least two threshings during the day he thought he was being neglected, and if a day passed without such punishment that seemed to be neglect and indifference. All this positive cruelty bred a spirit of hostility between pupil and teacher.

Two of these tyrants, in particular may be told of. A red-headed Scotchman named Robert Fairbairn, came along and was engaged as teacher of the fourth form. He was red-headed and hot tempered. He introduced into corporal punishment a sort of Russian knout, many strips of leatner fastened to a wooden handle, which he wielded with the skill of an experienced flagellator. Calling a boy to the platform, he would seize the boy by the collar of his coat, and standing twelve inches over the boy, apply the knout with unnerring skill, across shoulders and legs, the writhing and screaming boy protesting. Little wonder that larger boys provoked to action, hurled slates and inkbottles at the tyrant, to be afterwards selected for punishment. The spirit of animosity grew in the scholars, and retaliation took the shape of filling the keyhole of the teacher's table with sand, spreading tacks on the seat of his chair, and other minor reprisals. The boy so treated found no compassion at home. Generally he was told that if he was whipped he must have deserved it.

Less than two months ago there passed away Hon. J. C. M. Patterson, the first Lieut-Governor of Manitoba. He was a teacher, and his regime followed that of Mr. Fairbairn. He taught the Fourth Form, which means that the 4th Book was the foundation of the series of lessons to be studied. He speedily earned the positive hatred of the class. If Scotch Bob was an adept at administering punishment, Mr. Patterson was an artist. He carried a rattan cane, pliable and flexible, pushed down the leg of his trousers, and pulled it forth like one drawing a sword or rapier. He proved to be a connoisseur as where to plant his swipes and blows.

In the main we learned something. We had to or be whipped. The Old Reader, printed in Edinburgh, was bound in a cover of cotton duck, almost untearable. (It would be an interesting event if some antique scholar, who had passed under the rod, could produce a copy on which to base an examination offered to the old-time schoars, when they attend Old Times School at the Murray street school building, opened in the year 1860. Its pages contained, among other matter, a history of the wanderings of the Israelites in the Arabian desert, after crossing the Red Sea. And worse than this, a long geneological account of the succession of the Judean Kings, with such whoppers of names as Sardanipulus, Cynadillan, and other equally difficult to remember. Other and more interesting matter intervened, here and there. But what could one look for, with a book written and printed in Scotland to be used to educate the children of pioneers in the backwoods of Canada.

Up in the third storey of the old school house some of what were called the higher branches were taught. The lower form boys never were allowed to intrude. They had some inkling that higher up, the dead languages were inculcated, and that was all. Then we acquired the service of a teacher named Mr. Loucks. He was an improvement, in the eyes of the boys, and he varied the methods of punishment by stretching a boy across his knee, and applying a strap where he judged it would do the most good. But in the main, and through it all, we acquired the rudiments of an education, such as the district afforded And what we had we held. On the opening of the new school, the building on Murray street, all this was changed. How it was brought about we never learned. Severe whippings were abolished, by some sort of magic.

In the days of which this is written there was almost nothing of organized sport for the boys. There were skating and "shinney", of course, but no baseball, hockey or other games existed. No school organizations were encouraged. Such, it was pointed out by older heads would detract from studies. But all hills were open for sleigh riding. Kite flying was a favorite pastime, if the boy could make his kite. If not he went without. Court House Hill, as it was named, was a favorite spot from which to fly kites, those birds of the air hovering across the river.

Court House Hill, at the time, was entirely destitute of buildings except that of St. John's Church. All about where the Quaker Oats buildings now stand was a grassy hillside, with the empty cellars of two old frame hotels at the edge of the river.

Peter Hamilton

Peter Hamilton was born here in 1841 and died October 4, 1912. He was probably the pioneer implement manufacturer in Ontario. He entered upon this business when he came of age, designing and constructing many agricultural implements, plows, scufflers, seeders, mowers and binders, just to mention some of the efficient machines which established the reputation of Mr. Hamilton in this province. And his factory grew and prospered.

Peter Hamilton was actively interested in public affairs. He was president of the West Peterborough Liberal Association, chairman of the Board of Education seven years and a member of the city council. Ald. Jas. Hamilton is a son.

Peterborough Churches

joyed a satisfactory growth. With only eight members on the role in 1906, the church has grown to have a congregation of approximately forty persons.

TRUTH MISSION

The Truth Mission was founded eight years ago by the Rev. Dr. Zimmerman of this city, with the object of conveying the truth of the Gospel to the people who did not attend any other church, and to bring the younger generation and the youth into the fold by teaching them the Bible.

The first meeting place was in the Sons of England hall where D. Zimmerman carried on his work of conversion for a year, when owing to ill health he was forced to resign.

Reverend David McKee of Toronto, a returned missionary from India, was called to the city to carry on the work of the mission. Four more years the meetings were held in the Sons of England hall when at the end of that time the congregation moved to Mr. McKee's private home, 280 1-2 Aylmer street. This move was caused when the hall was vacated by the Sons of England.

During the last three years the congregation has met for worship in these quarters for morning and evening service, with a Sunday School being held at 9:45 in the morning.

Hundreds of people have come and gone through the mission and hundreds have been converted by the work carried on by Mr. McKee and his wife at the services and on their visits to the sick.

GOSPEL HALL

In the year 1885, a little company of Christians, realizing the responsibility of those who would go in simple faith in the word of God, decided to band themselves together for this purpose.

The first meeting place of the organization to be known as the Gospel Hall was in a rented portion of the second floor in the building located at the corner of George and Brock streets. Here regular meetings were held and in time the following grew so large that a more spacious place was needed.

But it was not until last year that the congregation moved from its birth place to the more commodious Legion Hall, on Murray street where the work was carried on with renewed vigor.

The open air testimony has spread to Omemee, Millbrook; Norwood, Lakefield and Mount Pleasant, bringing joy and pleasure to many homes.

A new building site has been purchased, with the intention of erecting a splendid hall where all Christians will be welcomed and where the Gospel will be preached in all its simplicity.

E. A. Peck, M.P.

E. A. Peck, M. P., was born at Alfredson, Sussex, England, in 1858. His parents were Arthur H. Peck, who was born in England, and Mary Armour, of Little York, daughter of Rev. Samuel Armour, the first Church of England clergyman in Peterborough. After his marriage here, Arthur H. Peck settled on a farm near Peterborough, but in 1855 returned to England where his son Edward Armour Peck was born in 1858. They returned to Canada and settled in Ashburnham in 1869. Mr. Peck owned a brewery at the foot of Burnham Street. He was a member of the Ashburnham council for years up to the time of the union with Peterborough. He died in 1910.

Edward A. Peck was educated in Peterborough and graduated from Toronto University in 1876. In the same year he began the study of law in the office of Scott and Edwards, in Peterborough, where he remained until 1881, when he was admitted to the bar. In 1882 he formed a partnership with Henry H. Smith, son of the Hon. Sydney Smith of Cobourg.

Edward Armour Peck has been singulary honored by public confidence. As Reeve of Ashburnham he was a member of the County Council from 1898 to 1904, and Warden of the County in 1904. That was distinction enough, almost, for one man; but in 1911 he was elected to the Legislature, and is now in his second term as representative for West Peterborough in the House of Commons. He has been for years solicitor for the county, and has held many other positions of responsibility and trust the fulfillment of which has been the solid and increasingly substantial foundation of his enviable reputation in this city and county.

HOT DEBATES WERE HEARD IN OLD "LIT"

In Year 1867 Number of Scholars Organized Debating Society.

HELD IN GRAMMAR SCHOOL

E. H. D. Hall Was Secretary-Treasurer of the Organization.

The Old Home Week recalls to many of our people incident and story as connected with in the old home town so many years ago, and here is one, dating back sixty-two years, which is a span of life sufficient to tax even the most ancient memory. In the year 1867 a number of the scholars attending the Murray Street school formed a society for the purpose of engaging in debates on topics and subjects as from time to time suggested. All were pupils of the Grammar School, in so differing from those attending the common school. Where the rudiments of learning were instilled into the minds of those who had not reached the higher flights.

The Society had a considerable number in its membership, and the fee for membership was fixed at 25 cents, payable on acceptance of membership. The members met in the room of the Principal of the school, (Mr. Dixon), and Lieut.-Col. Haultain attended as Honorary President and judge of results in the debates, unless the decisions were otherwise arranged.

One of the first subjects to come under argument, was, "Resolved, that the works of Nature, excel in all respects those of Art", and in the end the Art section won, though the verdict caused some astonishment.

During December of 1867, feeling the need of funds, an entertainment was put on n Hill's Music Hall, (the upper flat of the then Town Hall and market building) and to the elation of the members, the proceeds amounted to $82.87 1-2, the admission being 25 cents. The proceeds were devoated to buying books and some furniture, and the balance saved. This with the fees made quite a surplus.

The Society carried on for two years and then subsided. But as testimony to the frugal handling of the finances, when it disbanded the exchequer was able to pay all members on the roll, and who had paid the yearly fee for 1869, a dividend of 95 cents, quite remarkable on an investment of fifty cents each.

So in order to set those of the older heads in the city to work the list of members is given below, and those who like can cipher out how many they remember. Only one, or at the most three members are living, one of whom is Mr. E. H. D. Hall, who was secretary-treasurer of the institution, and from whom these facts have been gathered. W. J. Nesbitt is living in Florida, U. S. A.

E. H. D. Hall, Herbet Burnham, And. Tully, ... Eebwixk, A. M. Dixon, Ivan O'Beirne, J. M. McIntyre, E. S. Cluxton, G. B. Sproule, James Roger, J. Burton, J. Vrown, M. Dixon, Alex. Sproule, Robert Roger, Geo. M. Croly, F. N. Kennin, A. D. Hardill, Frank Haultain, Peter W. King, ... Stothart, Fred Cluxton, Wm. Morgan, Chas. Hall, D. E. Stephenson, W. J. Nesbitt, John Clark, James Borrowman.

The small book, nicely written and legible gives the name of the society as the Peterborough Grammar School Literary Society, which is no doubt the correct title.

In addition to Mr. W. J. Nesbitt and Mr. E. H. D. Hall if any are now living the fact should be made known in order that they be invited to attend the meetings of Old School Boys and Girls during Old Home Week. Attention is directed to the sessions of old schoolmates, as such promise to be of surpassing interest to all who attend, whether they be old scholars or not. The program tells all about the gatherings.

John J. Hartley

John J. Hartley was born in Peterborough June 24, 1847. He was educated in the Grammar and Union Schools and took up the building trades. As a contractor he had the responsibility of constructing many outstanding buildings here, various additions to public schools, the Isolation Hospital, Bank of Commerce building, the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., the Cox block on Hunter Street, Peterborough Hardware block, the Crystal block on George street, and many others.

Mr. Hartley was a member of the town council from 1881 to 1891, and served on the Board of Education from 1892 to 1906. He was also chairman of the Board of Health for several years, director of the Y.M.C.A, and held various other positions of public trust.

Possibly "Johnny" Hartley's finest contribution to this community was as a Labor man. He earnestly believed in the dignity of honest, constructive toilers, and he believed that organized Labor, while looking after its own interests, should actively cooperate in the general affairs of the city. He gave the Trades and Labor Council prudent leadership, and when, during the war, his moderation did not meet with the approval and support of some mushroom and temporariy clamorous unions, he retired from the Trades Council and the Bricklayers Union withdrew as a body, a striking evidence of their confidence in Mr. Hartley's experience and fidelity to the interests of Labor. Events during the last ten or eleven years have vindicated the wisdom of his counsel as president of the Trades Council.

Worked For Nine-Hour Day

While he was a member of the town council he was instrumental in improving conditions for the corporation laborers, and at the same time was active in the representations that resulted in reducing the working day of the building trades from ten hours to nine, forty years ago. Today the Bricklayers' Union is as strong as ever because it has kept its agreements and has been moderate and fair in contacts with contractors and the general public. And for many years John J. Hartley was virtually the captain of that ship.

In a broader field he will be long remembered and honored as the late president of the West Peterborough Liberal Association, a position he held until only a year or two ago. None was more faithful to the Liberal party that J. J. Hartley. In the Union Government campaign of 1917 it seemed that all the prominent Liberals except the President and the candidate, Mr. R. R. Hall, had deserted Sir Wilfrid Laurier. These two never wavered, and there is no record nor hint that they ever regretted the course they deliberately followed in continuing their allegiance to their "Old Chief".

John J. Hartley has been a simple, kindly man, a good churchman and a good citizen.

The Mowry Family

Margaret Anne Briegel,

One of the prominent business men of Ashburnham in it days of municipal independence was Marcello Mowry, proprietor of a busy foundry on the bank of the river just north of Hunter street, and of course, on the Ashburnham side. Mr. Mowry specialized in the manufacture of agricultural implements.

The Mowry family are of English extraction, their ancestors having emigrated to Massachusetts Bay in the early days of the New England colony. At the time of the Revolutionary war, they espoused the cause of the King, and with many others were obliged to leave the land of their nativity.

Early in the nineteenth century the family found their way to Cobourg, then Amherst. The "town" was then at the present site of the Court House; the present locality of Cobourg being then a dismal swamp. A log tavern and some half dozen log cabins comprised the entire settlement at that time.

Mr. Mowry's father was an edge-tool maker. He built a shop, did not open it for work as intended, but established a business at Cobourg—very small at first—which grew and prospered with the growth of the settlement.

Farming Not His 'Forte'

After his father's death in 1832, Mr. Mowry moved to the township of Smith, and began farming, or rather, to clear a farm out of the forest on the shore of Mud Lake. He also built a shop at the place and worked at his trade there. It took him about two years to discover that farming was not his vocation. He then removed to Ashburnham and built a small shop close to the old iron bridge on Hunter Street. He enlarged and rebuilt the premises in 1843, and in them conducted a steadily increasing business until his death in 1875. It was carried on by his son John Heaton Mowry, who was born at Peterborough in 1833, and subsequently by another son Richard Mowry and a man named Forsythe.

Came to Peterborough In 1826

Marcello Mowry was born in Vermont, U. S. A., in 1800, came to Canada in 1816 and settled in Peterborough ten years later, in 1826. He is represented in Peterborough today by Marcello Mowry who recently retired from the C. G. E. company with which he was long engaged. And the fifth generation is represented by little Margaret Anne Briegel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter O. Briegel of Montreal. The present Marcello Mowry is a son of John Heaton Mowry, deceased, and Selena J. Martyn. There were five other children Mortimer B., John H., ipsa M., Martyn and Richard B.

The father-in-law of John Heaton Mowry was engaged in the milling business in Peterborough, and it may be of interest to recall that he shipped the first flour from this town.

History of Public Schools

The hardy settlers on the banks of the Otonabee, almost as soon as they had built their own rude shelter, began to work on building a school, that their children might be educated. The first school was built in the winter of 1826-7 and all the men in the settlement did labor on the building This first school was situated on the playground of what is now Central School, on Murray street.

It was necessarily of logs, a long, low, rambling structure into which the best handiwork of the carpenters of the settlement went. Although plain in every detail it was comfortable. There the children diligently learned their three R's; first under the mastership of Rev. Samuel Armour, the first Episcopalian minister in the hamlet.

In the one-roomed building all branches of learning were taught. A few years later as the accommodation became more taxed and the settlement became more prosperous an addition was added. Then the school blossomed forth as a Grammar school. One of the famous teachers at this period was Rev. Mr. Taylor and for many years the school was referred to as "Parson Taylor".

In 1853 owing to the state of crowded quarters and disrepair the grammar school joined with the common schools. The school was moved to the building of the British Methodist Church, at the corner of Hunter and Sheridan streets, and it occupied the upper floors after the necessary alterations were made. Progress continued and in 1857 the accommodation was again felt to be cramped, although the staff had grown to include a head master, two male and three lady teachers.

The new school was built on the corner of Murray and College streets, on what was then called the Court House Park. This corner has remained since that day a permanent school and many have had their early education there. The building was completed at a cost of $16,258, being 90 feet by 60 feet and it was opened in the fall of 1860.

From the earliest records some interesting facts have been gleaned pertaining to early education in Peterborough. In 1854, the number of pupils in the Grammar School was 87. No record is given of those attending the Common Schools previous to the several schools joining together. In 1856 the number of pupils attending the Common School is given as 498, 281 boys and 217 girls. In 1864 the number had increased to 1052, 551 boys and 459 girls. The course of study was varied, and considered ample, considering that the school life of the pupil did not last for many years.

The principals were hardy teachers and although their methods would be considered old-fashioned now they turned out many men who later made a real contribution to their country. Some of the principals before the union were: Rev. S. A. Armour, Rev. Moses Williamson, Rev. R. J. Taylor, B. W. O'Grady, and the principals up to 1860 were: John Gordon, S. Foster, Rev. J. J. McClure, J. M. Dunn. John Dunn was the principal in the early sixties and resigned the post in 1867 to take a position elsewhere. In 1865, D. W. Dumble, B. A., who was later to sit on the bench in police court, was appointed superintendent of schools in Peterborough.

Progress is noted in the fact that in 1865 the Board of Education arranged to have the school on Murray street heated by steam. This work was intrusted to the Wm. Hamilton Company and proved most satisfactory.

On Oct. 8, 1850 the first meeting of the Collegiate Institute Literary Society was held. The officers were; President, John Douglas; vice president, W. M. Wood; secretary, J. J. Wright.

Some consternation was felt in school circles in 1881 when Principal Jeffers, who justly managed the school for many years, resigned when the Board of Education felt itself unable to meet his demand for $1,200 as salary. Some idea of the quality of the teaching at the school can be gained by the following results as read in the principals report that year: "Three matriculated at Queen's, carrying off three of the most important scholarships; two have their first class provincial certificates; six have matriculated into the University of Toronto, winning 19 honors; twenty-six passed the Intermediate examination; one matriculated into Law; one matriculated at Victoria; and at the end of the year four matriculated at Queen's, again winning four scholarships." This when the principal was only getting $1,100 as salary.

John Dixon was the next principal in 1883, but in the following year there was a big shake up in the staff and Dr. Tassie of Galt was appointed to the principalship amid great excitement. In 1886 the salaries for the teachers were: Dr. Tassie, M. A., $1200; J. H. Long, M. A., $1000; B. Earle, $800 and Miss E. F. Hunt, $500.

The school continued to rate as one of the highest in the province for scholastic training and 1885 the returns show the following: "That among those who successfully passed examinations at Toronto University are: A. F. Chamberlain, honors in first year Arts; Arts second year; Miss C. Fair and G. H. Scott; third year, J. G. Gimour, J. D. Graham, J. A. Pife and M. Davidson; Law second year, E. A. Peck—all these received their taining at the Peterborough school."

J. H. Long succeeded Dr. Tassie as principal on his death, Mr. Long held the office until 1890 when Cortez Fessenden, M. A., who will be well remembered by many of his former pupils, was appointed to the principalship of the Collegiate.

Soon the urgent need for an addition to the Collegiate was again brought to the notice of the Board by the inspector and a special committee was appointed to look into the matter. In June, 1891, things had come to such a pass that the Board of Education and Town Council met in special session to discuss the situation. It was finally decided that relief could be had from the overcrowding by adding four rooms to the Central Public School.

Plans were made for the addition by Mr. Blackwell and tender was accepted to build the structure at a cost of $6,000 by H. Coweth. He withdrew his contract however and A. Rutherford was given it. The addition was completed and in the opening on December 4, it was hailed as "Practically a new school," and pronounced "One of the finest in the province."

In July 2, 1891 the Peterborough Cadet Corps was born. It was to have thorough drill and later to be equipped with uniforms. The boys used wooden guns to go through the drill.

Dr. Tilley resigned as school inspector and there was a stormy session of the Board over the appointment of the new inspector. J. W. Garvin, B. A., was appointed at the salary of $1200. In his first report he caused a sensation by saying "in the past aesthetic culture has been much neglected."

The Board required $19,500 to carry on the school expenses for the year 1892, and the members of the Council thought this rather steep but were obliged to pay it.

The Collegiate prospered under Principal Fessenden and in the first year of his office 75 per cent of the pupils were successful at examination. Hon. W. R. Ross, Minister of Education, attended the Collegiate exercises held in the Grand Opera House and he complimented the town on its splendid schools.

In 1894 Col. H. C. Rogers donated a silver trophy for yearly competition by the companies in the Cadet Corps. This cup was first won by No. 1 Company, Captain W. Cluxton, First Lieut., N. Bell, Second Lieut., Chas. Manson, Sergeants, C. Butcher, W. Garron and P. McInnes.

Vertical writing had been taught in the schools for some years and it was announced that the Peterborough schools now excelled in this form of writing. Samples were shown abroad and pronounced the best in Canada.

Alex Wherry, principal of Central School for four years was appointed inspector on the retirement of Mr. Garvin.

In 1895 the graduating classes of the Collegiate had a brilliant record, but nevertheless the Board criticised the school for taking too active a part in athletics. It was in that year that the P. C. I. had a hockey team which defeated all that it met, and the school also had splendid baseball and rugby teams.

Already signs were in evidence that the Collegiate building was not large enough and in 1896 the Board recommended to the Council that part of Central Park be set apart in which to erect a new Collegiate building.

In 1896 the overcrowding in the Public Schools was so great that the Board discussed the plan of leasing the old Menzies homestead on George street. The property was leased for ten years at an annual rental of $400. In the building there were four school rooms, in each room there being 40 pupils.

Alex Wherry, the school's inspector was drowned in Little Lake while canoeing in September, 1896. Duncan Walker, B. A., of Brockville was appointed to the office.

The Cadet Corps in the Public School had proved so successful that in 1899 a corps was formed in the Collegiate on the suggestion of W. H. Hill of the Board.

Plans for a new Collegiate were submitted by John Belcher, C. E. in 1899, the building to cost $38,000. These plans were approved by the Council and the Board of Education. The bylaw was put to the ratepayers to raise $50,000 for the new building and it was said that the Government would contribute an additional $10,000. The bylaw received the support of the ratepayers.

The old wooden gymnasium of the Collegiate went up in smoke in 1905.

On February 14, 1905 a deputation fifty strong waited on Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, at the Parliament buildings, to ask that one of the planned new Normal Schools be established at Peterborough. This deputation was formed of members of the Board of Education, Separate School Board, Board of Trade and the City Council.

Due to the effort of the deputation Peterborough was selected as a site for a Normal School and on April 16 the firm of Rutherford Bros. was given the tender to erect the building at a cost of $34,000. The Dixon Park property in the North Ward was selected as the site.

The crowding in the North Ward school continued and in 1907 to accommodate the pupils and to bring it up to the requirements of the Government as a Model School, in connection with the Normal School, additions were made to bring it to a ten-room school. In the same year the tender was let for the construction of the new Collegiate building at a cost of $51,318.

In inspecting the Cadet Corps of the Collegiate in 1908, Col. Hemming, the inspecting officer, said, "It is the largest and best cadet corps in the province." James Stevenson laid the corner stone for the new Collegiate.

A. Mowatt B. A., principal of the Brockville Collegiate, was appointed Public Schools inspector on September 6, 1907, to succeed Duncan Walker, who had been appointed principal of the new Normal School in London. In January 10, 1908, H. R. H. Kenner, was appointed principal of the Collegiate on the retirement of C. Fessenden.

Three new principals were appointed to the Public Schools in 1908. They were J. M. Roszel to the Park Street School, W. C. S. Richardson to the King Edward School and R. P. Downey to the Central School.

The staff of the Collegiate at this time consisted of; H. R. H. Kenner, B. A., principal and Latin teacher; C. Fessenden, M. A., Senior mathematician teacher; E. C. Scrigley, chartered accountant, commercial master; Miss A. Weir, French and German teacher; J. E. Hodgson, B. A., science master; R. N. Merrit, B. A., mathematics master. Miss B Bowes, B. A., art and physical culture; J. Stubbs, B. A., English master; W. Harvey, junior mathematics and English; L. J. Pettit, B. A., history and reading; J. A. Adams, junior English and gymnastics.

So the growth and development of the city's schools went on always reaching out for larger and bigger things and always striving to give the children the best education possible to fit them for the battle of life.

Today the city has six modern public schools, a most modernly equipped Collegiate Institute and Vocational School and a Normal School. The city is noted for its schools and the training given the children and many men have gone out from the city to gain the highest pinnacle of success, armed with the education that they gained in Peterborough's schools.

Thomas Kelly

Thomas Kelly was born on May 24, 1843, on what was called the "Thorn Hill" farm in Smith township. He died in Peterborough, March 17, 1906. His father, Patrick Kelly, was born in Cavan County, Ireland, about 1804 and came to Canada in 1831 with Captain Higginbottom and worked on his farm for some time. In 1837 he bought from a Captain Thompson 200 acres of land, being lot 16 in the 6th concession of Douro for which he paid £200, a sum he had saved by his industry and perseverance. He afterwards settled on Thorn Hill farm, lot 12, in the 1st concession of Smith, working it for Charles Summers. He and Richard Summers, son of Charles Summers, were the first to make a clearing on the farm owned by Captain Wallis, and called "Merino", Patrick Kelly worked for Captain Wallis for twenty years as manager of the farm. In 1858 Mr. Kelly moved to Peterborough where he died in May 1875.

The mother of Thomas Kelly was Margaret, daughter of Owen McDermott, of Monaghan, Ireland. She came to Canada in 1833 and died in December 1882.

In Drygoods Business

Thomas Kelly received a common school education in Peterborough and afterwards, in 1858, entered the store P. Ryan and served his apprenticeship in the drygoods business. He went to Kingston with W. Harty and Co., remained there ten years, and five years in Port Hope, and returned to Peterborough to work for Wm. Fairweather, and in 1882 went into business independently. He was elected to the town Council and for fifteen years represented the second ward. He retired from business in 1895 and was employed in in a clerical capacity on the Trent Canal.

William Hamilton

William Hamilton was a typical manufacturer of the old school which was differentiated from the modern corporation era by his direct contact with his employees. He was born at Swinton, Berwickshire. He came to Canada in 1844 and worked in Cobourg and Hamilton as a machinist. In 1848 he went to Buffalo, Cincinnatti, Madison, Indiana, working at his trade, and 1850 he went to Shelbyville, Ind., where he opened a foundry and machine shop. In 1856 he came to Peterborough and established the Wm. Hamilton Company, manufacturers of sawmill and general machinery, which has latterly expanded into pulpmill machinery, turbines and other allied products.

William Hamilton was highly esteemed by his employees, and his death and burial in 1902 elicited a memorable expression of their goodwill. The old shops on Reid Street had become almost a home for man of the workmen, and the kindly spirit of the founder of the business seems still to live on, although many years have rolled up since he passed out of it.

Adam Dawson

Adam Dawson was born at Rock Corry, Monaghan county, Ireland, in 1848. He came to Peterborough in 1866, took up the trade of bricklayer, and undertook much building work in Peterborough as a contractor. He was a member of the Ashburnham infantry for many years, a prominent Mason, and a sincere and sane advocate of the cause of Labor. He died in 1907 in his 59th year.

E. M. Elliott's Family

William Elliott, grandfather of Edward M. Elliott, county clerk and treasurer, arrived in this district about the year 1822, and was one of the first Inspectors of school teachers' certificates in the old Newcastle district. He resided in Smith township on lot 16 in the 4th concesson. His son George Elliott was born n 1826, and was twice married to Kate McNeillie and Mary Armstrong. He was a staunch and active Methodist in the middle decades of the last century, and for years was a local preacher. His sons were William, now in Oregon; George E., deceased, and Edward M., who still has a warm attachment for his native Smith township. Mr. Alex Elliott of Gordon and Elliott, barristers, and Mr. Charles Elliott, both of this city, are of the fourth generation.

JOE WRIGHT WINS PRELIMINARY HEAT

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF FOUNDING OF CONSERVATORY IS OCCASION FOR CELEBRATION

Several Hundred Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Gliddon Assemble in Hall.

DUNCAN WALKER PRESIDES

Friends and Well-Wishers Present Couple With Purse of Gold.

Surrounded by flowers and music and the sunshine of a perfect day, with the faces of scores of their friends, assembled to do them honor, smiling at them, Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Gliddon celebrated yesterday afternoon the twenty-fifth anniversary of the foundation in Peterborough of the Conservatory of Music. It was a notable and very happy occasion and the arrangements, in the hands of a capable and energetic committee of ladies who designed and executed the plans for the event, were splendid in every detail.

Several hundreds of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Gliddon, who have encouraged the advancement of music in the city during the past quarter of a century, assembled yesterday afternoon in the big hall to do them honor. Flowers and music struck the keynote of a very auspicious and pleasing affair. In the living rooms of the Conservatory proper were vases and bowls of glowing roses and and peonies and the little antechamber to the hall was pretty with its wicker furniture and a profusion of orange blossoms. In the hall, flowers were everywhere. The color note of the day was in silver, to mark the silver anniversary, and pink, a combination that was beautiful in the extreme.

Flowers in Abundance.

On every side of the big enclosure were flowers in abundance. They were in long wicker stands, in high wicker baskets in vases and in bowls The stage was bordered with boughs of spruce and cedar and ferns and palms, while bowls of peonies, in red, white and pink, of roses and Sweet William, phlox and larkspur, feathery white spirea and freesia and orange blossoms ,were placed around the stage and on the piano. In the window frames ,the same decorations were used, and around the hall on every side ,were the green of ferns and the gorgeous colors of summer flowers .

Mr .and Mrs. Gliddon, with the latter's sister, Mrs. A. H. Winger ,of Toronto, and Miss Mabel Clarry, president of the Women's Music Club received the guests. Mrs. Gliddon wore a gown of black and white, embroidered in an all-over patterns. Mrs. Winger was in printed chiffon and Miss Clarry in rose beige lace.

Duncan Walker, principal of the Normal School, acted as chairman.

DINNER SPEAKER.

JUDGE DANIEL O'CONNOR

An Honorary Vice-President of the Toronto Association of Peterborough Old Boys whose story of his Cape Town nativity and his interview with a Toronto police sergeant during his university days was one of the amusing recollections at the dinner on Tuesday given by the Toronto Association in the Collegiate Institute gymnasium.

Brief speeches of congratualtion which stressed the cultural and refining influence of an institution like the Conservatory of Music, and lauded in appreciative terms the service to the community rendered during the past quarter of a century by Mr and Mrs. Gliddon ,were given by His Worship Mayor Denne, His Honor Judge E. C. S. Huycke, the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., F. A. Peck M.P., Sir Joseph Flavelle of Toronto, president of the Toronto Conservatory of Music and Charles Peaker, Mus.Bac., F.R.C.O., of Toronto, formerly of Peterborough.

Rev D". Blagrave's Letter.

Judge Huycke read a letter which had been sent him by the Rev Dr Blagrave ,who was unable to be present. It summed up the sentiments of the previous speakers, and ran as follows:

"Dear Judge Huycke.—Will you be good enough to communicate to Mr. and Mrs. R. Gliddon, in my absence on Tuesday afternoon, my warm felicitations on the completion of twenty-five years of beneficent service in this city. I also wish to congratulate them on the good will and appreciation of many friends and

CANADIAN BOYS ARE SUCCESSFUL IN HENLEY RACES

Joe Wright, Jr., and Jack Guest Win the Preliminary Heats in the Opening of the Diamond Sculls Competition.

TORONTO YOUTHS SCHEDULED TO CLASH IN NEXT ROUND OF FAMOUS RACE

Wright Wins By Six Lengths Over E. T. Purslow, While Guest Finishes Half Length in Front of Hewens in Fast Time.

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England, July 3. (C.P.)—Both Joe Wright, Jr., holder of the Diamond Sculls, and Jack Guest, from the Argonaut Club of Toronto, came successfully through their preliminary heats in the opening of the Diamond Sculls competition of 1929, in the Royal Henley Regatta to-day. But the two candidates will clash in the next round.

Wright easily defeated E. T. Purslow of the Pengern Club, winning by six lengths, and slowing up. His time was nine minutes, 11 seconds.

Guest faced to finish, half a length in front of J. Hewens of Maidenhead, in eight minutes, 50 seconds.

Besides Wright and Guest, preliminary heat winners to-day were L. Gunther of Holland, R. T. Lee, of Oxford, T. D. Collett of the Leander Club and Viscount Tiverton, Eton Vikings.

The fastest time in any of the six heats was that of Jack Guest, 8.50. The times could not be taken as any criterion, however, for most of the victories were comparatively easily earned. Lee, who won the sculls in 1927, and was defeated last year by Wright, was extended to finish in 8.53 when he defeated D. Guye of the London Rowing Club.

Wright Favored Winner.

Joe Wright, who is favored to retain the honors he won last year, had a very easy time defeating Purslow, practically an unknown Shrewsbury sculler. Wright left him at the post, and after half a minute had the race well in hand. He broke away with 11 1-2 strokes in the first quarter minute, 20 in the half minute and 36 in the first full minute. Purslow as far as stroking went was as fast but he had no power against the Canadian's sweeping getaway, though the Shrewsbury man stroked 11, 20 and 36, in the first quarter, half and full minute.

At the first signal Wright led by three lengths and Purslow stopped to pull up his socks—not figuratively, but actually, stopped. The race then became a procession, Wright reaching Fawley in four minutes, 21 seconds, 6 lengths in front.

Paddling a very slow stroke for the last half, Wright won, easing up. Purslow finished 43 seconds later.

Guest faced a much more formidable opponent and showed excellent judgment all the way. He established a lead of a length within the first 300 yards and maintained this despite repeated bursts of speed by Hewens. Three hundred yards from the finish the Englishman managed to cut down Guest's lead to half a length, but the Canadan maintained this margin to the finish.

H. Edwards, an ex-Oxford Blue, advanced to the next round of the Diamond Sculls by defeating Jones, of Lincoln College, Oxford, without any difficulty. His time was 9 minutes, 19 seconds.

Sculled 35 Per Minute.

In defeating Hewens, Guest sculled 35 to his opponent's 33 for the first minutes. It was a great race up to the island. Then the Canadian drew ahead, and led by a quarter of a length at the first signal. The scullers had to battle hard against a strong head wind. At the half mile post, Guest led by a bare length, and at Fawley, which was reached in 4 minutes, 13 seconds, the Toronto sculler still was a length ahead. Both men were sculling 35 to the minute, but Hewens spurted above Fawley. However, Guest maintained his lead and was still a length in front at the mile post. Hewens put up another spurt along the enclosure, but Guest was equal to the threat and was able to win a good race. His time was considered excellent in view of the strong wind.

ENGLISH BOY IS DROWNED

BODY IS RECOVERED.

The Otonabee River claimed another victim shortly after one o'clock this afternoon when Eric Kershaw, aged 19, an English boy ,was drowned just below the lower locks. He fell from a raft on which he was working along the side of the cement pier, and despite the quick efforts of the workmen and fishermen, who were on the spot, he was not taken from the water until ten or fifteen minutes later. Over an hour's work of resuscitation failed to bring any sign of life.

The drowned lad had but six weeks ago come out from England, and he was residing at 344 Aylmer Street. A little over a week ago he secured a job with James McGraw, overseer for the Trent Canal.

He was working with Albert Wolfe, 452 Donegal Street, boring holes in the side of the cement pier that borders the canal just below the locks. The two were standing on a raft, which was tied at the bow and stern to the pier, and they had just completed one hole and were in the act of releasing the raft to move it up to a new position when the fatality occurred.

Became Frightened.

Kershaw had untied the rope on the rear of the raft and the current swung it out from the wall. Becoming frightened, in spite of the reassuring words of his companion, Wolfe, the lad stepped or slipped from the raft into the water.

He was unable to swim and immediately began to flounder and yell. Wolfe, who is a rather old man, ran down and endeavored to loosen a punt that was tied twenty feet below the spot in order to go to his aid. The punt was locked and he could not free it.

John Allen, another workman on the pier just above, ran and got a rope, which he threw to the drowning boy. He yelled repeatedly, "Grab the rope;" But the boy appeared not to hear, although his arms were within inches of the rescue rope.

With one last heave he disappeared beneath the surface and did not reappear.

Secured Grappling Hooks

Richard Evans, of Hamilton, who is with the Harry Lotteridge Shows, was fishing from the locks. Attracted by the shouts he rushed to the scene.

He ran up near the lockmaster's cabin and got the grappling hooks and almost with the first throw brought up the body.

A call was put in to the fire brigade at 1.20 and they were on the spot a few minutes later. The pulmotor was immediately put into service and fifteen minutes later Dr. D. W. Clarke was in attendance.

Although the work of resuscitation was continued for more than an hour and Dr. Clarke injected a hypodermic, the slightest glimmer of life was never shewn.

Dr. Clarke explained that since the youth was submerged soon after dinner the food in the stomach had made it impossible to bring back life. He gave his opinion that Kershaw was dead when removed from the river.

The Weather

There was a decided crispness and coolness in the air this morning reminiscent of the fall season. At six o'clock the temperature was down to 44 degrees. The highest point reached yesterday was 76 degrees. Old-timers need not be told that we have on occasion weather that is much warmer, but that generally our summer weather is all that could be desired—cool nights for sound sleep, and clear, crisp and cloudless skies in the daytime. — W. PETERBORO BOYS OF TORONTO HOSTS AT SPLENDID LUNCHEON

Warm Tribute To H. R. H. Kenner An Interesting Episode.

TORONTO CATERER

Sir Joseph Flavelle Recalls Helpful Influences of Boyhood.

None of the events of Peterborough's Old Home week will evoke a deeper felicity than the mid-day banquet yesterday in the gymnasium of the Collegiate Institute of which the Old Boys in Toronto were the hosts.

It was one of the Toronto association's contributions to this week's festivities and to the spirit and desire of reunion and rekindling of friendships that have survived the years of separation; and it was a superlative success. A palpable sense of fellowship pervaded the assembly, and the memory and significance of it will remain a new and stronger bond between the men of Peterborough, those who have stayed on and those who now live in Toronto.

The addresses rose and fell with the emotions of reminiscence and expressions of goodwill and mutual esteem; and the affection of the Toronto men for their mother town was heavily balanced by Peterboro' pride in the achievements of so many former residents who have prospered in the metropolitan field of Ontario's capital city.

Those Peterborough men of yesterday with their fellows of to-day, united in their common home once more, included some from the highest plane of Canadian finance and business, men of the professions and others from auxiliary positions of responsibility. Sir Joseph Flavelle and E. R. Wood, men of outstanding accomplishment and power, were youths of Peterborough when the late Hon. George A. Cox caught a vision of the future of this country. They do not hide their affection for Peterborough. Orville Shortly and Frank O'Connor are of a younger generation, whose homes were here and whose sympathies often turn to their old town; Frank Matthews, A. E. Ames, Albert Matthems, Senator W. H. McGuire and so on. Most of them were present at the Toronto Day banquet, which was purveyed by Coles of Toranto, excellent in its service and refection.

The Hosts and Guests

At the head table were Mayor Denne, Sir Joseph Flavelle, Frank P. O'Connor, E. A. Peck, M.P., W. H. Bradburn, M.L.A., E. R. Wood, Senator W. H. McGuire, Judge Huycke, W. J. O'Brien, C. E. Sisson, W. S. Campbell, Wilfred Stratton, Dr. J. J. Craig, Rev. J. D. Paterson, Judge Huycke, Judge Daniel O'Connell, G. B. Van Blaricom, James Dutton, Rev. Paul Costello, W. R. Morris, John R. Corkery, A. J. Gough.

Other invited guests were: S. R. Armstrong, Gordon Campbell, J. J. Turner, Ensign Green, W. J. O'Connor, Mr. M. J. Moher, E. V. Morphet, E. G. Patterson, Fergus Sheehy, Rev. Austin O'Brien, Dean Packenham, H. R. H. Kenner, Dr. A. W. McPherson, Ald. Jas. Hamilton, Gordon S Matthews, Robert Veitch, Dr. W. T. Holloway, R. R. Hall, K.C., E. M. Elliott, Ald. M. Mystery Surrounds Breaking Of Window

Mystery surrounds the big break in the glass of one of the main show windows of the north Teco Store. The ragged rent in the large plate was first noticed by a policeman as he made his rounds last night. The theory is advanced that it must have been a stone or piece of wood that hit the glass being thrown by the wheels of a car.

The dangers to store windows has been appreciated by the Teco Stores, and all their glass is insured. Workmen are already on their way from Toronto to replace the one broken last night.

CHICAGO PLANE STARTS CRUISE

"Untin" Bowler Takes Off On Flight To Berlin, Germany.

STOPS PLANNED

CHICAGO, Ills., July 3.—(Canadian Press)—Thousands of persons crowded the lake shore this morning to see the start of the "Untin" Bowler's projected round trip flight to Berlin.

The giant amphibion owned by the Chicago Tribune was tuned up late last night and pronounced ready for the flight which the backers hope will blaze a new commercial trail across the top of the world.

Bob Gast, pilot, Parker D. Cramer, co- pilot and navigator, and Robert Wood, aviation editor of the Tribune who is a passenger, said just before the start that they were confident the "Untin" Bowler would carry them through.

Carries Special Messages

A bag of mail, sealed late yesterday by postmaster Arthur D. Lueder rested on top of the aviators' luggage. It contained letters addressed by governors to foreign monarchs, ambassadors to their governments, and greetings from U. S. business executives to those of foreign lands.

A flight of approximately 1,000 miles had been planned for to-day in easy hops. A brief stop was scheduled for Milwaukee, where the flyers were to lay a wreath at the base of the statue to Leif Ericson, which overlooks the lake, before taking off for Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. After clearing the Canadian customs at the "Soo" the "Untin" Bowler's course led to Remi Lake, Ont., where a load of fuel was to

DON WOODS WINS MARATHON IN FIELD OF EIGHT DRIVERS; FORTY-FIVE MILE CONTEST

TORONTO, July 3. (C.P.) — The Peterborough County Police system has been brought under the control of the Provincial force, and H. E. Thompson, a Provincial constable of the county, it was announced here yesterday by Major-General V. A. S. Williams, Provincial Police Commissioner.

Announcement was also made by General Williams that the 17 men recently made acting high constables throughout Ontario, will be brought into Toronto immediately to receive a three-day schooling on their new duties and on the rural police reorganization generally.

Peterborough Maintained Her Supremacy As Home of Champion Drivers.

ENTRY LIST LARGE.

Thousands Line River To Witness Fine Program of Water Sports.

Zipping and roaring in loud staccato the greatest array of sea fleas ever assembled in local waters skimmed the Otonabee River in the four big races for outboard hydroplanes that featured the Old Home Week water sports program held from the Government wharf, near Rye's, yesterday afternoon.

Against this classy field in which the best drivers were at the throttle of some of the fastest boats in Ontario, Peterborough maintained its supremacy, as the home of champion drivers and speed boats Two of the four events, including the feature race, the forty-mile open marathon, were won by local boats, driven by Peterborough youths. "Bunny" Waddell, in Bass Bug, a Johnson, finished first in the A Class race, and Don Wood was home first in the new Johnson boat, Speed King, Sr., ahead of the large field in the long ride to Rice Lake and back. Bill Coursey in Speed King, Jr., was second to Wood's, in the marathon.

Eight high-powered sea fleas richotted down the course with the crack of the starting gun in the long forty-five mile marathon jaunt to the mouth of the river and return.

Developed Engine Trouble.

Wes Kelly, driving the well-famed Canada Flyer, now owned by Lou Marsh, was up with the leaders, driving a heady race, until the first bridge was rounded, when the motor started to give trouble. Kelly never relinquished the hunt, however, and came in fifth.

Don Wood accomplished the distance in 35 1-2 minutes.

"Bunny" Waddell in Bass bug, and Walter Wood in Miss Cadillac fought it out all the way in the A Class race. It was a close finish but Waddell was in the lead at the finish.

Over a ten mile course, down to the buoy at the T.A.S. Park and return, Jimmy Rogers raced 68 Magnus Flyer, owned by J. W. Magnus of Toronto in 13 minutes 45 seconds, to win the class by a gallop from Norm Wood in Miss Cadillac. The two jockeyed their way down the twists of the river, Rogers drew away in the last two miles, and crossed the line 200 yards ahead of the Peterborough boat.

Fearless Bill Landrigan driving I'm Alone, won the C Class event over the ten mile course in 12 minutes and 10 seconds. He was pitted against a strong field of six out of town boats and pilots. He was 500 yards in the lead of Radio Bug at the finish.

C.P.R. TRAINMAN FOUND DEAD WITH BODY BADLY CRUSHED

Harry Kiernan, of Havelock, Killed at Park Street Crossing Last Night.

SWITCHING TRAIN.

Believed To Have Been Making a Coupling When Accident Occurred.

Harry Kiernan, aged 25, C.P.R. brakeman with his home at Havelock, was instantly killed when the wheels of a box car passed over his body at the corner of Park and Albert streets here at 8.55 last evening. The facts of the fatality are meagre, since no one saw Kiernan fall beneath the train, and he was dead when picked up.

The train was a freight and it was switched into the siding at Albert and Park streets to leave a load of hogs, according to Conductor Edward McMillan. He said that he did not know what happened to Kiernan, but he thought that he must have slipped, while making the coupling between the cars.

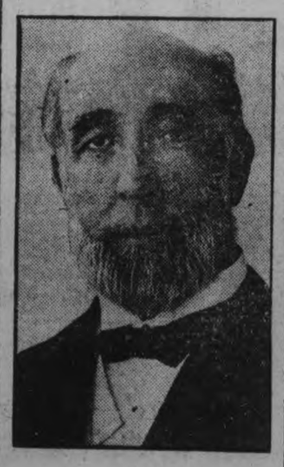
The first suspicion that something had happened to Kiernan came to William Patten, also a brakeman on the same train. Patten missed Kiernan from his accustomed place in front of him and went to locate him. He found Kiernan dead, lying on the tracks right where he had uncoupled the cars. He thought that he must have slipped, or been dragged under the wheels in some unaccountable manner.

Dr. T. W. H. Young, viewed the remains in Comstock's Undertaking Parlours this morning and ordered an inquest. He said that the wheels had passed over the body below the ribs on the left side, fracturing the ribs on the right side and also fracturing the right arm.

According to railway officials Harry Kiernan was a spare brakeman with the company, but he had been railroading for several years and was very familiar with his work. None could explain how the man got beneath the wheels, but all gave the theory that he must have slipped.

The train crew consisted of: Conductor Edward McMillan, brakeman Wm. Patten, and George Pacey, engineer, besides the man killed.

NOT FORGOTTEN



HON. GEORGE A COX

Peterborough's Grand Old Man has passed on to another vale, but the memory of him is still cherished in the city he loved. Senator Cox will not be forgotten as long as any of his contemporaries survive. The years since his death have only accentuated the fine qualities that endeared him to his host of friends. Like Burns, "George A." believed that "a man's a man for a' that."

Peterborough's centennial celebration recalls him as one of the great Canadians this city has produced. And above all, he had the kind heart that becomes a man better than a coronet.

Jury is Undecided In McConnell's Death

TORONTO, Ont., July 3.—(C.P.)—A coroner's jury investigating the death of James McConnell, local citizen, were unable to say last night whether it was an accident that caused him to fall and sustain fatal injuries in the armories at Queen and Saulter streets on the night of June 22.

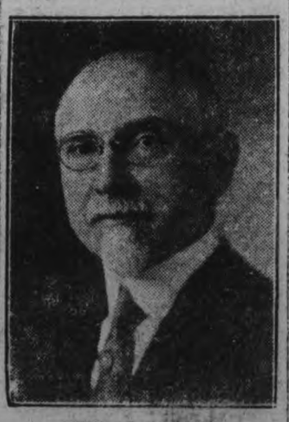
Evidence showed that McConnell had spent some time in the officers' mess at the armouries and after leaving apparently to go home his body was found at the foot of the stairs later in the night.

When the verdict was presented to Coroner Dr. H. W. Burgess, he asked the jury whether they wished to state that the fall was accidental.

"No," replied the foreman. "We cannot agree on that. We want to leave it open as there may be further police investigation."

THREE AMENDMENTS TO BE MOVED IN REPLY TO KING'S SPEECH

PROMINENT "OLD BOY"



EDWARD R. WOOD.

One of the outstanding men in Canadian financial affairs is E. R. Wood, son of the late John Wood who was principal of the old Ashburnham School, and for years was clerk of the village. Mr. Wood attended the dinner on Tuesday given by the Toronto Association of Peterborough Old Boys, of which he was an honorary vice-president. He is vice-president of the Bank of Commerce, president of the Central Canada Loan and Savings Company, president of the Dominion Securities Corporation, vice-president of the Brazilian Traction Light and Power Company, to mention a few of his large interests.

This morning Mr. Wood, like so many other Old Boys, stopped at the H. LeBrun & Co. store to look at the pictures of old lacrosse teams, the old Fire Brigade, and other groups of Peterborough men of his day. While in the city he will be the guest of Mr. W. G. Morrow, Weller Street.

Independent Labor, Liberal and Conservative Parties Give Notice of Motion.

RADICALS WANT ACTION.

Intention of Government To Amend Trade Disputes Act Is Deplored.

LONDON, July 3 (By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent).—The Conservatives, Liberals, and the advanced section of the Labor party have all given notice of amendments to the address in reply to the speech from the throne. One Conservative amendment, to be moved by Sir Henry Page Croft, member for Bournemouth, challenges the Government's position on the safeguarding duties inaugurated by the Conservative government. Another, to be moved by F. A. MacQuisten (Conservative, Argyll), will express regret that the government intends to amend the Trades Disputes Act and thus "disturb the legal position before there has elapsed a reasonable period to manifest the permanent benefits which the provisions of the said act have conferred upon the trade union movement and also disturb the cordial relations between all concerned in industry under the continuance of which employment and prosperity depend."

$1,800,000 CASH PAID.

Senator M. J. O'Brien, of Renfrew, Was Owner of Property.

TORONTO, Ont., July 3 (C.P.).—Purchase has been made by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission of the Ottawa Valley power interests owned by Senator M. J. O'Brien, Renfrew. Announcement to this effect was made here last night by Premier G. H. Ferguson, who said the purchase price was $1,800,000 cash.

The properties purchased by the Commission are situated on the Madawaska and Mississippi rivers, both tributary to the Ottawa River. The power sites are known as the Claybank, Stewartville, Burnstown and High Falls and have an aggregate capacity of approximately 85,000 horsepower. Two existing developments are included in the deal. They are known as the Calabogie and Goletta plants which generate 6,000 horsepower and are now serving the districts of Carp, Kinburn, Pakenham, Arnprior and Calabogie, as well as a number of industries in Renfrew.

100,000 More Horsepower

By the acquisition of these properties, said Mr. Ferguson; a link of about 100,000 horespower will be added to the chain of power developments and plants which the commission is laying across Ontario from the Ottawa River to the Nipigon.

Negotiations for this purchase have been proceeding for the last two years. The conferences leading up to the deal now closed were begun in January.

Recently Hon. R. J. Cooke, of the commission, said that efforts were being made to secure properties in the vicinity of Cochrane, Walkerton, Wiarton and Southampton in addition to some smaller sites on the Madawaska River.

Mr. Cooke said that power developments at Bala had been taken over along with some smaller properties in the Georgian Bay district.

OBITUARY

HERBERT MULLEN.

(Contributed

The funeral of the late Herbert Mullen took place from the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ward, 261 Romaine street, to Millbrook Cemetery, being held under the auspices of L.O.L. No. 1176 and was largely attended by many Orangemen of the district.

Mr. Mullen enjoyed a great measure of popularity among the members of the Orange Order. He was an Orangeman all the year round, as a brother Orangeman testified fittingly for him. He would not be content with marching on the 12th of July and flag-waving, but in his own quiet way, being secretary and treasurer, he visited the widows and orphans, learning of their needs.

The funeral at the house was conducted by the Rev. Mr. McDonald, of Knox Church, choosing very appropriately for his remarks the lesson of the two men who meant to go to work in the vineyard but went not; and the other who hesitated but went and performed his duty.

The strain proved too great and I was real sick for about two months. My mother advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I started to take it. You should have seen the change in me. I am now well and strong and in good spirits. I have taken the Vegetable Compound ever since if I feel my energy lacking. I also take Liver Pills and I find them a wonderful help for constipation." —Mrs. James E. Robson, Box 693, Fernie, British Columbia.

New Endurance Records Are Set By Ontario Aerial Service Aviators

TORONTO, Ont., July 3 (Canation Press). — Aviators in the Ontario Government aerial service established several new records for length of time in the air during the three weeks in June when the fire hazard was high in the north-western section of the province.

Government officials said today that recent rains have reduced the fire hazard to a fraction of what it was during the first three weeks in June. The service is now back to normal, and airmen and fire rangers alike are now taking matters a little easier.

The first of June's new flight records was that of the week ending June 8, when a total of 495 flying hours was recorded. The previous record was 543 established last August. During the week of June 15 the airmen broke the new "record" by flying 514.40 hours. This in turn was smashed the succeeding week of June 22, when the record of 558.55 hours was set.

Winnipeg Grain Merchant Is Elected New Chancellor For Queen's University

KINGSTON, July 3 (Canadian Press).—James Armstrong Richardson of Winnipeg, head of the grain firm of James Richardson and Sons, was yesterday afternoon chosen as the new Chancellor of Queen's University to succeed Sir Robert L. Borden, who resigned several weeks ago.

Mr. Richardson's name was the only one to be placed in nomination, and he was unanimously chosen for the post.

Since he graduated from Queen's University in 1906, Mr. Richardson has never forgotten his Alma Mater, and has proven a true benefactor of the University.

To-day the spacious Richardson memorial stadium is due mainly to his efforts and his munificence. The stadium, scene of so many stirring rugby battles since 1921, was given to the University by Mr. Richardson in memory of the late Captain George Taylor Richardson, one of the greatest hockey players ever developed at the University.

Cheers and thunders of applause greeted the creator of Jiggs as he with Frank Clark gave some reminiscences of old times and Mr. Simons reacted the first performance that he and Mr. Clark ever gave in public. The song that this famous comedian first offered was called "The Old Time Dance", and after singing the words he broke into an old reel, which if it had of been in a theatre could be described as "bringing the house down". An encore was demanded so he and his first accompanist teamed together, Mr. Clark on the banjo and Danny with nimble feet to repoduce some Old Southern melodies and dances.

So enthusiastic were the spectators that they demanded that Mr. Simons

CARS DAMAGED.

Serious Accident Is Narrowly Averted On Lakefield Road.

TRENT RIVER, July 1 (Examiner Correspondence).—Two drivers, alleged to have been racing at a fast speed on the Havelock road near James Longmuire's residence, were responsible for a slight accident which might have been more serious if Mrs. Fred Cook, driving from Havelock, had not swerved her car out of the way in time to avoid striking the speeding cars. In doing so she collided with another car which was coming from Trent River, which resulted in damaged fenders to the colliding automobiles. The drivers who were responsible for the accident failed to stop and were soon lost from sight on the way to Havelock.

JOHNSON—ADAMS.

A very pretty wedding took place at St. James' United Church on Saturday when the Rev. J. H. Dudgeon united in marriage two popular young people, Miss Elsie Adams, daughter of James Adams, of Toronto, and Frank Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Johnson, of this city.

The ushers for the occasion were Eric Jones and Ernie Fowler, both of here.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Mendelssohn Wedding March, played by Frank Stevens, was charmingly attired in a gown of white crepe romaine, with veil and orange blossoms and carrying a bouquet of Easter lilies, forget-me-nots and baby breath.

Miss Ethel Johnson, sister of the groom, in smart frock of yellow satin draped with tulle and old-fashioned polked hat to match and carrying Ophelia roses and baby breath, was bridesmaid. The bridegroom was supported by Melville Starr.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the groom's home, when a buffet luncheon was served to about fifty guests.

The groom's mother was charmingly attired in rose georgette crepe, with white hat and grey fox fur.

The out-of-town guests were: J. S. Adams, Toronto, father of the bride; Mrs. J. C. McMullen and daughter, Betty Jean, Detroit, sister of bride.

Many rare and costly gifts were received by the young couple. The groom's gift to the bride was a string of pearls, silver ring to bridesmaid and silver cigarette case to best man.

After the reception the young couple left on a trip t Toronto, the bride travelling with a navy suit and grey fox fur.

Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will be at home to their friends on Lock street.

Melville Adams, Toronto, brother of the bride, was a guest at the wedding.

KELSEY—WILLIS

Knox United Church was the scene of an interesting wedding on Saturday, June 29, when Madeline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Willis of this city, and Albert Edward Kelsey son of Mrs. and the late Mr. Henry Kelsey of Dorking, Surrey, England, were united in marriage by the Rev. Wm. McDonald, B.D.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, entered the church to the strains of the wedding march played by Mr. R. J. Devey. The bride was attired in a dainty gown of white crepe de chene, her bridal veil was caught with orange and apple blossom and her bouquet was of pink and white peonies. The bridesmaid was Miss Grace McCannon, looking charming in her dress of pink georgette and hat to match. Her bouquet was of pink carnations and peonies. Little Miss Evelyn Rome dressed in pale yellow crepe de chene acted as flower girl, carrying a basket of pansies and orange blossoms. The groom was attended by Mr. Don Hill. During the signing of the register, Miss Jessie Hill sang sweetly, “O Promise Me.” Immediately following the ceremony, a buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. H. Burrows assisted by Mrs. H. Kelsey. The bride and groom left on the 4.30 p.m. C.P.R. train for Toronto. On returning they will reside at 187 Stewart street.

OLD BOY OF 92 RETURNS HOME

RECALLS OLD DAYS.

The distinction of being the oldest of the Old Boys that have registered at the Old Home Week registration booth to date, probably goes to James McCall, who registered yesterday. He is 92 years of age. Notwithstanding this fact, Mr. McCall is in such a fine state of health that he easily mounted the stairs leading to the registration offices.

Mr. McCall was born in Smith in 1837, the year of the Mackenzie Rebellion. He later lived in Bridgenorth till his departure from Peterborough about fifty years ago. His educatoin was secured in the only school in the district, situated in the vicinity of the present location of St. John's Church. The principal was Thomas Benson.

Mr. McCall took his departure from this district about a half century ago. He went to Mount Forest, Ontario, where he has lived ever since.

The aged visitor motored to Peterborough to attend Old Home Week, coming about 150 miles. He is staying with his brother's family outside the city for an indefinite time.

Few of the friends he used to know in these parts are still around. Mr. McCall found on his return after his long absence. Those who were young with him have in the most part died or moved away. Even of the old buildings, few remain to recall the old days. They have disappeared to make way for more modern structures. Even the cemetery, which the visitor remembers well, which was on the present sight of Confederation Square, has gone. The improvements and growth of the City of Peterborough were the cause of amazement to the old visitor.

Mr. McCill is full of reminiscences of the old days in this district. His memory serves him excellently, for he says the Fenian Raids seem as though they were a recent event and he retains a clear picture of the activities at that time.

There were never any celebrations in past days in which such widespread interest was taken as in the present Old Home Week, he relates. However, some large celebrations were staged especially on occasions such as the forming of the Dominion of Canada. Mr. McCall tells of a great many of the greater events in the history of this city ranging in nature from the visit of the Prince of Wales, who was later King Edward, to the Confederation celebration.

THE ROBERT SIMPSON COMPANY LIMITED TORONTO

EARLY DAYS OF THE PETERBOROUGH POST OFFICE

SAMUEL J. CARVER SERVED FOR 30 YEARS AS POSTMASTER

Family To-day is Represented in the Fourth Generation by Samuel Delaval Carver.

THE FIRST POSTOFFICE

Present Baptismal Font in St. John's Anglican Church Was Presented by Early Pioneer.

For thirty years Samuel J. Carver, was postmaster in Peterborough, first at the northeast corner of Simcoe and Queen Streets, now the site of the Peterborough Cereal Company's office, and afterwards in the premises occupied by J. F. Strickland on Water Street. He was one of the pioneers of Peterborough and of North Monaghan, and his family is represented today in the fourth generation, through his son Samuel Delaval Carver, who lives on the old homestead in the township, his grandson Leslie Delaval Carver of Toronto, son of S. D. Carver, and his great grandson, Ross Delaval Carver, the six-year-old son of Leslie D. Carver.

Samuel J. Carver is mentioned in an old history of Peterborough which may be quoted with a rather interesting prefatory sketch of the first physicians who served here. The two paragraphs follow:

"Dr. Reade, having stayed with the immigrants for the time promised by the Government, returned to England. But other medical men settled in what promised to become a prosperous field for practice; the first of them, in reality the first permanent practitioner, was Dr. Dowsley; after him Dr. Roddy; then Dr. Hutchison, the ablest and most successful doctor in the place at that period. He afterward practiced in partnership with Dr. Taylor. Dr. Hutchison resided in what has been maintained as the oldest house in Peterborough, that originally built by Adam Scott. It stood on the ground now forming the block bounded by Dalhousie, Charlotte, George and Water streets.

The First Post Office

By this time Peterborough enjoyed the advantage of a weekly mail, although the Upper Canadian post office was kept in the store of Mr. James Grey Bethune, in a small log house, which was known as "The Red Store", situated on which is now the southeast corner of Market Square. Both store and post office were at first managed by Mr. Thomas Valentine Tupper. He was succeeded as post master by James B. Ferguson, brother of Fred Ferguson, whose post office was accomodated in a small square-built frame house close to the Red Store, whose southern side it adjoined. The size was ten feet by sixteen feet, the door and single window facing the river.

The post office was next located in the old log building known as Government House (about Simcoe and Water Streets). The postmaster was Ephraim Sanford, who unhappily died by his own hand some years afterward (1843). His successor was S. J. Carver, the post office being changed once more to a neater frame structure on the east side of Queen street where it remained until 1850. Thence it was twice removed as the growing necessity for change in the houses and stores, or the great fire of 1861, made such changes unavoidable.

Mr. Carver had been for two years assistant to the postmaster prior to his own appointment. He resigned in 1867 and retired to his farm in North Monaghan, which has been continuously in the family's possession since 1840.

Came to Canada in 1828

Samuel J. Carver was born in Bath, England, in 1802, the son of Samuel J. Carver, a gentleman of the East India Trading Company. The son was educated for the law in London, but in 1828 threw up the prospect of that career and came to Canada. He bought 200 acres in Otonabee from Captain Rubidge. In 1831 he was gazetted Lieutenant of the 4th Northumberland militia, and his military preoccupation was called into active service in 1837, when he marched at the head of his company along the Lake Shore road to Toronto at the time of the Mackenzie rebellion.

After selling his farm in Otonabee he bought a property in North Monaghan from Richard Winch. It was part of a section of 200 acres which has been owned and subdivided by Judge MacKay. Known for years as "Spruce Glen", it is situated less than half a mile from the city on the south side of the highway, and is further identified by its proximity to that shaded vale, one of the beauty spots on the highway, with the fanciful and poetical name "Sunset Pass".

Once a Toll Road

Years ago the highway was a toll road. Jason Lundy kept both gates, one at Bestard's corner, the extension of Sherbrooke street, and the other several miles out at the watering trough. Originally the way to Port Hope was largely a matter of choice through the woods. Paths were blazed and worn, and gradually roads cleared as the country slowly developed, but for quite a long time townspeople used to start off from the vicinity of the present Peterborough Clinic on Charlotte Street, over the Sherbrooke Street hill, following the lower ground back of Carver's house, and off toward the southwest and Port Hope.

Through the glen deer had tracked a hard-beaten path from the northwest down toward the southeast, coming out at the river probably about Crawford's Grove. From the northwest they descended "Bartey Welsh's hill", that is the hill at Wallis's grove, from farther woods in Smith.

Garden to the River

S. J. Carver's house on Queen Street, like most Englishmen's homes, was set in a beautiful garden that sloped down to the river. Some of its perrenials survive at "Spruce Glen", peonies, roses, lilacs, and many other shrubs and flowers that beautify a residence and satisfy men's aesthetic taste. Mr. Carver owned the house, and the post office required only a part of it. One of its doors still serves as a gate at the homestead.

Those were the days before the postage stamp was used. Your letter would come to you with a large numeral stamped on the envelope indicating that, two, three or five cents was to be paid by the recipient. Shortly after Mr. Carver became postmaster the first stamps were issued. It is said that their symbol was the Canadian beaver, a suggestion of nationalism that would be loudly decried by ultra-Imperialists today.

A Gift to St. John's

S. J. Carver was a prominent member of St. John's church in his day, and his faith and fervor are still testified in the baptismal font which is used to this day at St. John's, which was his votive offering for the recovery of son Samuel D. Carver from the effects of a serious injury. He was also one of the first subscribers for the purchase of the Little Lake cemetery.

No Safes For Money

Safes for the keeping of money were unknown in those days, and when Mr. Carver's office was moved to Water Street, he had to carry the office money and registered letters at night to his home on Queen street.

"Spruce Glen" has so many heirlooms it is almost a museum, including the first bureau S. J. Carver bought, a muzzle-loading musket used at the battle of Waterloo, with its flintlock striking fire as certainly as when it was first used more than 130 years ago. Mr. Carver was evidently a man of disciplined character and habits, as revealed by his correspondence, still preserved by the family. As indicating some of the conditions of that time one of his receipts shows that he paid £3 to James Walsh for six weeks board in 1844. Another is that James a Wrighton on October 18, 1839 bound himself to serve in the Peterborough post office for at least one year at £80 a year. When he bought his farm in Monaghan he paid for it with gold coins. That was largely the custom of the day if you were fortunate enough to have the money. His military uniform, the one he wore when he and other citizens met the Prince of Wales, afterwards King Edward VII, on his visit to Peterborough, looks as if it were laid aside only yesterday.

Spruce Glen is a repository for tokens of that early generation which few of the present day families of Peterborough received as proofs of their pioneer associations.

Samuel J. Carver was married in Cobourg in 1845 to Jane Montgomery of the Montgomery clan of Armagh, Ireland. She died in 1902 ten years after her husband, who passed on in 1892 at the age of 90. Of their family Hubert and Edmund live in California and a third son, H. M., lives in Hamilton, Ont. Samuel Delaval Carver was the youngest. When he was born his father was 65 years old and his mother 50; and both parents lived into their nineties.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

former pupils, so signally expressed on this occasion. The service they have rendered, and still render, as is the case with all avocations that make for social and artistic betterment, cannot be measured by any pecuniary yardstick, nor is there any financial equivalent possible for such service within a community. I rejoice, therefore, that their fellow-citizens and others are, by this token of high esteem and regard, expressing in some degree, the appreciation so sincerely felt by all who know the splendid contribution Mr. and Mrs Gliddon have made to the artistic life of the community. May they long be spared to enrich and inspire by their talents, their devotion and their industry, the musical ambitions and capacities of many among us."

Miss Mabel Clarry ,president of the Women's Music Club, spoke of the letters of regret at their inability to be present, received from Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave of St. John's Church, Dr. Ernest MacMillan of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Boris Hambourg of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Heins of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Madill, Dr. E. A. Hammond and Mrs. Hammond.

Messages of congratulation on this occasion were received from friends and former pupils and teachers in Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver, and Detroit.

Presentation Made.

The outstanding event of the afternoon was the presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Gliddon on behalf of their friends and well-wishers in the community, of a purse of gold and a complimentary address which had been beautifully inscribed and illuminated by J. Kennett. The address was read by Miss Clarry and the purse of gold was presented by tiny Jean Hills, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Fred Hills. This was followed by the presentation of a silver basket of lovely pink roses by little Margaret Hooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hooper, which was the gift of Mrs. Alice Roger Collins of Elora, who was a member of the original Faculty of the Conservatory of Music, on its inception.

A suitable and very appreciative acknowledgment of the kindness of all who had made this event so pleasant an occasion, and an assurance that it would ever be "a green spot in the memory," was made by Mr. Gliddon, while Mrs. Gliddon also added a few words of sincere thanks. Mr. Gliddon spoke especially of the work done by the ladies of the committee and of the co-operation of the members of the Madrigal Singers' group.

Three cheers and a tiger from the company assembled was accorded to Mr. and Mrs. Gliddon at this juncture.

The musical portion of the program was very pleasing and served to enhance the brilliant and happy atmosphere of the anniversary celebration. The Madrigal Singers, led by Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, sang three part songs in splendid voice, the orchestra of the Conservatory played in introduction to the program, in pleasing selections, and the String Quartette was heard in a beautiful rendition of the melodius "Andante Cantabile" of Tschaikowsky.

During the afternoon, tea and light refreshments were served.

Illuminated Address

The address to Mr. and Mrs. Gliddon, which opened with a quotation: "Music is the medium between the spiritual and realistic life," was as follows:

"To Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Gliddon of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music: Some of your friends, when they heard that this year marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the foundation of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music, felt they would like to express in some audible and tangible manner, their cordial and warm realization of all that the institution has meant to the artistic and cultural growth of the community, the city and district during those years.

"We therefore desire to express our sincere appreciation of the efforts and labor put forward by you both, towards developing in the youth of our fair city a love of Music. "Music," which Tennyson terms "The very soul of all that is beautiful." All those who realize that "Man cannot live by bread alone," and who endeavor to follow the pathway of true art, whether it be music, painting, sculpture, or any of its forms, invariably find it not an easy road to travel; it has its discouragements and disappointments. In spite of this, you have the knowledge and joy that, while living in an age that tends to plaec too high a value on the material things of life, you, yourselves, are doing something eminently worth while in cultivating a love of an art which enriches the soul, refines the character and develops the nobler instincts in man or woman.

"Literally thousands of students have gone forth from this Conservatory during the twenty-five years of its existence in Peterborough to take up their various vocations in life. Thus the influence of the Conservatory has been spread far over Canada and even into other countries, wherever its students have made their homes.

"We ask you to accept this purse of gold as a small token of our esteem and kindly feeling towards you both and we wish you success and joy in your continued efforts in the cause of music, and that good health and happiness may be your portion in the years to come.

The address was signed on behalf of the donors, by Miss Mabel Clarry, president of the Women's Music Club; Mrs. J. Forbes Allan, the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., and Duncan Walker.

G. B. VanBlaricom performed the interesting duties of toast master most acceptably. Frank O'Connor proposed the toast to the King, and the only other toasts were to the city and county of Peterborough which were responded to by Mayor Denne and E. A. Peck. The other speakers were called upon informally by the toast master.

Sir Joseph Flavelle.

Sir Joseph Flavelle, speaking rather briefly, dwelt in passing on the old days in the "old Union school when Peck and I went there."

"I remember a little incident," he continued," which made a lasting impression upon me. It was a little lesson one day at school when Principal Dickson at the old Union was about to leave the room for a time. He said, "boys you will have no monitor in my absence, but I will depend on your honor for good conduct.'" That trust and sense of honor was a fine lesson. It leads me to think of the influences on boys as they grow up. Apart rom the influences of the church and home I prize the memories of old families of the community, men and women we greatly respected and looked up to, not because they were in a different social class from the rest of us but because without any subservience on on our part we could look at them feeling a sense of vision of what they were and what they stood for. Some of them were old Hudson Bay people, some U. E. loyalists, some were sprung from the blood of early missionaries in this province. The generations since then are under a debt of gratitude to the courage and purposefulness of the early families of this country."

Sir Joseph cited several instances of the moral and physical qualities of those earlier men, referred again to Peterborough's pleasant atmosphere and remarked: "I wondered where Frank O'Connor got his amiable qualities until I realized that he was a Peterborouogh boy. But he wasn't' born here. That is all he is lacking." His parting message was a little quotation from a letter recently received from a friend to the effect that to engender in men a desire to do good to each other is the end and object of human existence, the one axiom that expresses all others in that man's highest good is to use himself in the help of others.

E. A. Peck, M.P.

E. A. Peck, M.P., representing Warden Breckenridge, recalled the school days of fifty years ago. "Those were good old days. Two or three of the boys I knew then are still here. There was Sir Joseph Flavelle, of course he wasn't Sir Joseph then, and the Beck boys and one of the Haultains ,who is now Chief Justice of Manitoba. It is very delightful to see so many of you come back home during this week. It shows your affection for the old town."

Senator W. H. McGuire.

"As one of the boys born in Otonabee," said Senator W. H. McGuire, "it was a pleasure to see the decorations along the streets for us, because there was a time when we came in from Otonabee and there were no decorations hung out for us. Frank O'Connor said he learned to work under Mr. Patterson's training, but I learned on the farm where you get real work. Sir Joseph mentioned other nationalities that have helped to build up this country, but he forgot the most important, the people who made Peterborough in the first place."

"That was because I am Irish myself," Sir Joseph Flavelle interrupted.

"That's the innate modesty of the Irish again," Senator McGuire continued. "My ancesors first came to Cavan township. They thought it was to be the centre of Canada. Later they decided that there was more room in Otonabee (laughter), and I had the peculiar good fortune to be born in that township. I see among us Joe Duffus, Billy Anderson and Morley Smithson, all of Otonabee, who are looking after this city and county."

Senator McGuire in a serious vein suggested that this community should erect a monument to the Fife whose grain had made western Canada prosper. We need more Canadianism and less provincialism, more thought of our own country. Our first duty to ourselves and our country and the Empire is to think more of Canada. One thing we could do it so put up a monument to the Mr. Fife from this country who did so much to make possible Canada as it is today.'"

W. H. Bradburn and W. A. Anderson, Peterborough's two representatives in the Legislature thanked the Toronto committee for their invitation.

Jams Dutton president of the Chamber of Commerce, said that he was not "an Old Boy," but there was not "an Old Boy,'" but there borough.

"It is a great pleasure to know that so many men in Toronto have not lost any of their esteem for the city that meant so much to them in their early days."

Ovation to "H. R. H."

When H. R .H. Kenner was called on "for a few words," he was greeted with a spontaneous outburst of applause and rounds of cheers, a manifestation of the warm place so many of his former students and fellow-citizens hold for him in their hearts. He said he was just completing thirty-six years of service at the Collegiate. When he began his duties here in 1893 the staff was only seven teachers with 200 pupils enrolled; to-day there are 29 teachers and the September enrollment was 742. Mr. Kenner mentioned the enlarged scope and usefulness of the Collegiate Institute, and congratulated the Toronto committee for the great success of their efforts.

Proud of Toronto.

R. M. Glover thanked the Toronto Old Boys for their co-operation with the Peterborough general committee. "We are proud of Toronto and the leadership it gives to worthwhile things throughout the province," he said. "We have a special pride in our donation of men who went from here to work with the citizens of Toronto in that leadership."

Rev. Father Costello contributed a quip in a remark that Old Home Week had been reflected in last Sunday's collection, and he hoped the Old Boys would remain over another Sunday. As a Peterborough County boy, born in the Township of Ennismore, and in his ten years' service at St. Peter's Cathedral, he testified to the pleasantness of Peterborough as a home town. That was due to the character of the people and their desire to make it a good city.

Rev. J. D. Paterson said he had come from Toronto to Peterborough six years ago. "You will agree with me, I think, when I say that Toronto is much larger, but that as a place to live in, Peterborough is the better. It makes the people of Peterborough proud of their city when they realize the character of the people who have lived here."

Judge O'Connell.

Judge O'Connell declared that he regarded himself as an Old Boy, although he was born in Cape Town South Africa, "an important part of the Empire which I do not see largely represented to-day," he added.

After a pleasantry at his own expense, His Honor said in part: "We knew Peterborough did everything well, and we felt we would receive a warm welcome, but I assure you that you have exceeded our expectations. You have made this visit a very delightful event in our lives. Peterborough has bidden her sons and daughters home from the ends of the continent, and some of us who are here for this occasion will never have the opportunity to return again.

"We have come back to the town of our youth where we have spent so many happy days, to look around this beautiful city and to visit again its beautiful lakes and sloping hills to meet dear old friends of days gone by, and to renew those friendships of the past. I assure you that those days have been held as sacred memories."

Judge O'Connell concluded with a reference to the tender sentiments such a reunion calls forth, and while stirred by them, nevertheless the Toronto guests intended to share in all the festivities and to leave with new affections for Peterborough, and also in the hope that the citizens would retain "a pleasant memory of our stay."

Judge E. C. S. Huycke

By analogy with business, Judge Huycke said Peterborough had exported too many of her fine citizens. "If we could have kept George A. Cox, E. R. Wood, Sir Joseph Flavelle and so many others, what a city we should have. But perhaps it is for our country's good."

His Honor expressed his pleasure in joining in the welcome to the Old Home Week guests and quoted the line:

Better loved ye cannot be
Will ye no' come back again.

Accolade to W. J. O'Brien

Mr. VanBlaricom paid a fine tribute to W. J. O'Brien who, he said, had done so much work in the background for the success of the Old Home Week visit. "He was the silent force behind this movement in Toronto," said the toast master.

The company cheered Mr. O'Brien as he arose to reply to the commendation. "It was just through a sense of duty to the town I love so much." Mr. O'Brien declared. "We have had a splendid committee, and if its work was to have a reward we had it to-day in the grand welcome we received as we came into and through the city."

Another personal reward, he said, was to be present on such an occasion when the personality and work "of my old Chief, Mr. Kenner," was so splendidly recognized in his own city.

Taylor and Son for 2 inch lump Red Jacket at $7.65 per ton. This is the same kind of coal as purchased last year and as the same proved entirely satisfactory the Committee decided on its purchase this year. It was stated that this is ten cents a ton cheaper than last year.

CAVAN BRANCH HOLDS MEETING

Mrs. R. M. Howden Hostess To Members of Cavan Women's Institute.

GOOD PROGRAM.

CAVAN, July 2 (Examiner Correspondence).—A well-attended meeting of Cavan Women's Institute was held at the home of the president, Mrs. R. M. Howden, on Thursday afternoon.

Among the items of business arising out of the minutes of the last meeting was the financial report of the supper and concert held in the community hall in May. The receipts from the supper were $64.20; from the sale of home-made $11.45, making a total of $75.65. Expenses amounted to $34.05, leaving a balance of $41.60.

Three letters were read by the secretary from persons who had received fruit or flowers during illness.

An invitation from Bethany Institute was read inviting Cavan Women's Institute to join with them at a picnic at Wallace's Point, the latter part of July or the first of August. A similar invitation had been sent Mount Pleasant Institute.

It was decided to accept the invitation. The president expressing the hope that as many as possible would be able to attend.

Mrs. Eakins reported that a girls' judging competition would be held in Millbrook in the near future, under the direction of J. Y. Kellough. The Institutes are asked to help defray the expenses and to try to get as many girls as possible to attend.

There was a discussion concerning contributing to some local improvements. This was left over until further information was obtained.

Mrs. J. R. Eakins, Millbrook, who was present on the invitation of the president, gave a very interesting talk on Institute programs.,

She also named some ways in which the Institutes could assist the schools by giving first aid kits, basins and paper towels, etc.

Regarding the programs, she said a good way to find out the kind of program desired by the members, was to have a suggestion box, and ask the members to bring a written suggestion for the program and drop it in the box. These could be read by the secretary and discussed by the members.

Programs should be made seasonable, and as far as possible local talent should be used and as many members as possible, induced to take part.

Community interests should be considered in the programs: the home and its problems dealt with; health and cleanliness. There should be a study of the people in the homes, so that young and old should be interested. Speech and manners should be considered. Music and amusements and the beautifying of the community should receive consideration. Divide the programs into two parts, topics, papers and addresses. Exhibitions or demonstrations. There should be debates discussions, spelling matches, games, and the social half hour. There should be features to interest every member.

"We learn more readily from seeing than by hearing, hence it is a good plan to frequently have a member demonstrate her particular hobby or something in which she excels.

Our talents are varied and many, so that it should not be difficut to have a number of demonstrations along different lines."

She also advised members should not make their papers too long.

The hearty applause tendered Mrs. Eakins showed the appreciation of her hearers.

The roll call was answered by annual flowers.

A motion to withdraw the July meeting was adopted.

An invitation was given and accepted to hold the August meeting at the home of Mrs. F. M. Staples, when the program committee will be Mrs. H. Snider and Mrs. L. Sutton.

One new member joined the society.

The lunch committee, Miss Touchbourne, Mrs. Seeney, Mrs. Armstrong and Mrs. Lloyd Sutton, assisted the hostess to serve lunch.

TRIBUTE IS PAID TO LATE PASTOR

Memorial Service Held in St. John's Church at Madoc.

FAMILIAR HYMNS.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MADOC, July 3. — The memorial service for the Rev. G. W. Landsbury, late rector of the Church of St. John the Baptist, was held in the Anglican church on the afternoon of June 30th, with Rev. Strothers, a former pastor, and Rev. A. B. Caldwell of Marmora, in charge.

Familiar hymns were chosen, "Come ye Disconsolate," "For all the Saints who from their Labors Rest," and "I Could not do without Thee." Rev. A. B. Caldwell conducted the service of prayer, and the responsive reading of Psalms 23 and 39, while Rev. Mr. Strothers read the lessons, including Rev. 23, and also gave the Memorial sermon.

Two texts were chosen: "A good minister of Jesus Christ," from Timothy iv:6 and "He being dead, yet speaketh," Heb. 11:4.

Rev. Mr. Strothers spoke very highly of the late Rev. W. G. Landsbury, who was a valued personal friend for a period of many years, and who was ordained 15 years ago last month, on the 7th of June. He had charge of the pastorates of Hillier, Maitland, Parham, Wellington, and succeeded Rev. Mr. Strothers as pastor of Madoc.

After dwelling at length on the sterling qualities of courage, faith, gentleness, patience, humility and courtesy of the deceased, Rev. Mr. Stothers urged his hearers to a nobler life, and a closer walk with God as a fitting memorial to the life and work of their late beloved pastor.

Then leaving him there "till life's long shadows break in cloudless day," the service was closed with the benediction and Recessional hymn, "Sun of my Soul, Thou Savior dear."

The late Rev. W. G. Landsbury passed away in a Toronto hospital on Tuesday, June 18. Previous to ordination he was the highly esteemed lay reader at Marmora under the late Canon Harris.

Besides his widow he is survived by one son, Dr. John Landsbury of Toronto, and one daughter, Joyce, at home. The funeral took place at Hillier on Saturday afternoon, June 22.

DANNY SIMONS

appear before the grandstand in tonight's performance.

Edward Hanrahan, another of Peterborough's famous sons, who is featured in Montreal with Jerry Shea's Palladians who are playing at the big dance tonight, was heard to great advantage in two selection, "On The Road to Mandalay" and "The Bells of Saint Marys". He was accompanied by his wife.

The Toronto Transportation fine band concert before the regular vaudeville perfomance gave a splendid band concert in front of the grandstand and drew hearty applause from the crowd as they played. The Hunting song (Bucalossi), the chorus work and the solo instrument work was also greatly appreciated. The difficult Grand Overture, Sonelle of 1912 by Scharkowsky was very ably rendered by this musical organization.

Hogan's Hippodrome repeated the performance of the previous evening and delighted the huge crowd with their splendid exhibition of horsemanship while the auto polo game lent excitment enough to their demonstration.

The Toronto Old Boys, supplied fireworks for the grand finale such as have never been witnessed in Peterborough before. Two thousand dollars worth of set pieces, aerial bombs, flares and sky rockets transformed the dark night into a living fairy land of color and scintilating stars.

The pictures of Mayor Roland Denne and Frank O'Connor done in fireworks were the outstanding pieces of the evening. These were most realistic in their presentation and the crowd applauded heartily as they were touched off.

The message of "Welcome from Toronto Old Boys to Peterborough", was another beautiful set piece, and certainly was received with the greatest enthusiasm by the crowd who demonstrated their appreciation by the blowing of motor horns and with roars of applause.

In Wheels, starting out in a small way ended up in a blaze of glory and the grand finale of the performance was one of the greatest and most spectacular that has been witnessed in Peterborough. A regular riot of color with shooting streamers and stars formed a most beautiful picture for the final setting.

In the interval between the vaudeville and the fireworks display, Mayor Denne presented the cups and cash prizes to the winners of the regatta held at the Old Street Railway wharf in the afternoon.

If you buy out of town, and I buy out of town, and all our neighbors buy out of town, what in thunder will become of our town? Ever think about it?

WEDNESDAY, JULY 3, 1929

THE CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.

Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Gliddon are to be congratulated upon the very successful celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music yesterday.

The institution has from its inception made a very material contribution to the musical development of this city and district, and Peterborough owes much to the Conservatory for what it has been able to accomplish in the direction of encouraging a love for worthwhile music in this section of the Province.

Through the Conservatory opportunity has been given for expert tuition in every branch of musical education, while at the same time it has been the endeavor of Mr. and Mrs. Gliddon to promote the development of music generally in Peterborough—an endeavor that has been consistently successful.

The interest shown in the progress of the Conservatory, as evidenced by yesterday's most successful function, must have been indeed gratifying to the heads of the institution.

A NOTABLE GATHERING.

The spirit of Old Home Week was caught up more noticeably in the most happy luncheon tendered yesterday by the Toronto association of old boys to the Peterborough officials than in any other event of the celebration.

It was a notable gathering with representative citizens of Peterborough fraternizing with former citizens whose names are known not only in their home city but throughout the country, and all uniting in singing the praises of Peterborough.

To gaze round the tables and realize the type of men this community has contributed to play their part in the upbuilding of Toronto was to come to the conclusion that there was nothing much wrong with a city that could send out such graduates.

The speeches of Sir Joseph Flavelle, Frank P. O'Connor, Judge Daniel O'Connell, Senator W. H. Maguire and Will J. O'Brien were impressive for the sincerity of the love of Peterborough that was to be found in almost every sentence, while local spokesmen left no doubt as to their delight at the opportunity to welcome back men who, while they have left the home town and are playing a big part on bigger stages, still look back to this city as a place of happy memories.

THE OLD TIE CLINGS.

(From the Toronto Globe)

Former newspapermen of Peterborough who returned to the scenes of earlier labors during Old Home Week took off their coats for a day, with the result that Saturday's issue of The Examiner was their product.

Whether the home paper on that occasion was more readable or interesting than usual is beside the point; it is always interesting and readable. The fact that the old boys pulled off the stunt showed that they retained the newspaper instinct, at any rate, in their recognition of the news value of the unusual; but, again, we have to recognize the partnership of the regular staff in acceptance of the idea.

One point which the incident emphasizes is the loss to a community in the departure of its sons and daughters for distant fields. These men who got out the Peterborough Examiner for a day are probably like the thousands of others who have transferred their services from their home town to other places. In their chosen spheres of life they are assets to any business with which they are connected. They probably include merchants, manufacturers and professional men and women who are helping to build and contribute to the success of the communities in which they reside. They saw greater opportunities elsewhere, but undoubtedly Peterborough would not have been a loser if they had remained.

It is something, however, to know that the old tie clings sufficiently to call them back occasionally.

WELL DONE, TORONTO.

When the Peterborough old boys living in Toronto formed an association and promised to take an active part in Peterborough's Old Home Week, no one who knew the quality of the men who lined up to support the movement had any doubt of the final result.

The general verdict is, however, that the old boys of the Queen City surpassed the expectations of the most optimistic.

Their part in the week's activities was well planned and splendidly executed; the motorcade from Toronto to Peterborough, the most enjoyable luncheon tendered city and county officials and the Old Home Week committees, the very generous action of providing Peterborough with the services for two days of the crack Toronto Concert Band, and the wonderful display of fireworks which closed last evening's performance all combined to make a remarkable demonstration of efficiency and generosity that is thoroughly appreciated by the community.

Where so many worked in a common purpose, it is difficult to single out any particular individuals without doing an injustice to others, yet it would be unfair if a special word of thanks were not extended to Frank P. O'Connor, the general president of the organization; W. J. O'Brien, the hard working secretary; C. E. Sisson, who ably discharged the duties of treasurer, and the heads of committees—George B. Van Blaricom, chairman of the Publicity Committee; W. S. Campbell, of the Transportation Committee, and Wilfred W. Stratton, chairman of the Fireworks and Music Committee.

To these old boys who still love Peterborough and to all their co-workers, the thanks of the citizens is due.

OTHERS INTOLERANT, TOO.

(New York Telegram)

Speaking at a luncheon held by the American Club in Paris, Clarence Darrow pleads for "less efficiency, more play and more kindly tolerance in the United States."

"All my life," he says, "I have been wanting to reach the point where I shall have no need to be efficient, and now I have arrived."

"I am very sorry," he says, "that we are not learning how to live in America, but only how to make and sell things to somebody who is not making them."

In all of which there is a disagreeable amount of truth.

Still we are not the only intolerant people on earth, even if we do arrest a man for sawing wood on Sunday, as happened in Sayre, Pa., not long ago, and ban articles of a pacificst slant.

Going to the other extreme, Russian schools abolish Sunday and substitute Wednesday as the regular day of rest, while a town in Holland segregates the sexes in all theatres, and is so rigid in enforcing the rule that it recently closed a movie house because a man and his wife were found sitting together.

Liberals, so-called can be just as fanatical and intolerant as conservatives.

AN EDUCATIONAL FREAK.

(From the Chicago Evening Post)

The report of an educational prodigy out in California is likely to be received with more regret than rejoicing. The public seems convinced by experience that the person whose brilliance dims the plodding efforts of companions of similar age is doomed to a dismal end. Unusual attainments up to certain limits are altogether praiseworthy, but when they reach a stage of utter abnormality they too often denote an unbalanced mental condition which rarely permits a life of usefulness.

The California girl, 17 years old, is described by psychologists as "an extraordinary example of genius." She was graduated from Stanford University this spring after spending only six years of her life in school, compared with the sixteen years of the normal educational course through the grades, high school and college. She attended private schools for three years and spent the other three in the university.

The girl's record shows that she walked at seven months and talked and knew the alphabet at nine months. She read at 3 and was said to have had a vocabulary of 13,000 words at the age of 7. Just now she is supposed to be writing a novel.

The public wishes the young woman every success in whatever career she elects, but it has scant hope that she will not flash across the horizon like a rocket and then plunge downward, to be heard of no more. Such, at least, is the usual course of these mental prodigies. They lose the humanizing touch which seems so essential in establishing necessary social contacts.

The California girl has been denied so much of the ordinary child-life routine that she must be what ordinarily is termed "peculiar." She may be a genius to the psychologists, but the world recalls few examples of useful public service on the part of an educational freak.

PAID COUNCILLORS.

Custom dies very hard. The whole spirit of municipal government—in British communities particularly, and those who have inherited similar institutions—voluntary service for civic purposes is the ruling principle. This comes down, of course, from the days when the burgess took a distinct personal pride in his home town, frequently from generations who have been called upon to make great sacrifices to maintain the liberties the community enjoys.

Watching the trend of events, however, compels the recognition of the fact that a great change has swept over the world since it was necessary for the freemen of borough to assert their rights—by force of arms if necessary—and civic service to-day is a vastly different thing to what it used to be. It has assumed the character of a business and calls for the best business men of a community to control it properly.

In such circumstances the question must naturally arise as to the wisdom of depending entirely on voluntary service. To attend to the business of a large and growing municipality means the sacrifice of a good deal of time. It is usually accepted that the volunteer worker is one who has that time to spare. But that principle narrows the choice of councillors down to rather close limits and may exclude some of the more desirable elements who cannot afford to neglect their own affairs to the extent necessary.

On these grounds the policy of paying councillors can be justified, but it runs so close to the further step of handing over municipal matters to a paid manager that it is difficult to see how the former could avoid gradually merging into the latter. This matter of remuneration is being raised as a practical issue at Johannesburg and the progress of the movement should be watched with interest. The possibility of such a policy giving rise to a tribe of professional place seekers has also to be allowed for.—The Municipal Journal, South Africa.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Toronto old boys made Toronto Day memorable. Their contribution to the week's program was indeed a noteworthy one.

A shirt-tail parade is to be a feature to-morrow night. No Old Home Week celebration would be complete without this old-time demonstration.

The old boys and girls went back to school yesterday—and they had a better time than some of them used to have there.

A city that so many of its sons and daughters are delighted to come back to is a city well worth working for.

It is a sign of the times that must have impressed many old boys yesterday, that in the home of the canoe outboard motor racing took first place in popular interest.

Parents are reminded that Camp Skookum, the Rotary boys' camp, will open for the season on Monday. Give the boys a real holiday under the camping-at-cost scheme of the Rotary Club.

A Thought

SUFFERING.

Someone has said that no smile is so beautiful as the one that struggles through tears. If we only use our afflictions and troubles aright we can soften and enrich our natures by our sufferings, our disappointments, or we can turn them into instruments of torture.

What To-day Means To You.

JULY 3rd

"Cancer."

If July 3rd is your birthday, the best hours for you on this day are from 6:30 a.m. to 8.30 a.m., from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m., and from 11 p.m. to 12 midnight. The danger periods are from 11 a.m. to 12 noon, and from 9 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Astrological signs of this date pressage the formation of a new friendship, that will be of great moment in your life. They also indicate much emotional stimulation and a certain degree of social advancement. There will be sensed a tendency to speculate and to loaf.

Children born July 3rd will possess active minds, much originality, a good deal of the right sort of pride, while a persistent, still, small voice, will keep them in the "straight and narrow." They will have affectionate dispositions, and will be much sought by friends and admirers.

You possess an extremely sociable nature, and, as a natural result, have a large number of friends on whose sincerity you can count. Your popularity goes to your head, instead of to your heart. This does not diminish the bigness of the latter: it does, however, occasionally swell the size of the former. You have tact, and are rarely impulsive. You are considerate of others. Personal magnetism is one of your chief assets, and you are apt to rely for success too much on this gift. You should strive to create a reserve fund of hard work and plugging.

Your nature is a big one. You are neither small nor petty. On the other hand, you are not extravagant. You have a fair amount of intelligence. Once, however, you have secured a comfortable degree of existence, you "rest on your oars," and are therefore prevented from attaining to that height of success, which lies within your grasp if continuity of purpose were shown.

You are rather critical of others but your criticism is always couched in terms to avoid giving offense. It would be advisable for you to cultivate a spirit of commendation and encouragement. You are naturally athletic, and fond of sports and outdoor pastimes. You never crow when you win, nor are testy when you lose. You are capable, original and sensible.

APPROVES OF TRAP ROCK

To The Editor:
Dear Sir:

I have been authorized by Mr. Tanner, to request you to insert in your paper the following in order to correct a wrong impression with regard to the undermentioned resolution of Council.

"COUNCIL CHAMBER, June 22, 1929.
Council Resumed
The Warden in the Chair.

Moved by Mr. Tanner and seconded by Mr. Rye, and resolved that this Council respectfully draws the attention of the Road Commissions to the fact, that there are many miles of the main travelled roads under their supervision, with not more than ten feet of driveway proper, with thin metal surface, whilst some of the roads have from twenty to twenty-four feet driveway, recently top surfaced with a heavy dressing of crushed gravel, and added to that a dressing of trap rock screenings, and this Council emphatically declare that the Commissions would be well advised to use the limited amount of money placed at their disposal, in bringing as many of the roads as possible to a safer width and good surface, before using up money on dust laying material on roads, that are now of good width and well surfaced this season. Dust laying expense might be tolerated—where such roads pass through village hamlets, but under no consideration at present with the funds, available elsewhere."

Certified correct copy of resolution.

What Mr. Tanner wishes to impress the public with is, that the Council approves of securing all the Trap Rock Screenings that is possible to secure and that the above resolution has no reference to the limit of applying the same to roads.

The Tule Marsh Murder

By NANCY BARR MAVITY

Story of a Missing Actress and the Taxing of Wits to Explain Her Fate

THE STORY THUS FAR:

Don Ellsworth's wife, formerly the famous actress Sheila O'Shay, disappears, leaving no trace. Dr. Cavanaugh, the great criminal psychologist learns that their married life has been very unhappy.

Peter Piper a reporter on the Herald, tries to see Dr. Cavanaugh. Instead he meets Barbara Cavanaugh, the attractive daughter, and finds that she was engaged to Don Ellsworth before his marriage.

An unidentified body is found in the tule marsh outside the city. It is burned beyond recognition, but from a small patch of scalp Dr. Cavanaugh identifies it as the body of Sheila O'Shay. Barbara faints when she hears him tell this to Peter. Peter, already half in love with her, is convinced that she knows something about the murder and his instinct is to protect her.

Mrs. Kane, Sheila O'Shay's waiting woman is arrested and admits that her mistress forced Don Ellsworth to marry her by threatening a breach of promise suit.

Peter and Dr. Cavanaugh search the boudoir of the murdered woman. The breach of promise papers have been taken, but they find a threatening letter signed "David Orme." Peter goes on the trail of Orme. He runs him down at an automobile tourists' camp. Orme is an irresponsible, temperamental, artistic and refined man who does not seem capable of committing murder. Finding Orme so helpless, Peter asks Dr. Cavanaugh to help him out at the trial. Dr. Cavanaugh agrees to examine Orme.

CHAPTER 34.

Peter closed Dr. Cavanaugh's office door behind him in a state of unaccustomed mental turbulence. He loafed along thehedge-bordered path which led from the separate side entrance of the office to the front driveway, chewing a twig which he had absent-mindedly plucked from the closely woven leaves of box.

There was something intimidating to ordinary folk about the detachment of science, the impersonal clarity of knowledge. Peter no longer thought of the doctor as an expert in a field which interestedPeter only as a source of copy on occasion. The psychiatrist loomed before his distorted mental vision as a marionette master pulling a hundred invisible wires. There had been a disturbing quality in his laughter—something Olympian and aloof, as if he alone knew what hidden paths they were following, as if they were all acting out a plot with the involuntary jerks of puppets while he sat behind the screen and held the script that gave meaning to their actions—held it by the power that came from understanding of the mysterious springs of human conduct.

Peter shook his head impatiently and tossed the twig away.

"I'd better go to bed and get about forty-eight hours of sleep," he muttered. "The pursuit of crime is beginning to tell on me."

Nevertheless, he continued to loiter by the side of the hedge. Were all the people in the world more or less "cracked", needing only a push to knock them off the narrow wall of normality, like Humpty Dumpty?

True, Orme might have killed Sheila O'Shay without being insane—and he might, on the other hand, be unbalanced without having killed Sheila O'Shay. There were no nearer to finding out why he had written that threatening letter, why he had changed his name and fled, why that flight had been so inconclusive, so easily abandoned, than they had been on the night when the letter was first found. And whatever Orme's relations with the dead woman might have been, they did not explain Ellsworth's unwillingness to have her disappearance made public, his purloining of the evidence of the contemplated breach of promise suit, nor Mrs. Kane's effort to prevent the identification of the body.

Despite weeks of headlines and front page stores, thousands of words thrown into type and out again, investigations and suspicions, the tule marsh mystery was as much a mystery as on the day when Jimmy first dubbed it "the best murder of the year."

Motive! The doctor was right. Without understanding what pulled the wires in people's heads, clues were nothing but a meaningless jumble And motives themselves were a queer mixture—even Peter's own.

What these people did and why they did it was, strictly speaking, none of his business. A month ago he did not know any of them, unless Sheila O'Shay's frequently published photograph in rotogravure sections and news pages constituted acquaintance. Yet here he was, losing sleep, forgetting meals, working unacounted hours of "overtime" in the attempt to find out who had killed Sheila O'Shay, and why.

It was partly sheer human curiosity and pride, an unwillingness to confess himself baffled; partly the desire, not only that a solution be found, but that the 'Herald' have a hand in finding it—and partly the need of setting Barbara somewhere in clear sunlight, of brushing aside from her, always, anxiety and doubt and trouble and folly.

It was because he cared so much for Barbara that Orme must have a fair show. There must be no lingering shadows, no thrusting of guilt upon a possibly innocent man. If there were any chance of that, Barbara, he knew as surely as if he had known her all her life, would throw caution to the winds, even to her own mortal hurt.

And she had need of caution—that much was abundantly clear. It flashed upon Peter with the force of complete conviction that though Barbara might conceivably have killed Mrs. Ellsworth—because anyone might conceivably do almost anything, perhaps by a fatal accident in circumstances that would not bear explanation—she could not have taken that body to the marsh and burned it.

With a sigh of audible relief, Peter seized firmly on the supposition that she was protecting someone else with her quixotic loyalty. She might even have known, or suspected, what was going to happen. But in either case, neither quixoticism nor loyalty would wipe out the ugly, hard legality of the phrase, "accessory to the fact."

Peter's whirring thoughts stopped short, as suddenly as the cutting off of a motor. He had drifted to the corner where the side path joined the main driveway, and saw Barbara herself at the curb, getting out of her car. He stood and watched her with sheer unthinking delight—delight in the sunshine that made of her hair a gleaming cap on her bare head; delight in the childlike unconsciousness and swift, agile grace of her movements. He smiled as he noted that she had evidently forgotten her handbag. She leaned far forward into the car, poised with one foot on the curb, and groped in the crevice between the seat cushion and the back upholstery.

Slowly she withdrew her hand and stood staring with bent head—not at a handbag, but at something that gleamed and flashed with a row of tiny green lights that caught the sun. It was a large amber comb of the Spanish type, flaring fan-shaped to the double row of emeralds that curved, fully six inches from end to end, across the top.

Peter thought that he had cried out, that he had run toward her; but there was only a slight choking sound in his throat, and his hand reached out automatically and clutched the hedge for support.

That comb was famous from a hundred descriptions, familiar from a hundred photographs. The story had been reprinted times without number—how a headstrong Balkan prince had stolen it from his family's royal collection for a woman's whim, and had been sequestered under guard for three years to keep him out of reach of his enchantress when the theft and its motive were discovered; how the woman had worn it triumphantly in her tawny, unbobbed hair ever since, declaring that if they wouldn't let her have the prince, she'd at least have the emeralds, and leaving the royal relatives to sputter helplessly.

It was the emerald comb of Sheila O'Shay.

Barbara held the huge, glittering ornament in her hand for a moment, her head drooping lower and lower. Then her face lifted. Peter saw her gaze dart from side to side, up and down the deserted, sun-drenched street.

He had never seen such utter, trapped terror on a human countenance. Her fingers wrenched frantically at the comb, breaking it tooth by tooth, jewel by jewel into fragments. Some of them dropped to the pavement, but she stooped to pick them up. Then she ran, her two laden hands pressed tight against her breast, to the sewer opening at the corner.

"Don't"! Peter cried out hoarsely but she did not hear him. He could not himself, have told whether he was protesting against her act or against the whole world in which such things could be—an instinctive, horrified denial of his senses.

He saw her kneel in the dry rubbish of the gutter and thrust her hands through the storm grating that covered the entrance to the sewer pipe. When she withdrew them, they were empty. She turned then, and ran back to the house as swiftly as she had come. Her skirt and her light colored stockings were streaked with grime from the gutter, but she made no effort to brush off the dust; she did not even look down. With that white tortured face, staring straight ahead, she fled up the driveway, passed within three feet of Peter without seeing him, and dashed into the house.

Bailieboro

BAILIEBORO, July 3 (Examiner Correspondence).—The weekly meetings of the Young People's League were brought to a close on Tuesday evening with a picnic at Wallace's Point. About fifty young people motored down.

A tempting supper was served, picnic style. After supper an exciting game of softball was played. Darkness brought the game to a close, both sides claiming victory.

The spacious lawns proved to be a delightful place for group games. The picnic in every respect was a huge success.

The League has had a very successful year, and the young people will look forward to the re-opening of the meetings in the fall.

Miss May Earl is the president of the League.

Local Team Defeated.

On Wednesday night the Bailieboro baseball team motored to Precious Corners, and were defeated 6-4 in a short but snappy exhibition game.

Due to the doubtful weather, the teams were slow in coming, and darkness put an end to the game at an inopportune time for the locals.

Bailieboro took a lead in the first inning, but this was overcome in the second inning by the homesters. A triple play was staged in the first inning by Bailieboro, Woods to Watt to Barnard to Deyell.

Unable to control the wet ball, Woods walked two and hit two others to allow the bulk of Precious Corners' runs.

The line-up:

Precious Corners—Jones, c; N. Dolley, p; E. Berry, 1b; McCullough, 2b; H. Garland, 3b; A. Dolley, ss; G. Rose, lf; R. Rose, rf; Harris, cf.

Bailie boro—Watt, c; Woods, p; Deyell, 1b; K. Barnard, 2b; J. Barnard, 3b; R. Rutherford, ss; B. Hanson, lf; A. Dawson, cf; S. Fry, rf.

Umpires—Rose and Woods.

WESTWOOD, July 3 (Examiner Correspondence).—The members of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Church held their annual quilting on Wednesday afternoon in the United Church dining hall. A very busy but enjoyable afternoon was spent, the ladies reaching their objective of completing eight quilts.

At five o'clock about forty sat down to a well-laden and tempting supper table, which was decorated with beautiful bouquets of cut flowers.

NEW YORK LIST IS IRREGULAR

Heavy Selling In Public Utility Shares Early Morning Trading.

RALLIES IN AFTERNOON.

NEW YORK, N.Y., July 3—(Canadian Press)—Heavy selling of the public utility shares, several of which dropped 2 to 6 points temporarily unsettled to-day's stock market, which was again pointed to higher ground. Curiously, the low prices of the day were recorded after the call money rate had dropped from 12 to 8 percent. But strong buying support made its appearance, particularly in the so-called "Morgan stocks" and the market was headed upward again in the early afternoon.

The mid-year stringency in call money, which sent the rate to 15 per cent. on two successive days this week, passed late yesterday when the "outside rate" was dropped to 14 per cent. and then dropped abruptly to 8 when a large volume of funds made its appearance. Funds were available in the "outside market" this afternoon as low as 6 per cent. Further indications of a definite easing in credit conditions were seen in the drop of ¼ of 1 per cent. In Bankers acceptances, the second within a week and the easier undertone for time money.

ACTIVE TRADING IN OIL SECTION

List Indicates No Definite Trend On Toronto Stock Exchange.

BEVERAGES LISTLESS.

TORONTO, July 3. (C.P.) — Although advances were well in excess of declines there was not sufficient trading to indicate any definite trend on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Oils bore a strong appearance, with Canadian moving up 2 1-2 points to 48 and McColl strengthening 1 1-2 points to 41 1-2.

International Nickel, despite a slight increase in trading, broke to 51 and held at 51 1-2, off 3-4. Loblaw 'A' was again active, advancing a further point to 21, while C.P.R. came out 1 1-2 points higher at 235 and Beatty Brothers appeared with 1 1-2 point appreciation at 45.

Liquor and industrial stocks were listless, with Walkers holding unchanged at 18 1-2 and Canadian Industrial alcohol weakened a point to a new low of 236, while Standard Steel dipped 2 to 84; Massey-Harris one to 56 and Service Stations equipment 1 to 67.

Grain Prices Higher Shortage Of Wheat

CHICAGO, Ills., July 3 (Canadian Press). — With Argentine wheat at a premium over United States for the first time this season, the wheat market here averaged higher to-day. drought complaints from most spring wheat districts north-west continued, but advances were checked by selling to minimize holiday risks to-morrow. Opening unchanged to ¾ cent higher, wheat afterward held near the initial figures. Corn, oats, and provisions were also firmer with corn starting ¼c to ⅝c up ,and subsequently gaining a little more.

Police orders have been issued that there is to be no parking on George Street, either side, between Charlotte and Smith Streets, from 12 o'clock noon till after the parade has finished on Thursday.

Parking may be had at the Central School grounds, behind the C.P.R. freight sheds, Sherbrooke and George Streets in the vacant lot, at King Edward Park, and all the side streets, but George Street MUST be kept clear.

Much Interest In Buhl Air Sedan

The people of Peterborough are evincing great interest in the Buhl air sedan at the Old Home Week airport on the Chemong road. While most people are familiar with the Moth type of plane, only a comparatively small number have had the opportunity to examine closely the large type passenger airplane.

The air sedan was flown to the city on Saturday night by Captain Earl Hand of the National Air Transport Company. Unfortunately the rough ground at the airport does not permit of passengers being carried by this large plane as had been originally planned, but Captain Hand, in view of the public interest, has decided to permit it to remain at the field for the remainder of the week.

The air sedan is of the cabin type carrying three passengers and the pilot. The inside furnishings compare favorably with those of the higher priced automobiles. The engine is a Wright Whirlwind of the type that carried Lindbergh on his Atlantic flight. Gasoline is carried in large tanks within the wings. Altogether the visit of this plane is unique in the history of flying in the city.

THREE AMENDMENTS.

your subjects demands legislation to secure that every citizen working or willing to work for the benefit of the community shall receive an income, including children's allowances, sufficient to meet the human needs of himself and his family, and demands measures aiming at the organization of the industrial system so that it shall provide for the needs of the community by nationalizing the key sources of economic power; namely, banking; importation of foodstuffs and raw materials, supplies of Industrial power, transport and land."

Maxton and Brockway, two of the sponsors of this amendment, are noted as the chief advocates of "Socialism in our time," their Independent Labor Party being somewhat impatient of the moderate attitude of the Labor party as a whole.

The Liberal amendment stands in the name of G. Lambert, member for South Molton, Deven. It declares the construction of a new battleship base at Singapore flouts the Kellogg Pact for outlawry of war, and that the construction which has been going on for years at that base should cease.

JAMES CORKERY RECALLS TOWN 54 YEARS AGO

Went West As Young Man to The Klondyke.

LIVES IN TORONTO.

Varied Career in Canada—Sees Many Changes Here

James Corkery is another Peterborough boy who left the old home town and made good. He is at present enjoying the joys of life as a retired gentleman in Toronto, having faced the uphill struggle to success and succeeded to such an extent that he is now on "Easy Street."

At the age of twenty-two years, which was fifty-four years ago in the history of Peterborough, Mr. Corkery felt the thrill of adventure in his blood and the urge of "Go West, young man," surged through his veins, so one fine day he left his home town for then the wilds of North Bay, where he accompanied J. W. Fitzgerald, another old Peterborough boy who was a surveyor, and laid out that district into townships.

Then came an era of transportation when the Liberal party, in control of the Government, had the idea to build a Georgian Bay branch of the Midland railroad. This road was to go to some point on Georgian Bay, and then boats would be used on the Great Lakes to Port Arthur, whence the line would be extended still west into Winnipeg and then pushing farther into the prairies as the population demanded.

Government Changed.

But this project never ripened into maturity, as the reins of power soon changed hands, and the line was extended north of Lake Nipissing into the Western provinces and eventually became that famous railroad now known as the Canadian Pacific. It was on the initial project that Mr. Corkery worked as a surveyor after his task in North Bay had been completed.

A few years later came the Klondyke gold rush, and so Mr. Corkery, still seeking adventure and the thrill of free money in the loose gravel seized him, so he trekked away up there into the north-west section of the country, where he remained for seven long years, after which he felt the desire to settle down.

So he returned to the east and went to Toronto, where his attention was engaged for some time in the milk business, which he carried on with a large degree of success. At present his home is at 400 Euclid Avenue in that city.

The Old Peterborough.

"Peterborough wasn't much of a place then," he said. "It was pretty small (referring to the time when he left some half a century ago). One of the greatest changes that has been noticed is the beautiful bridge over the river at Hunter Street. In his time the famous old wooden bridges with the high sides served the duty for a crossing.

"George Street wasn't much either, a lot of old shacks and roughcast houses, where little huckster shops were set up in place of the substantial brick buildings of to-day.

It was harder to get in and out of the city at that date also, as there was only the one railroad, the famous old Midland Railway, that served the community to the best of its ability for so many years.

Exhibition Park a Commons.

Another memory that is outstanding in his reminiscences of the old town was the commons where the Exhibition Park is now located. In his day, when he was a young man in Peterborough there was no vestige of a park in that section; it was merely a commons, where the boys used to congregate in their spare time and play scrub baseball and other games such as boys enjoy.

"Peterborough is certainly a fine place now," he said. "It is beautiful."

The party will stop at Sudbury, July 8 and 9, at Blind River July 10, and at Sault Ste. Marie July 11. The following week will be occupied in visiting Kenora and Fort Frances and Port Arthur . A brief visit will also be paid to Winnipeg.

Other stops on their itinerary are Sioux Lookout July 19, Minaki 20, Hearst and Kapuskasing 21 and 22, Cochrane 23. From there on the party will journey down to North Bay.

THE DANCE TO-NIGHT

The Social Event of the week and the best dance to have ever been conducted in this district.

The spacious floor of the Armouries can accommodate all who desire to attend. Every one will be delighted, as the music will be furnished by the Paladians direct from the Palace Theatre, Montreal, under the personal direction of Jerry Shea, the outstanding dance orchestra director in Canada.

This trio of clever dancing girls are sure to make a big hit at the feature dance of Old Home Week, which is being held in the ARMOURIES TO-NIGHT. In the upper left hand corner are Mme. Diagnault and Miss "Tony" La France. Mme. Diagnault is a solo dancer of the Capitol Theatre, and a student of the famous Russian Kosloff studios. She recently toured the United States with the French Opera Comique, and has appeared in some of the largest entertainments in Canada and the United States. Miss "Tony" La France is a student of Leonidoff, director of the Roxie Theatre in New York, and recently appeared on the stage in that metropolis. In the upper right is Miss Diagnault again. In the centre is another picture of Miss La France, while in the lower right is Miss Germaine, Capitol Theatre ballet dancer in Montreal.

Peterborough Won C.G.E. Plant Over Keen Competition

FOUR CITIES WERE IN RUNNING TO GET VALUABLE INDUSTRY NOW WORTH $2,000,000 YEARLY

Niagara Falls, Toronto and St. Catharines Lost Out in Fight.

GREAT ADVANCES

Building Activities Still Going On As Big Plant Expands.

D. C. DURLAND
President, Canadian General Electric Co., Limited

It was a "close call" for Peterborough in its campaign for the factory which was to become the nucleus of the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited. Any old-timers will remember the period forty years ago when Peterborough's livelihood sung mainly on its location in the midst of a thriving countryside. The plants which make it an industrial centre to-day were not then built. Peterborough was rural—but it had ambitions.

Then came word of a factory seeking a location. There was not in those days the organized scramble for attention which boards of trade, chambers of commerce, and municipal promotion departments are nowadays accustomed to stage for new industries. But there was competition—plenty of it.

Four cities were in the contest in which Peterborough won out nearly forty years ago. The prize was a $130,000 pay roll—and that, in those days, was a pay roll of substantial proportions.

Old-timers may remember the vague anxiety with which the company's decision was awaited. St. Catherines, Niagara Falls and Toronto were in the running. No one could guess which way the choice would go. But something—what it was probably no one remembers today—turned the scale in Peterborough's favor, and hither came the infant industry.

How much keener the competition would have been if the future had been read, no one may guess. To what lengths would Niagara Falls, St. Catherines, or even Toronto have gone to gain the decision if they had foreseen that it would involve a two million dollar pay roll within a single generation?

Possibly someone in Peterborough did foresee something of this sort, and gauged the effort to suit the prize. In any event, Peterborough the choice—a fact which helped greatly in putting this centre on the industrial map of Canada.

Back in December, 1888, a group of Canadian business men, sensing the need and the opportunity which was even then beginning to exist in the electrical field in Canada, held a meeting in Toronto and subscribed funds to finance an investigation into the practicability of establishing an electric light and power supply company in that city.

The meeting, and the subsequent company organization are not directly related to the present Canadian General Electric Company, Limited; for the company which was then formed (the Toronto Incandescent Electric Light Company) was later amalgamated with the Toronto Electric Light Company, which in turn was later absorbed into the Hydro system. Indirectly, however, that meeting of forty years ago had much to do with the establishment of Peterborough's leading industry; for it brought together, under the leadership of the late Senator Frederick Nicholls, the very group which was to constitute the original directorate of the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited.

Two years after this first meeting, in February, 1891, the same group organized the Toronto Construction and Electrical Supply Company, which led by definite steps to the Canadian General Electric Co. Thus, while the first organization was for the purpose of making available a supply of power, the second was to deal in the supplies required by users of that power supply. At first it did not manufacture—but that was only for a year.

Meantime another factor was at work, reaching out, all unaware, toward the development of Peterborough and of a great nation-wide organization. This second factor was the decision of the Edison General Electric Company of Sherbrooke, Quebec, that it would find a fuller future if located a few hundred miles further west—in some Ontario centre.

The First Buildings

In the year 1890, this Edison subsidiary entered into negotiations with St. Catherines, Niagara Falls, Toronto and Peterborough. The eventual choice was Peterborough. An immediate start was made on construction work. During the winter of 1890—91, Machine Shop No. 8—one-third of its present size, was built. It was completed, and productive operations were started, in May, 1891. During the same year No. 4 Compound Building and No. 2 Wire Building were constructed and occupied. The following year, 1892, No. 6 Power House was built.

And in this same year, 1892, the two original streams, whose sources have been identified above, converged in the formation of the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited.

The Toronto concern, in its brief year of life, had built a remarkable business in electrical equipment. But it was not a producer. At hand were the producing facilities of the Edison company, lately moved to Peterborough. The mergence of the two into a single institution under a new name was the most natural step—and there was no delay or hesitancy in taking it.

From that point on, the record of the company has been one of steady progress. Up to the turn of the century a number of small extension were made from year to year, culminating in 1900 with the purchase of the Porcelain Works. In 1901 the Machine Shop was doubled in size. In 1902 an extension was built to the Water Works Plant and taken over by the C.G.E. for the development of auxiliary power. In 1905 came No. 7 Armature Building, and in 1906 No. 12 Motor Building was erected. The next unit of consequence was No. 16 Shipping and Stores Building, which was erected in 1912, together with the Transformer Sub-Station.

Late Expansions

During the war there was a let-up in major building activities; but in 1920 the Machine Shop was increased by the addition of 300 feet to its length, while the Industrial Motor Building and Fractional Horsepower Motor Building was also constructed. In 1922 the old Power House was abandoned, and a new Power House built on the east side of the river. In 1925 the present Office Building was completed, followed in 1927 by the Impregnation Building and garages. In 1923 the new Paint Shop and Oil Storage Building was started, and was completed during the Winter. This year the large new Punch Press has been built, together with several smaller buildings, while there is now under construction a new Power House and Sub-Station. Meantime, the frontage of the plant has been completely changed. Metal fences have been built around the works, trackage has been changed, and several miles of new sidings have been laid. Works Avenue has been run through from the east to the west end of the plant, with sewerage, water, gas and air lines. The march of progress and development, interrupted during the war, is now more strongly visible than ever.

At the present time floor space in buildings aggregates 744,000 square feet; and these buildings, together with the necessary sidings, etc., cover an area of approximately 46 acres.

Even in its earlies days the Peterborough plant was considered of remarkable size. As long ago as 1904 it was described as "far larger than any other electrical company in the colonies, and for variety of prducts probably has but one equal even in England itself." Its payroll, "even in dull July" numbered between four and five hundred, and the plant was running 24 hours a day.

Staff Much Larger

With the advance in mechanical methods since those days, and the consequent vast increase in the productive capacity of each employee, the increase of staff from the 1894 total of four to five hundred to the present total of approximately 1800, means considerably more than the figures alone would indicate. Possibly a better idea of the growth can be obtained from a comparative table of average annual wages paid to Peterborough employees of the company.

1891-1900	$130,000
1900-1910	338,000
1910-1920	780,000
1920-1928	1,470,000
1929, at the rate of	1,930,000

Even this, however, falls short of giving a complete picture of the development of the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited, since it applies to the growth of only one division of the company's manufacturing activities. Back in the early days, of course, the Peterborough constituted the firm's only manufacturing plant. To-day, however, the C.G.E. organization comprises five large factories, while branch offices are maintained at Halifax, Sydney, St. John, Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Hamilton, London, Windsor, Cobalt, South Porcupine, Winnipeg, Calargy, Edmonton, Vancouver, Nelson and Victoria.

Products of the company vary all the way from the immense generators, motors and switchboards produced in Peterborough, to the almost microscopic filaments used in tiny flashlight lamps—with "everything electrical" in between these extremes.

Many Products

Multiplicity of products has always been one of the outstanding policies of the company. One comment of twenty-five years ago, concerning this, has already been quoted. The same writer, in "The Electrical Engineer," New York, issue of Sept. 19th, 1894, had this to say further on the subject:

To some persons it may seem that the variety is not peculiarly commendable, and that greater success might attend a narrower scope of operations. But the truth is that, isolated as Canada is on the one side by vast distances and on the other by political barriers, it behooves a company that would take proper care of its market, to make many things in which there is little or no profit simply for the welfare of its customers, who may want unusual goods at any odd moment, and who would be in dire distress if they often had to wait on trans-Atlantic or trans-frontier replenishment with its uncertainties of exact execution of orders. Moreover, the Canadian General Electric Company, besides being of necessity a 'universal producer,' has by different processes of accretion become the owner of all the best things that we on this side have designed or invented electrically. . . The Edison patents belong to the company; so also do many of the Thomson-Houston, as well as some of Prof. Thomson personally, of Mr. J. J. Wood, and of other leading American inventors and parent companies. It is needless to point out that, starting with such a basis, the Canadian General Electric Company as it exists to-day has got into the field very economically and advantageously."

Passing time has shown how accurate was this writer's estimate of the situation. In lamps and lighting equipment, in electrical domestic "servants," in radio receivers and equipment, and in all the vast range of industrial electrical requirement, the C.G.E. trade mark is normally the most familiar and the most frequently seen.

Prevision Borne Out

To an eastern company which previsioned Ontario as the motivating centre of electrical Canada, and to a group of eight substantial business leaders, who, although previously unconnected with electrical enterprise, foresaw the future field and its requirements—to these the City of Peterborough and the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited, both owe much of the credit for the position they hold today.

"Unconnected," as used above, is perhaps a slight exaggeration. One of the eight was president of a telegraph company. For the remainder, however, insurance, banking, investment and transportation were the principal pursuits—as is indicated in the following citation of their names and stations taken from the issue of "The Electrical Engineer" previously quoted:

W. R. Brock, president, director of the Toronto General Trusts Co. and the British Canadian Loan and Investment Co.; H. P. Dwight, first vice-president, president, Great Northwestern Telegraph Co.; Frederic Nicholls, second vice-president and general manager, director of the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Co.; W. D. Matthews, director of the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Dominion Bank of Canada; George A. Cox, president, Bank of Commerce and director of the Canada Life Assurance Co.; Robert Jaffray, president, Toronto Real Estate Investment Co., vice-president the Land Security Co.; Hugh Ryan, director of the Imperial Bank of Canada and the Trusts Corporation of Ontario; J. L. Kerr, Q.C., vice-president North American Life Insurance Co., and director British Canadian Loan and Investment Co."

Far-seeing—yet it is doubtful whether any of the eight envisioned the full quota of growth which was to come to their infant enterprise. Six of the number, however, remained to see the project develop into a nation-wide organization—the leader to-day as it was then in a nation whose name is fast becoming synonymous with that of electricity itself, for the tremendous acceleration of its electrical developments.

Still Largest Unit

First to be built, the Peterborough factory is still the largest of the five producing units of the Canadian General Electric Co. Limited. That statement is a very significant one when it concerns a company whose nation-wide organization embraces 4,500 employees drawing annual pay of five and a half million dollars. The varied production is alone an index of the Canadian General Electric Company's enormous organization. Merely to give group headings—under each of which come dozens or even hundreds of items—produces the following impressive list: motors, generators, transformers, transmission equipment, wiring devices, Hotpoint electrical appliances, Edison Mazda lamps, Radiolas, radiotrons, Tungar battery chargers, Telechron clocks, and a host of miscellaneous electrical items incapable of inclusion under group headings.

At the company's Edison Mazda works in Toronto are producted the majority of the quality lamps used in Canada. The Ward Street Works in the same city produce lamp bases, wiring devices, and the familiar range of Hotpoint servants for the home, produce transformers, electric steam generators and castings. Canadian Allis-Chalmers, a subsidiary of Canadian Generl Electric Co. Limited, with a factory at Montreal, produces hydraulic turbines, penstocks, pumps and mining machinery.

With the continued progress in electrical developments, the range of products is constantly increasing; and however great the progress that the company has made, the future holds out prospects of even great expansion. In view of the key position held by the Peterborough factory, this fact is important, for it links the future of industrial Peterborough closely with the future of the entire electrical industry in Canada through that industry's outstanding producer, the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited.

Jabs and Jottings as Picked Up by an Examiner Reporter

Wagon Caught In Gates

A strange incident occurred at the C. N. R. crossing on Charlotte street the other day when a delivery rig of a local bakery was stopped under one of the railway gates which when it was lowered caught on the top of the wagon. The driver and the gate keeper noticing the complication each sprang to the rescue. The gate keeper raised the gates and the driver drove the wagon around the corner out of danger.

Canine Registered

All comers to Peterborough appear at the registration headquarters to be registered. On Saturday a canine wandered in with his master who had registered and who also asked to have his dog's name recorded.

Making "Whoopee"

The men from the Toronto Scottish made "Whoopee" on Saturday morning while strolling around the streets of the town. About ten of the Kilties purchased toy saxophones and wandered around the city forming an impromptu jazz band.

Courtesy Cars

It is good sign when at the start of Old Home Week, local drivers are courteous enough to give the Old Boys and Girls a ride. Two drivers were noticed on Saturday stopping their cars and asking the visitors if they were going far and giving them transportation to their destination. One local truck driver who was on his way to the exhibition grounds with an empty truck stopped every little way on his trip down George street and invited members of the Toronto Scottish to ride with him until he had a complete truck load, when he sped away with his merry crowd singing at the tops of their voices.

Benches for Visitors

Mayor Denne has provided for the comfort of visitors in an individual way by placing two long seats, such as are used for lawns, in front of his Water street store. Here the visitors may rest and watch the traffic on the market, which is one of the oldest spots in the history of the city.

Old Home Week Eggs

Even the hens of Peterboough County have that "Old Home Week feeling." Three huge eggs which were laid by single comb leghorns, owned by William Forsyth of Douro and purchased from the Cooksville Poultry Farm were brought in to the Examiner Saturday. The eggs measured approximately eight and a half inches in overall length and six and a quarter in girth. These were laid within the last ten days and show that this flock is making the best preparations to supply better eggs during the week of celebration to show the returning Old Boys and Girls how Peterborough hens have improved in egg laying.

Rest Room for Ladies

One of the conveniences for women visitors for Old Home Week will be the Rest Room conducted at the Simcoe St. rooms of the Holy Name Society, St. Alphonsus Lyceum, by the Catholic Women's League. The spacious lower floor hall has been prepared for this purpose, and visitors may use it at any time.

TO ADMINISTER DIOCESE

The Rev. P. Costello announced at the Masses at St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday morning that he had received word from Archbishop O'Brien to the effect that the Archbishop, besides being appointed as coadjutor Bishop, with the right of Succession, to Archbishop Spratt of Kingston diocese, has also been appointed by the Holy Father as Apostolic Administrator of the diocese of Peterborough.

This means, explained Father Costello, that Archbishop O'Brien will make his residence in Peterborough until such time as a new Bishop is appointed here. "That may be three months or it may be three years", concluded Father Costello.

OLD TIME TEACHERS.

Some of the names of the old-time teachers of the Separate School teachers of the city have been kindly supplied to us by John Corkery, who was for forty wears secretary of the Separate School Board. They include the names of Madam MacGillis, the Misses Convell, Cutler, O'Connell, Leonard, Tracy, Brady, Coleman, Neagle, K. Delaney, McNamee, and Messrs. . Finn, Bruder, Donovan, Matthews, McIlmoyle, McEntee and Moyna.

Until Last Dog is Hung

A young man at the Registration Office was asked by one of the attendants how long he was going to stay in Peterborough. "Until the last dog is hung", he answered blithely.

First Plane Ride

Harold Cook of Park street was the first resident to make the airplane ascension to to look down on Peterborough from an aerial angle.

Midnight Party

At midnight on Saturday evening, closely verging to the Sabbath, Webber Turner centred a ring of hilarious-voiced people who were singing "Good Night, Ladies", as they circled about the decoration on the corner of Hunter and Park streets. This is a unique affair that simulates an old-time bit of life. A large iron sugaring-kettle hangs suspended by chains in the centre of three rough tree-trunks. Underneath, electric lighting makes an artificial fire and a sign reads: "We've Kept the Home Fires Burning."

Triangle Lighted

The triangle of the Association suspended in front of the Y. M. C. A. on George street blazed forth with red and white lights on Saturday night for the first time in many years. The triangle has been reconditioned with paint and new lights for Old Home Week and will shine its welcome to the many friends of the Association in Peterborough during the week.

Vandals At Work.

On reporting for duty the other morning, the life-guard at Inverlea Park discovered that destructive marauders had been at work. Some individual with a mean turn of mind had hacked a large hole in the bottom of the boat used by the life-guard in the course of his work. The police are endeavoring to apprehend the perpetrator of this wanton destruction.

Own Entertainment

At the corner of Park and Charlotte streets, a great deal of entertainment was provided during the parade Monday morning when three gentlemen garbed in outlandsh clothes proceeded to add to the entertainment by doing some funny stunts of their own. Although the onlookers accepted them as paid entertainers, they turned out to be two Old Home Week visitors, J. R. Baker, Boiswain, Manitoba and W. S. Campbell of Toronto and M. W. Lyle of Peterborough.

Illuminated Lawn

A striking feature among the Old south end is the illuminated lawn of Wilfred Jones, Gordon Avenue. A number of electric lights concealed in Chinese lanterns produce a pretty effect, and give a bright and glowing appearance to the pre. ises.

S. G. Faulknernone of the Toronton Old Boys to return to his old city after an absence of thirty-four years. In 1895, after living in Peterborough for five years he decided to go west and went to Vancouver. One thing that is outstanding in his mind the day he left, as he told The Examiner, is Frank Matthews saying, "What the dickens are you going out in that country for where it rains all the time? That seemed to strike his memory more than anything else.

"You surely have a beautiful city here", was his comment on the old home town. "Things have certainly changed since I left here quite a while ago. I certainly would hardly recognize the old place."

CHOIR HOLDS ANNUAL PICNIC

Members of George Street United Church Take Part in Outing.

GOOD PROGRAM.

The choir of George Street United Church held their annual picnic at Lakefield last week. A splendid dinner was enjoyed, served by the Ladies' Aid of Regent Street United Church after which a program of sports was carried out.

The prize winners were:

Young ladies' race — First, Miss Lilian Naish, second, Miss Evelyn Miller. Ladies' rolling pin contest—Mrs. H. M. Yelland, Mrs. Clarence McKee. Men's Race — Kenneth Kemp, Trevor Miller. Horse shoe contest—J. Spencer, F. J. Redpath.

A soft ball game was staged with the Sopranoes and Tenors lined up against the Altos and Basses. The former won by a very close margin, the score being 12-11. The choir was accompanied by the Musical committee and the orchestra of the Sunday School. A very hearty vote of thanks to the members of the Ladies' Aid of Regent Street United Church was moved by Mr. A. V. Lillow and seconded by Mr. G. F. Liddle and presented to them by W. H. Cunningham, president of choir. Rev. Mr. Kemp on behalf of the Ladies' Aid replied.

BISHOP J. F. SWEENY CONDUCTS SERVICE

Sacred Rite is Performed in St. Mark's' Church, Otonabee.

The Right Rev. J. F. Sweeny, Bishop of Toronto, performed the sacred rite of Confirmation in St. Mark's church, Otonabee on Sunday afternoon, when the rector, Rev. J. L. Hughes presented four adult candidates from St. George's Church. The service was prefaced by that of shortened evensong taken by the Rector. Miss G. Allen presided at the organ.

The Bishop in his opening remarks referred to the new frontals used in the Church that day for the first time. These are the gift of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Church, the work having been done by some of the members. His Lordship based his address on the words of the hymn, "My God Accept My Heart This Day." He also made reference to the beautiful picture of Holman Hunt, "The Light of the World." Hymns appropriate for the occasion were sung.

Members of St. George's choir and congregation were present, transportation being made by Rev. J. L. Hughes, Messrs Jack Cuff, Arthur Hall, H. Yade, J. Howard and Taylor. Rev. Canon Baynes Reed, Chaplain to the Toronto Scottish Regiment was also present at the service.

REV. DR. JOHN INKSTER PREACHES AT ST. PAUL'S

Chaplain of Toronto Scottish Delivers Helpful and Inspiring Address

St. Paul's Presbyterian Church was honoured on Sunday by the presence, in the pulpit, of Rev. Dr. John Gibson Inkster, of Knox Church Toronto, and chaplain of the Toronto Scottish Regiment, visitors to the city for the week-end. Large congregations heard the renowned pastor, whose sermons at both diets of worship were helpful and inspiring.

Leaders and Power

The reverend gentleman took for his subject "The Leader Who Is Not Always Allowed to Lead", taking as his text the words of verse 8, Acts 1, wherein the chosen to receive the Holy Ghost shall receive power to lead others and become witnesses unto God unto the uttermost part of the earth.

Dr. Inkster stressed the need for repentance, with faith — some churches deemed repentance as not an issue towards a firmer relation to Christ Jesus, they required only faith; our church put its trust and hope in the doctrine of repentance and faith—both were necessary towards a fuller power to pursue our daily walk and life with its many problems and anxieties.

The Prophetic Signs

In the evening Dr. Inkster's subject was "Two Signs of the Times—Transportation and Science." The text for this theme was found in Daniel 12, 4. The speaker expressed his belief in the Bible as prophetic. Transportation, with the increasing speed on land, sea and in the air was foretold, as was knowledge of every nature on the increase. The laws of destruction were leading the constructive tendencies. Where would it end? asked Dr. Inkster. These dispensations were bound to come to an end. The main thought, he said, must be that God rules and guides our destinies; and with reading of His Holy Word and taking Him with us day by day could we expect to prosper and live a life of usefulness to all mankind.

The music was appropriate, the services being also attended by many former members home for this special occasion, Mr. James Dutton extending a welcome to all.

T. E. BRADBURN, JOHN CORKERY AND W. J. GREEN WERE PLAYERS ON THE FIRST LACROSSE TEAM

Game Was Introduced in 1872, Coming From Millbrook.

PRACTICED IN MORNINGS

First Meeting in Johnston's Tailor Shop, Water Street.

Of the original Peterborough Lacrosse Club three of its members are still living here. They are T. E. Bradburn ,ex-M.L.A., John Corkery, former postmaster in Peterborough, and William J. Green, city tax collector.

The club was organized in 1872 in Johnston's tailor shop on Water Street, somewhere immediately north of the Sun Life building and Crown Apartments. The game was only slightly known here, but Millbrook had a star team, inluding Sam Hughes, whom destiny was directing to the high responsibility of the Ministry of Militia during the war of 1914-1918, his brothers John and James, and other players named McBain, Hetherington, and McCartney.

Millbrook had been interested in the game for five or six years before Peterborough took it up, and it was actively introduced here by Robert J. Lee, who had played for a year in the Cavan village.

At the organization meeting Bob Lee was elected captain and Tom Quincy secretary. Quincy was a clerk in Robert Hamilton's hardware store, which was situated two or three doors south of the premises now occupied by Bond's drug store. Among those who attended were John Corkery and Billy Green, and these reminiscences may be regarded as their joint contribution, although the interview was given by Mr. Corkery.

First Game in 1872.

The Peterborough team adopted the name "Red Stockings," possibly because that was the distinguishing item of their uniforms. As the club roster attracted quite a number of the young men of the town there was ample material for several teams and so it came about in the spring of 1872 that the Red Stockings and the "Blue Rosettes,' 'a second team drawn from the club, staged the first game of lacrosse in this community.

The teams were as follows:

Red Stockings—T. S. Quincy, captain; T. Maloney, T. E. Bradburn, John Corkery, W. A. Sanderson, Harry LeBrun, G. B. Sproule, W. C. Spence, and Alexander Elliott.

Blue Rosettes — Charles Mallov, captain; Patterson, C. McKercher, Duchesneau, W. Croft, Jim Dolan, Nap Lemay, Bob Lee, A. Robinson and W. Shaw.

The Red Stockings won by three straight games, and later in the season the first Peterborough lacrosse club appeared on a foreign field when those pioneering Petes went to Millbrook and were defeated by three games in a row. The local team was composed of Quincy, LeBrun, T. E. Bradburn, Croft, John Corkery, J. Dolan, Duchesneau, C. Mallov, Lee, W. Shaw, Spence and Sanderson.

Practised in Dewy Morn.

The first lacrosse team turned out for practice in the morning from about 5 to 6 o'clock or later. All that was required of them industrially was that they report at their respective stores at 7a.m.; for most of them were clerks and the hours of the clerk in the seventies were long and usually full of work . The clerks arrived before the "boss," took down the shutters which were cumbersome slat affairs, cleaned the lamp glasses, filled the lamps with oil, trimmed the wicks, swept up, and generally made themselves useful . And they had to work until 7 and 8 o'clock in the evening, leaving no time for athletic diversions.

Long Working Days.

Merchants believed then in keeping their stores open, and anyway there wasn't much else to do but work. Hence, twelve and thirteen hour days were the established custom. Of course, the clerks could go out about 8 a.m. for breakfast, and were otherwise well treated, but there was no yielding in the first years to the requirements of lacrosse. Some years later the town used to close up its stores for the afternoons of 1½ games.

And while the seniors were finding their feet and learning the technic of the game and the art of stickhandling, some of the boys were watching them, as for instance Jim Stratton, H. Uin, Harry Phelan, Henry Pengelly, W. Morgan, E. McCabe, J. McGregor, N. Caissie, Arthur Rountree, Jewett, and others. So apt were they(that they went down to Millbrook and partly redeemed the name of Peterborough by trouncing the village juniors and holding their own in several fights that broke out. Then they wound up the day with an evening trip to Lindsay and another victory.

Reorganized in 1880

The team carried on until the end of that decade, but interest wore thin because the game was not generally established in this district. Reorganization in 1880 was productive of new enthusiasm, and in 1881 Peterborough won the Gildersleeve Cup in Kingston. That team included Mick Halpin, Kit Rutherford, Dod Fortye, Billy Rudkins, and others. About that time Harry LeBrun was elected president of the Dominion Lacrosse Association, an appointment that stimulated interest throughout Central Ontario. Then began a long period of victories, battles up and down the Trent territory and often far beyond it.

John Corkery hung up his stick about 1880. "Evvie" Bradburn was also through, and Billy Green was definitely included among the spectators. But they had done their bit for Peterborough athletics as promoters of the game which for several generations stirred the blood and usually the passions of the whole community, men and women alike.

And in turning over that page once more let us stop to wonder at the strange aspect George Street must have presented on a summer morning as the lacrosse team, fresh from practising on the Market Square started off for the wooden-shuttered stores in which they worked. Two rows of stout wooden fronts, barred and bolted, symbols of their business age and its seeming stagnation!

GENERAL ELECTRIC
Refrigerator

There's no longer any need to say "I'd love to have an electric refrigerator but there's no place for it in my small kitchen."

Some one of the General Electric models will fit into the kitchen or hall space you have available. These refrigerators, because of their simple compact mechanism, placed up on top, out of the way, require less floor space than other refrigerators yet have even greater food storage area.

They are different from all other refrigerators, actually "years ahead" in design. They are entirely automatic—remarkably quiet and they never need to be oiled. Among the 250,000 users of General Electric Refrigerators, not one of them has spent a dollar for service or repairs.

Each General Electric Refrigerator keeps food temperature always well below the danger line of 50 degrees. Its easily accessible temperature control governs the speed of freezing ice cubes or frozen desserts.

Telephone now for our new illustrated booklet. Come in when you can and let us show you the new all-steel models which will not warp. You can buy on deferred payments.

MASONS HOLD ANNUAL PARADE

Stirling and Madoc Pastors Exchange Pulpits On Sunday.

ANNUAL PICNIC HELD

STIRLING, July 3 (Examiner Correspondence).—The Masonic brethren of the local lodge held their annual church service on Sunday at St. Paul's United Church. Rev. Mr. Rowland was the preacher, and took text, "Eph. iii., 14: "The perfect man," being his theme.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Vandervoort, of Toronto, assisted the choir at this service. Mr. Vandervoort sang "Does Jesus Care," and Mrs. Vandervoort, "Beside the still waters He leadeth thee," also taking the solo part in the anthem, "The Day of Penticost." The evening service at St. Paul's was cancelled on account of the illness of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Rowland.

Exchange Pulpits.

The services at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday were conducted by the Rev. F. G. Marshall for his text, "Eph. iii., 14: "The perfect man," being his theme. Mr. Marshall is pastor of St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, Madoc, he and the Rev. A. N. Reid having exchanged for the day.

Hold Picnics.

The Sunday schools of St. John's Anglican Church and St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church held their annual picnics on Monday, the former at Weller's Bay and the latter at Oak Lake.

Services To Alternate.

On Sunday, July 7, the service in St. Andrew's Church, Stirling, will be in the morning and St. Andrew's, West Huntingdon, in the evening, and for the next two months the services will alternate in the churches. The minister, Rev. A. N. Reid, is leaving this week for two months' holiday.

Attend Convention.

A number of the members of the Stirling Women's Institute attended the annual district convention of the West Hastings Women's Institute held at the Sidney Baptist Church, Holloway, on Thursday, June 27.

The morning session was devoted to hearing of branch reports and dealing with communications from the Department of Agriculture. At noon a lunch was served by the local branch. Miss Keitha Lloyd gave a demonstration in basketry.

The officers for the ensuing year were all those of 1928 returned by acclamation. Mrs. Deviney of Northumberland County addressed the convention and gave much information on Federated Institutes. Mrs. Yates, of Toronto, gave an interesting address on Institute relief work.

Readings were given by Mrs. Jeffrey of Bay Side Institute, and Mrs. A. E. Dobbie of Stirling, and solos by Misses Prest and Rose of Sidney, and Mrs. J. B. Butler of Stirling. The sessions were ably presided over by Mrs. Grass, the president.

Among the activities of West Hastings W. I. is the responsibility for the upkeep of the furnishing of a domitory in the Children's Shelter at Belleville, and recently a brass plate was placed on the door by the District Institute.

Next year the convention will be held at Wallbridge.

Attend Examinations.

Miss Hume attended the examinations held in Belleville by a representative of the Toronto Conservatory of Music on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week, with three of her pupils. Miss Frances McKeown, of Mount Pleasant, passed her primary examination; Miss Dreneida Richardson of Ridge Road, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. Richardson, passed in elementary piano; and Rhea Heath, daughter of Mr and Mrs. N. A. Heath, passed her introductory examination, the latter two securing honors.

MARRIED COUPLE ARE ENTERTAINED

Many Useful Gifts Are Presented To Young Couple.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

YOUNG'S POINT, July 3. — On Friday evening Miss Laura McFarlane entertained about thirty friends and relatives at her home in honor of her niece, Mrs. William Hamblin, formerly Doreen Johnston, of Lakefield, whose marriage took place on Tuesday last.

During the evening a tiny bride and groom (little Ruth Johnston, sister of the bride, and Pat Foley of Toronto), entered the room which was prettily decorated with streamers and spring flowers, and centred with a large white bell, drawing a wagon in which were a number of pretty and useful gifts, for the bride and groom.

Mrs. Dave Darling read a short address containing the good wishes of those present, when the gifts had been displayed, the groom on behalf of the bride, spoke a few words of thanks and appreciation.

The remainder of the evening was spent in music and dancing, after which a dainty lunch was served.

Among those present were: Capt. and Mrs. Johnston of Lakefield; Mr. and Mrs. Walter of London; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Johnston of Young's Point; Mrs. Joseph Foley and son, Pat, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Dave Darling, of Young's Point; Misses Clara and Kathleen Young, Bridget Walsh, Mary Young, Margaret Young, Veronica and Mary Johnston, and Ruth Johnston of Lakefield; Miss Irene Young, and Messrs. Frank Carroll, Austin Walsh, Charlie Young and Bernard Johnston.

AGREEMENT IS SIGNED.

LONDON, July 2.—London morning papers to-day said the much talked of agreement between British and German film groups had been signed with involved capital amounting to approximately 60,000,000 pounds sterling, or $300,000,000.

The new alliance is said to be between the British Talking Pictures, Ltd., and Klangfilms Tobis of Berlin and Amsterdam, the aim being to "establish a United European front against domination of American interests."

YEARS WHEN ASHBURNHAM WALKED ALONE

R. D. ROGERS WAS FIRST REEVE AND THE ONLY POSTMASTER OF VILLAGE OF ASHBURNHAM

Fortune Once Smiled Upon 'The Scotch Village Across the River.'

LOCAL SPORTS MECCA.

Two Communities Have Been Merged in Cityhood For 25 Years.

Once upon a time, in the misty phraseology of reminiscence and tradition, the industrious and progressive Scots of old Ashburnham used to dream of the day when the city that was to stride the Otonabee would lean the more reavily on their eastern bank. Fortune indeed smiled in their direction for a few heartening years, what with first families, fine residences, industries, a fleet of steamboats, a railway terminal and a persuasive air of substance and security that seemed to warrant their ambitions and sanguine expectations.

But fortune is ever fickle, and her favorite of today is tomorrow neglected. Wind and ice severed the railway, and the commercialization of electricity and its profitable transmission tolled the passing of the primitive era of the direct use of water power, which had turned the wheels in the row of factories along the east side of the river above and below the Hunter Street bridge. Those years gradually dimmed Ashburnham's hopes, and while clinging to her separate municipal identity and spurning the union which Peterborough desired, she looked with resignation across the river at the quickening expansion of her neighbour.

Individuality Lingers

Today the two communities have been merged in cityhood for twenty-five years, and although the erstwhile antagonisms have faded out of our relations and we are wholeheartedly "all for one, and one for all", Ashburnham has not quite forgotten its past and still reacts, perhaps feebly and hesitantly, to its ancient sense of spiritual individuality and physical separateness from the folks across in the older Peterborough.

"The Scotch Village"

Originally part of the township of Otonabee it came to be known almost one hundred years ago, in the twenties and thirties, as "Scotch village", because of the Scotish nativity of most of the earliest settlers. Then because of its political affiliation with that part of the county it was called Peterborough East; but this name was changed to Ahburnham in 1859, at the time of incorporation as a village, in honor of the Burnham family to whom nearly all the land upon which the village stood originally belonged. Then when it threw in its lot with Peterborough it was designated the fifth ward or East Peterborough. Nowadays some of the older residents refer to it among themselves as the "Scotch Village", and other of a younger generation reveal an affection for the old name of Ashburnham.

R. D. Rogers First Reeve

The first reeve was R. D. Rogers and the other members of the initiatory council were A. B. Downer, Donald Sutherland and Henry Bennett. In the years 1860 and 1862 F. Armstrong was chairman of the administration, and R. D. Rogers was again reeve for the years 1861-3-4. In 1865 A. C. Dunlop held the office. John Burnham was Reeve for years in the eighties. The village school board in 1889 was: Harry Calcutt, chairman, A. Ingram, Peter Glover, F. Adams and J. J. Rooney. The treasurer of the village was A. H. Peck, father of E. A. Peck, M. P. In 1884 Mr. Peck was treasurer, John Wood was clerk, Absalom Ingram was collector of taxes and Jonathan Stephenson was assessor. The population then was 1308 and the assessment $360,000. John Burnham, reeve in 1884, was also member of Parliament, having been elected in 1878 and again in 1882.

Only One Postmaster

Ashburnham's first and only postmaster was R. D. Rogers. He kept charge of it in his store, the first brick one, built in 1856 at the corner of Hunter Street and Driscoll Terrace. It was in his employ that Col. J. Z. Rogers, afterwards postmaster in Peterborough, probably learned the rudiments of the duties he fulfilled so long. Mr. R. D. Rogers resigned the postmastership to contest the riding in a federal election, but was defeated. No postmaster was appointed in his place, and from that time the Peterborough office served both sides of the river.

Of the industries along the water front Ed. Wand's planing mill is the solitary survivor. Some of the others were demolished and others were removed by fire. R. D. Rogers' stone mill near the east end of the Hunter Street bridge still stands solid, but silent, the stoutest of its fellows that lined the old raceway and tapped its water for the power to turn their pulleys.

Dam and Raceway

A wooden dam, of which a dilapidated pier or two still point its course across the river about the foot of Murray Street, caught up the water for two raceways, one on the west and the other on the Ashburnham side. Once familiar features of this east side raceway remain for those who remember them. In the bed of it a tennis court has been rolled out by an athletic club of the Quaker Oats Company, a secluded sylvan green amidst trees most of which have sprung up since the obsolescence of the old flour mill.

This waterway was probably built by Hon. Z. Burnham for his grist mill, which was latterly operated by J. B. McAllister and was finally bought by the Quaker Oats Company.

Other factories along the river were served by flumes from the main raceway. Some of them may be traced even now in the grassy outlines that may be traced even now in the grassy outlines that may be seen from the Hunter Street bridge, but at Ed Wand's mill many of the wooden ribs of the rack, which caught floating timbers and prevented them from passing into the water wheels, are leaning in their old position, and other sections of this flume have been unintentionally preserved at the ground floor of the factory.

Centre of Village Life

The raceway crossed under Hunter Street and tailed off to the river along the east side of Riverside Park. Today's generation, which has grown up in the glare of electric lights, can only slightly imagine the industrial conditions before generators and other electrical apparatus were brought to their present efficiency. It should also be remembered that the new Hunter Street bridge has virtually obscured a riparian section which was the very centre of the old industrial life of the village.

West of R. D. Rogers' flour mill, which in its day boasted the newest milling process, was a lumber mill operated by J. Z. Rogers. Near the river was Marcello Mowry's foundry, which was afterwards known as Mowry and Forsythe's. Its products were threshing machinery and other farm implements, and as an example of the labor expedients in a day that knew not gasoline the foundry actually turned out a churn which was designed to be driven by "dog power", that is by the attachment of a treadmill for the unhappy dog to romp on.

Clarke's tannery was on the south side of the bridge where the Rapid Tool Company was more recently located. Then there was a four storey furniture factory owned by Lindsay and Sheldon, and later bought by G. Walter Green after year's of vacancy. It was lost to Mr. Green by fire.

A Furniture Factory

Isaac Hope had a wood-turning shop, and Martin McFadden occupied an upper story for the manufacture of furniture, a reminder of the era of the independent manufacturer before the large companies absorbed him and all his little competitors. Cope's factory was just south of William Wand's sash and door factory.

William Faint's woollen mill was south of the bridge and was powered by the raceway on the west side of the river. Many a citizen will remember the cable that stretched across the river under the old Hunter Street bridge, driving the machinery in Faint's mill.

Owen's pump factory was close by Wand's, but was of comparatively brief existence. Sedgwick's hotel, on the south side of Hunter Street, was close to the river, and was entered by a descent of steps. Then there was Rombeau's planing mill, the Brooks factory, and of course Calcutt's brewery with a more than local reputation for good ale and stout.

Pioneer in Electricity

As a result of this water power Peterborough became one of the pioneer electric towns of this country. The new invention for the generation of electricity was housed in an old pulp mill on the Ashburnham side of the river about where the old Dickson mill stood. From this source the first electrification of the Trent power was enacted to a marvelling and somewhat dubious community. However, Peterborough was soon convinced of the permanent value of the new form or medium of power, and its use for domestic and industrial was quickly encouraged.

Harry Calcutt, proprietor of the brewery, also built a flax factory down on the tip of Riverside Park, or what was to become the park, and the flax was spread out to dry on the ground now marked off as a diamond.

Swimming In "The Boils"

Although many of these old landmarks of the village have been forgotten, the boys of those days will never forget the "old swimming hole" at the headgate to the raceway. It was known around town as "The Boils", and was a deservedly popular resort in the dog days.

First Plank Sidewalk

The following is a bit of Ashburnham history that may be interjected here: "In 1854 there were no sidewalks in the village, and in order that it might not appear to rural, Peter Glover, who had but come to the village the year before, circulated a subscription among the residents and secured sufficient money to build a three-foot plank sidewalk from the bridge to the station, at the point where the G. T. R. and Elizabeth Streets intercepted. Thus, too, signs of urban life made their appearance at the same time, a railway and a sidewalk.

The first, however, was not long to remain with the awakening village. After three years of a struggling existence it was abandoned, not before the Scotch Village and Peterborough had been honored by a visit from the Prince of Wales, afterwward King Edward VII, who made the journey from Cobourg to Peterborough over the Cobourg - Peterborough railway, a section of which was built on piles across Rice Lake.

Donald Sutherland was the stationmaster in Ashburnham.

Among the businessmen in Ashburnham at that time were: R. D. Rogers, Frank Armstrong, whose store was in the J. C. Sullivan grocery premises on Hunter Street; Mr McDonald a tailor and Mr. Moore a shoemaker; A. B. Downer conducted a hotel in the Maple Leaf building afterwards known as Lipsett's Hotel; Samuel Detcher also had a hotel on the old market corner; and shortly afterward John Manlece built a hotel across the street fr[om] Downer's building. The Otonabee mills were also running, [h]aving been built in 1847 by Hon. Z[.] Burnham. They were opera[ted] 1855 by R. D. The result in Peterborough was 273 to 105, a majority of 168, and in Ashburnham it was 99 to 79 a rather reluctant majority of 20. In the discussion in Peterborough's council Aldermen Tom Cahill and Adam Dawson were outspoken opponents, and among those who favored it were David Dumble and Peter Hamilton.

Local Sports Mecca

Ashburnham has always been an important centre of local athletics. Its three arenas were the old P.A.A.A. grounds, the Nicholls Oval and Riverside Park. All the big lacrosse games were played at the P.A.A.A. grounds for many years and other games and sport attractions drew crowds across the river were: cricket, baseball, football, bicycle races, track and field competitions, and the water sports and pageants on Little Lake.

Ashburnham Churches

The parish of St. Luke's Ashburnham church was formed chiefly through the exertions of Rev. Mark Burnham, who in 1852 moved to Peterborough to take charge of St. John's Church. It was through his untiring efforts and his generosity that this church came into being. Mr. Burnham donated the land where St. Luke's church was first erected and he also provided the funds for the erection of a Sunday school.

The first service was held on July 9, 1876. The building was a small school house where the initial gatherings were held. The congregation became too large for these quarters which were becoming quite cramped. So in the year of 1877 on Ascension day the corner stone of the present church was laid and the church was opened for services on September 23rd of that year but it was not until the following May that the consecration services were held.

Steps of progress were made and in 1880 a new pipe organ was installed to improve the Sunday services of the congregation and in the same year the contract for a brick parsonage adjoining the church was let which in the following year was occupied by the rector. That was the year of 1831.

This parish was to be considered as a rectory and the first incumbent was the Rev. W. C. Bradshaw who was duly installed as rector of the congregation.

Soon the old school house which served as the Sunday school and a meeting place became too small and in 1885 it was torn down and a commodious new one was built. A year later in 1886 the chancel of the church which had been very small was doubled in size and cathedral windows were set in. However it was not until December that the formal opening of the chancel took place; this was on Sunday 12th in 1886.

Two years later and eight years after the first organ was installed, a new organ was purchased and set up. In the same year the rector retired on account of impaired health, and the Rev. G. Warren of Lakefield was appointed as incumbent of the parish but the Rev. Bradshaw was still the rector.

However Mr. Bradshaw formally resigned and moved out of the city to Denver, Colorado. In 1890 the rectorship was taken over by the Rev. J. W. McLeary who stayed two years, after which he handed in his resignation and was succeeded by the Rev. Herbert Symonds, M.A., and Professor of Theology in Trinity College, Toronto.

Later Dr. Symonds was chosen to fill the position of headmaster of Trinity College Schools in Toronto and his resignation as rector of St. Luke's Church was placed in the hands of the wardens.

Rev. E. A. Langfelt was his successor and took the appointment in 1901, remaining several years with the congregation to be followed by Rev. F. J. Sawers, M.A., who stayed with his members for a long span of years to be followed by Rev. W. H White, M.A., in 1917, and now since the year of 1921 the duties have been undertaken by the Rev. G. J. Bousfield who is the present rector of the parish.

MARK STREET CHURCH

The first regular preaching services of the Mark street United Church were held by the Rev. J. W. Butcher in the year of 1871. From this small beginning the congregation happily grew to such an extent as to find their old building inadequate, making it necessary to erect a beautiful new structure on the corner of Mark and Hunter streets which is the site of the present church.

Mr. Butcher the first minister to conduct services of worship for the Mark street congregation was the minister for the Peterborough circuit of the Bible Christian Church in 1871. However, it remained for Rev. G. H. Copeland who is still living in Toronto to have the honor to organize the first congregation of this church and to hold the first organized services in the Town Hall on Sunday, January 1st, 1872.

Under his pastorate ably assisted by William Wand the congregation grew and so prospered that it was necessary to have a meeting place of their own. So the old Mark street church from which the congregation has recently moved was built and dedicated on first Sunday of the following September in 1872. Rev. Cephas Barker of Bowmanville made the tiresome journey from that village to preach at the opening service in the morning and in the evening while the afternoon services were conducted by Rev. Charles Fish of George street Wesleyan Church in the afternoon.

Rev. Copeland after a year and a half of pioneer service in the service of his congregation was succeeded in June of the following year 1873, by Rev. William Quance. In his turn he was followed by Reverends John Cannon, Moses, Metherall J. W. Blanchford, Mr. Roberts and Mr. Jolliffee. The Rev. T. Brown, now of Lindsay was the assistant of Mr. Jolliffee.

Growing steadily and receiving recognition in due course of time Mark street church became the head of the circuit in 1884 when the different Methodist denominations united in 1884. Many ministers have served the Mark street congregation faithfully and have helped the church grow and prosper—the following are remembered by some members of the congregation:—Rev. Foster McAmmond, 1884-1886; Rev. J. C. Wilson 1886-1889; Rev. A. C. Wilson, 1889-1891; Rev. Mr. Thom, 1891-1894; Rev. C. Beer, 1894-1897; Rev. J. E. Moore, 1897-1901; Rev. A. L. Thomson, 1901-1904; Rev. J. G. Lewis, 1904-1908; Rev. C. H. Coon, 1908-1911; Rev. C. E. Cragg, 1911-1914; Rev. Mr. Phillips, 1914-1915; Rev. R. A. Wattam, 1915-1919; Rev. George Ross, 1919-1923; Rev. R. Bamforth, 1923-1925 and Rev. R. T. Richards 1925-1927.

Finding their old quarters on Mark street becoming too inadequate and rather out of date a new church was needed and a decision was made to build an entirely new building. So, during the pastorate of the Rev. E Cragg 1911-1914 the lot where the present church is built was purchased and the construction costing $42,000, took place under the present minister the Rev. A. E. Thornley. The edifice was built by the contractor Thomas C. Ephgrave from the plans of W. R. Blackwell.

From a small beginning in the town hall of the village of Ashburnham to the old Mark Street Church which grew too small for the congregation to the present new church on the corner of Mark and Hunter streets the members of the church have enjoyed and some have seen one of the most satisfactory types of expansion— a steady trend upward.

SPECIAL SPEAKER MARMORA CHURCH

MARMORA, July 3 (Examiner Correspondence).—The morning service at St. Paul's Anglican Church on Sunday was of a particularly bright character—hymns, prayers and sermon being appropriate to Dominion Day. The special preacher was the Rev. R. W. Lane, curate of the Church of the Redeemer., Toronto.

His text was Luke 20:25, "Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's, and unto God the things which are Gods." In course of a finely delivered sermon, the reverend gentleman said, "Loyalty is something we must have as an individual or as a corporate body to ensure prosperity and happiness. There must be loyalty in the home. St. Paul stressed this point in his epistle of the Ephesians. Families are only happy and prosperous as each one therein is loyal to the others. Great Britain is great and big to-day because of the loyalty which has been shown for a long time now to the reigning sovereign.

Jesus approved of and sanctioned national loyalty. In giving forth His message, 'Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's and unto God the things which are God's.' He uttered a truth which has lived all down the centuries and which will live throughout all time. He has taught us loyalty to our religion, to one's country and to one's God. In this country we cannot help being a happy and contented people. Canada has shown a wonderful loyalty on the part of its citizens. This was particularly brought out at the time of the last war when 500,000 paid the supreme sacrifice."

Referring to memorials the preacher expressed his admiration of Marmora's suitable memorial as seen in its Memorial Hall. Continuing, he said, "Loyalty to God includes loyalty to the individual parish, and to the Church of God at large. If we render unto God, the things which are God's we shall be laying up for ourselves treasures in Heaven where neither rust or moth doth corrupt and where thieves do not break through and steal and where our treasure is there will our heart be also."

Cards distributed at the close of the service, outline the services at St. Paul's during July and August as follows: Holy Communion—First Sunday of each month at 11 a.m.; Third Sunday of each month at 8 a.m. Morning Prayer—Second, Third and Fourth Sundays of each month at 11 a.m. The Rector, Rev. A. B. Caldwell, extends a hearty invitation to visitors at Crowe Lake, as well as to parishioners to be present at these morning services.

Our Children

By ANGELO PATRI

NEVER BAD.

Never call a child bad. Never say before him he is bad. No matter what he or she may have done, no matter how shocked you are, never call the child hard names and never call him bad. Because he is not bad.

You must remember that life is a new experience for children. It is all very well for you to say, "But I told him. I taught him. I gave up this and I went without that to give him the thing he needed. He knows better because I have told him all about it. Yet he does his dreadful thing." If the child knew the reason for not doing evil, if he knew the dire results of wrong doing, if he knew life as you knew it, he would agree with you and follow your suggestions. But he does not know and all your telling is but a river of sound in his ears. Words mean nothing until experience puts the breath of life into them. Deal gently with all children.

A child who has failed in any way is suffering. The pain of youth in its struggle for knowledge and power is tragic. The difficulty is overwhelming the turmoil and the hurt and the anguish are well nigh unbearable. The loneliness, the spiritual isolation of youth in its distress is agony. Worst than all it is dumb. No words come to the bursting heart. No healing expression soothes the pain. Still, hard-eyes, tense, the wayward, erring, failing child sits and listens to blistering words when his whole being cries out for comfort and help.

Bear with them. Wait until the worst of the storm is over and then very gently invite confidence. Listen and listen and listen. Say ever a prayer for wisdom and keep on listening until you hear the still small voice of the hurt child speak from the welter of emotion. It will guide you in offering help. Then give it freely, without stint, without scorning and anger.

There was a time when you failed, just as this boy or girl has failed, though in your own peculiar fashion. Maybe you suffered severely for your failure. Maybe you were able to cover your hurt and your failure and go ahead. Maybe some good friend held a strong hand and gave you a life, in some way you were carried over the hard place. Do you even so to this failing child.

Speak encouragingly. Point out a new road. Speak of the better time to come. of the better ways, of new plans and fresh hopes. Keep a light lit for this young soul trembling in the dark. Carry it ahead of him and his footsteps, faltering at first, but steadily growing stronger will mark the new trail.

Forget about the punishment. Life takes care of that. Pick up the fallen youngster and if need be carry him in your arms until he finds his feet once more. And never, never, call him bad. The things he does may be bad, but the child, never.

PRINTED SILK PRACTICAL FOR OUTDOOR WEAR.

By Lucien Lelong.

I have used an unusually handsome pattern in printed crepe de chine in tones of brown and beige to make this summer frock. The Parisienne likes printed silks for her hours at Chantilly and Longchamps, and I have designed this model with a simplicity that makes it practical for out of door wear.

FLAUNTS CHIC SCARF.

THE STYLE No. 2814 is just the loveliest idea in Paris in red and white sheer crepe. It flaunts a scarf that is quite tricky, for it is part of front bodice that shows interesting yoke effect. The wide girdle secures slim hips, while grouped plaits at front of skirt add fluttery fulness when wearer moves. Printed crepe de chine is an economical choice for street or to wear to the beach, especially in green with white polka-dots. Shantung in orange shade, yellow tub silk, printed voile, dimity in gingham check in yellow-beige and brown, and georgette crepe in tomato red are suggestions smart folks are wearing.

THE PATTERN is simple to use. It illustrates in Pictures how it is made. It's quite amusing—a time saver—and assures perfect fit. It is offered at cost price 15 cents (stamps or coin) as a service to readers who sew. Designed in sizes, 16, 18 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust.

NEW SUMMER FASHION BOOK is just filled with Paris and New York styles attractively presented and cleverly adapted for the use of home sewers. A book far superior to all previous issues. Price 15 cents, but may be obtained for 10 cents if ordered with a pattern.

That Body of Yours

(By Jas. W. Barton, M.D.)

EMOTIONS AND PTOMAINE POISONING.

Perhaps you have had what is called an attack of ptomaine poisoning with nausea, vomiting and intense pain in abdomen.

You try to remember just what you have eaten the previous twenty four hours and you are often at a loss to decide just what food or foods might have caused the trouble.

Now in the majority of cases it is often some article of food that has caused the symptoms, but quite often it is you yourself, your condition of mind or body that is responsible.

You ate the food at a time when your condition of mind or body was not in shape to take care of it, and the food remained undigested for many hours.

You will remember that the sight, taste, and smell of food excites the digestive juices in the mouth, in the stomach, and in the pancreas. This is what is called brain digestion because it is the eyes, the mouth, and the nose, that start the digestive juices flowing.

This is sometimes called appetite juice.

Now in the same manner these juices can be affected by worry, tiredness, fright, anger or other depressing emotion, and the juices are prevented from flowing properly.

And the unfortunate part about it is that even if you are worried, tired, or depressed, your body needs food just the same.

So if you eat food when in this condition, it may remain undigested and cause distress; and if you don't eat you will get weak.

What should be done?

You should try to rest for a few minutes before eating. Lying on the right side is best.

Don't eat if you are very tired. Rest first.

Try to eat the articles of food that you like, that are easily digested, spread your meals well apart, so that the previous meal will be well out of the stomach before you eat again.

If you follow these simple rules, you'll find that you will have fewer attacks of "ptomaine" with its accompanying pain and intestinal distress.

AMMONIA WASH

All brushes should be given careful ammonia washes in warm weather. Brooms and whisk-brooms are the better for such attention, also.

"Home is the resort

* * * * * * *

This week Peterborough citizens are acting as hosts and hostesses to the Old Boys and Girls who have returned for the great reunion, and I believe they will be well taken care of for Peterborough citizens are hospitable and friendly to a high degree.

* * * * * * *

On Monday, while the big parade was in progress, and everyone along George street and every other street in Peterborough wore a smile, I heard a woman speak in glowing terms of Peterborough.

* * * * * * *

"Aren't the people here extremely friendly", she exclaimed. "I think they are even more so than when we made our home here. I would give anything to be able to come back here to live."

* * * * * * *

And do you know when I heard it, I was overjoyed to know how much Peterborough citizens were thought of. I glanced around and looked at this woman's companion.

* * * * * * *

One look at her told me that she had not held Peterborough people in such high esteem as her friend. I wondered why and while everyone around me was smiling at the people in the parade, I stood pondering.

* * * * * * *

Then, as she had known I was interested in their conversation, she said, "Yes, the people do seem friendly NOW, but they didn't seem so much so when we lived here a few years ago."

* * * * * * *

"Of course," she said, "I judged everyone then by the few neighbors who lived beside me and perhaps I was not exactly fair, for there are certainly a lot of people in Peterborough.

* * * * * * *

"At that time I was a stranger in the community and my neighbors didn't seem to want to have anything to do with me and I felt it very keenly for I longed to have friends."

* * * * * * *

You know I felt sorry for this woman right away for I knew just how she must have felt during those days when she first came to Peterborough to reside. I would have liked nothing more than to go up to her and tell her different—to change her mind.

* * * * * * *

Very soon, however, these two women began talking again, each telling of her experiences, the one having a joyous look in her eyes, the other having a sad, far-away look.

* * * * * * *

Just to look in her eyes seemed to picture to me the hardships she underwent while living among neighbours who would not be friends with her. I began to wish it had been my lot to be neighbors with her.

* * * * * * *

After a while, though, she brightened up and the sad look disappeared, for she was narrating the lovely time she had been having while visiting in Peterborough for Old Home Week.

* * * * * * *

It made me feel much better then to know that she thought a great deal more of Peterborough residents than she formerly had. By her looks and from her conversaton, I was able to find out that her conception of Peterborough people was much higher.

* * * * * * *

After I returned home, the thought came to me and I was a little worried, but later I found I had not cause to be. I wondered if local people had only stretched their friendliness because of the occasion.

* * * * * * *

After pausing for sometime, though, I came to the conclusion that it could not have been, and now I am positive. I have asked a number of people if they thought Peterborough friendly and every one of them answered in the affirmative.

* * * * * * *

But from this woman with whom her neighbours would not be friendly, we can learn a lesson, and can appreciate Old Home Week the more for it.

* * * * * * *

Be friendly toward everyone, for you know not when you may be making life hard for someone, by not giving a friendly smile and a little word of encouragement. Let us start right now, during Old Home Week, to carry this out.

WEDDING BELLS

KENNEDY—SAGE

St. John's Anglican Church was the scene of a very attractive wedding, when Evelyn Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Sage, became the bride of Mr. Byron B. Kennedy, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Kennedy, Toronto.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, made an extremely charming figure in a gown of mistral eggshell satin fashioned along princess lines, with jewelled lacing passing through embroidered rings at the back, and the train falling from the hip line. The veil of tulle and silk embroidered lace, which formed a cap when caught with streamers of orange blossoms on each side, gracefully fell over the three-yard train. She carried a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses and lilly-of-the-valley and her shoes were of matching eggshell satin.

The matron-of-honour, Mrs. Helen Hill, sister of the groom, and the bridesmaids, Miss Winnifred K. Sage, Miss Gwendolen Sage and Miss Mildred Sage, made a very colourful picture in gowns of French blue, jade green, carnation pink and canary yellow, georgette and chantille lace, which formed tiers and a long back panel. They wore large picture hats in matching colors and carried bouquets of butterfly roses in colors contrasting with the gowns.

Little Francis Kennedy, made a very pretty flower-girl in wild rose georgette and carried a basket of roses from which she daintily distributed the petals in front of the bride.

A dainty figure was that of the little train bearer, Miss Helen Steele, who in a frock of baby blue and a knot of roses, carried the bride's train.

Mr. Ross H. Kennedy acted as bestman and the ushers were Mr. Edward M. Hill, Dr. H. Steele, and Mr. Ernest J. Howard, all of Toronto. Rev. Dr. Blagrave was the officiating clergyman.

Previous to the ceremony Miss G. Johns of Toronto, sang very beautifully "Still as the Night", and an Old English Folk Song, during the signing of the register.

The bride's mother wore a gown of biscuit chantille lace and georgette and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses, while Mrs. Kennedy, mother of the groom, wore a gown of biege georgette with lace ensemble coat. She carried a bouquet of butterfly roses, with shoes and hat in matching tones.

The chimes peeled forth, as the bridal party and the guests left the church to gather at the home of the bride's parents, Sunnyside Slope. In the drawing room, among ferns, gladoli and peonies, the bride and groom received the good wishes of their many friends, the guests passing along to a marquee placed in the lawn, where a very dainty luncheon was served. Rev. J. B. Kennedy, uncle of the groom, acted as toastmaster, while the Rev. Dr. Blagrave very fittingly proposed the toast to the bride, the groom responding. M. Ross H. Kennedy proposed the toast to the bridesmaids and Mr. Edward M. Hill replied. Mr. W. C. Moore of Bobcaygeon toasted the parents and this was replied to by Mr. A. A. Kennedy.

The happy couple left among showers of confetti by motor to Montreal for an extended trip to England and the Continent, the bride travelling in a honey biege Flamingo ensemble of Parisian creation and hat and shoes to match. Upon their return they will reside in Forest Hill, Toronto.

MOTHERS ARE ENTERTAINED

Mrs. George Weller Welcomes the Visitors to the Meeting.

21 BABIES PRESENT.

WARSAW, July 3. — (Examiner Correspondence).—The United Church Ladies' Aid met in the Sunday School room on Thursday afternoon. Invitations had been given to mothers with babies under four years of age to come and bring their babies. An effort was made to leave none out. Twenty-one babies with their mothers were present, and about a dozen other ladies, most of whom were mothers. The afternoon was for mothers and babies.

Mrs. Herrington, the president, was in the chair. Mrs. George Weller volunteered to arrange for the pulpit flowers during July.

The date of the next meeting will be announced later. It will take the form of a picnic on Mrs. O. B. McIlvena's invitation at Young's Point.

Mrs. Herrington asked the mothers not to be nervous if the little ones made a n ran around. It was their d d those taking part could spe little louder.

The piano had a blue drape, and the doll's cradle was trimmed with blue and pink. Garden flowers were on the table and in the windows.

TRANSPORTATION IS TIED UP.

NEW ORLEANS, July 2.—All possible motor buses and taxicabs were pressed into service to-day to furnish transportation in a general strike of street car employees here.

Approximately 1,800 men were affected by the surprise suspension of work order issued last night by Edwin Peyroux, president, other officials of the local Carmen's Union, ordering activities ceased on the claim that recent arbitration with New Orleans Public Service, Inc., over alleged dismissals and suspensions of employees had proven unsatisfactory.

FAVORITE RECIPE.

CANNED TOMATOES.

(Contributed by "Ruralite")

Sterilize gems. Peel tomatoes, press into the gems whole, or if very large, cut in two. When the gem is full, put a teaspoon of salt and one of sugar on top, taking care that it does not touch the sides of the gem, as it will burn on the glass.

Put rubber on and the top, but do not tighten.

Place the gems in a pan with water in it. Place a couple of thicknesses of paper between each gem so that they will not touch. Put the pan containing the gems in the oven. Cook until you are sure they have boiled. Can tell by seeing the bubles rise. Have some tomatoes cooking on the top of the stove with which to fill the gems, as they sink down. Screw the tops tight and stand upside down until cool. These will have the same flavor as fresh tomatoes.

ASHBURNHAM MEN PLAN A SOCIETY

Permanent Association May Be Organized Here

One of the outstanding features of Peterborough's Old Home Week has been the series of reunions held by the Ashburnham Old Boys.

Scores of the old boys are scattered throughout the continent, many of them filling positions of prominence, and this Old Home event has called a great many of them back to renew youth and old associations. The gatherings held by the boys have been full of thrills and many pleasant hours have been spent in the recital of incidents of many years and which were forgotten by a great many.

Some of the old boys who answered the call to return home were Tom Begley, "Dinny" Dobbin, T. Dawson, the Hamilton brothers, Bennetts, Bob Long, Senator Fred Long of Minnesota.

It is understood that the outcome of the reunion of the old boys will be the formation of a permanent organization, known as the Ashburnham Old Boys' Association. Tom Begley, of Lindsay, who was the nestor and leading spirit in the gathering held during the week, has the matter in hand. The object of the proposed association will be to keep the boys in close touch with each other; the compiling of a list of the old boys and the preparation of records, etc., in course of time, with the history of the village, and the achievements of some of its old boys. Once the organization is definitely established steps will be undertaken to hold reunions from time to time.

LOCAL BOATS CAPTURE SEA FLEA HONORS

SWIMMING RACES ON PROGRAM PROVIDE KEEN COMPETITION

Smooth Exhibition of "Crawl" Stroke Demonstrated in Junior Race.

LARGE ENTRIES.

Miss Eva Outram and Perce Dunford Star in Paddling Events.

The swimming races for the boys and girls under fifteen were over a 200-foot course against the current. Both were close all the way and there was a large entry in each The pace these young lads and lasses set up, and the smooth exhibition of the "crawl" that all showed, proved that the city is developing future leaders in aquatics.

The results:—

Girls swimming (15 and under) — 1, Doris Rogers; 2, Gladys Johnson.

Boys swimming (15 and under) — 1, Ken Weldon; 2, Jack Archibald.

The girls race for those over fifteen was another titanic struggle over the stiff up-stream course. There were six entries and all pinned their speed to the "crawl" churning the water with their speed. Four were almost in a straight line at the finish. Jean Harvey was first and Nan Mills second.

Five youths covered the distance like eels in the race for boys over fifteen. Hitting the water with a splash they speeded neck-and-neck most of the way, until near the end when the winners steadily drew ahead. Vic. Johnson was first and Vern Janeway second over the stiff competition.

Over the long four-hundred foot course the men swimmers speeded with powerful trudgeon strokes that ate up the distance. Bill Mantel was winner with J .C. Willby, of the C. G. E. Athletic Club, a close second.

Paddling Events

Two competitors stood out in the paddling races Miss Eva Outram winning in all the ladies' events and Perce Dunford cleaning up in all but one of the men's events, and both combining to win the mixed tandem. The paddling races were all closely contested with the exception of the ladies' canoe, in which there were only two entries, Eva Outram and Nan G. Mills, who ran first and second respectively.

In the ladies' doubles Misses Outram and Mills teamed up to carry the victory, against the keen competition furnished by Doris Rogers and G. McConnal.

Eight canoes lined up for the men's single canoe journey. Some confusion resulted in changing the length of the course, but it was a close race all the way. Perce Dunford, Verne Windsor and Stan Windsor came in first, second and third respectively.

Another great race was furnished in the men's doubles in which twelve canoes competed against a strong head wind. The Windsor brothers, Verne and Stan, were winners, being closely pursued by Perce Dunford and Jim McMartin, who finished second, with M. Mesley and Buster Wyatt right on their paddles in third place.

In the mixed doubles Eva Outram and Perce Dunford led Nan Mills and J. O'Dette across the finish line in a great battle.

One of the features of the afternoon and one much-enjoyed by the thronged spectators was the perilous feat engaged in by eleven young gentlemen, that of walking the greasy pole. Out they skidded upon this long pole, which was kept plentifully supplied with axle grease by the conscientious and oft-repeated ministrations of H. B. Rye. Fat ones, lean ones, big ones and small ones they balanced, curtsied and skidded.

E. Walker was most proficient at this form of diversion, batting 1.000 percent. Out of three tries he picked off the flag at the end of the pole three times. E. Magee came second by defeating Hec. McLeod in the elimination trials.

Pole Tilting

The tilting was another feature to the long program. The participants plied their tilting poles energetically. Five were entered. H. Lundy and B. Jones defeated T. Outram and P. Dunford in the final.

P. Dunford and A. Henry finished first and second respectively in the gunwale race. In a close and exciting finish Milton Mesley was first and Philip Amys second in the crab race.

NORTH ENDERS BEAT ELECTRICS

Increase Lead in City Softball League By Taking Fourth Straight Win.

FINAL COUNT 24-7.

Harrison's hung up another scalp last evening at the Central Park when the trounced the C.G.E.'s 24 to 7, and increased their lead in the City Softball League by making it their fourth straight win.

Altogether it was a rather mediocre game of ball with very little pep in it, which is a wonder, for the Harrison boys usually show a good brand of ball.

C. G. E. led off with a one run lead, at the end of the first only to draw a blank in the second, while Harrison's dragged four home, Ward chasing in a couple of his companions on a nice triple through left field. This was evidently in retaliation for Playford's triple in the first.

The third session saw the boys in red bring the score up another four while the Blue Shirts came in with a lone single by Craighead.

The fourth innings was the only show of ball displayed, both outfits tightening down, and as a result the batters were picked off in succession, with no scores on either side. Hedger and Wilson were nipped prettily on second and third by a double play, Dorington to Rose. It was too good to last, however, as the sixth round stacked up another six to one score for the Harrison's. In this session the C.G.E.'s got a couple of apparently bad breaks on decisions, once at second, and another on what seemed a foul down the third base line. Ross trippled in this session for the Harrisons, which accounted for several runs. In the sixth Hewson's one-handed catch was the only out-standing feature.

The seventh and eighth rounds drew blanks for the C.G.E.'s, while Harrison's ran up five more. The Electric boys showed a bit more voltage in the eighth, but to no avail. The ninth saw them add one to the small sum of six, when Playfair trippled and scored. In the eighth Montgomery slugged out a homer to left field which however might never have turned out such, had not Playfair fallen over a bench in a brilliant try after it. Newson also picked several hot ones out of the air on third base.

Neither pitcher showed very much on the ball, although Powell had seven walks to Dundas's two, and three strike-outs to Dundas's four.

The score by innings:

C. G. E. ..... .201012001— 7
Harrison's ..... .14406414x—24

The line ups were:

C. G. E.'s—Craighead ss; Caladine 2b; Playfair lf; Frost 1b; Weir, c; Newson, 3b; Hedger, cf; Wilson, rf; Powell, p.

Harrison's: Dorington 3b; Dundas p; Ward ss; Dobson c; Ross 2b; Vinette lf; Montgomery cf; Smith 1b; Clark rf; Caladine batted for Clark in the sixth, and McGraw replaced Ward in the eighth.

Umpire, Bud Weise.

GEORGE YOUNG IS ENTERED IN MARATHON SWIM

Vierkotter, Gotterdam and Ruth Tower May Also Take Part.

AT CAMPBELLFORD.

Marathon Will Be One of Big Features On Old Home Week Program.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 3 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—George Young will swim in the Trent River at Campbellford on Friday afternoon, August 2nd. There is also a possibility that Vierkotter, Gotterdam and Ruth Tower will also take a dip in this section of the Trent Waterways. This event is scheduled for Old Home Week, and is expected to be one of the big attractions.

Whether or not the Big Time swimmers take part in the race, remains to be seen. At the present time, the committee here are in receipt of a letter from a business man in Fenelon Falls, which states that he will sign up George Young as soon as he receives the entry forms from the committee. He also states that there is a possibility of Vierkotter, Gotterdam and Ruth Tower coming as well.

The letter is dated at Fenelon Falls June 28th, and read with interest:

The Letter.

"Dear 'Doc',—As soon as I receive your entry forms, I will book up George Young, and possibly Ruth Tower, for your swim. Mr. Oke was in town last Sunday and expressed himself as being quite agreeable to them going down there on August 2, and the trainer and swimmers themselves are right on.

"In your reply, I would be obliged if you could give me some idea of the proposed course, i.e., the starting point and the finishing point, so that I may be able to give them some idea of the water conditions. In any case, it is quite likely that the trainer will go down there the day before in order to get this mapped out.

"Wishing you every success in your undertaking, and hoping to be with you on at least one of these days."

"P.S.—In conversation with Bell, George's trainer, he said that in all probability, Vierkotter and Gotterdam would be there. In any case, it would be his wish that they go, and would endeavor to use his influence to arrange it. This, of course, is only probable, as other bookings interfere.

NEW YORK, July 3 (Canadian Press).—Two evenly matched ball teams fought a close battle at the Yankee Stadium yesterday, with little to choose between them.

TIGERS STOP BROWNS.

ST. LOUIS, July 3 (Canadian Press).—The Detroit Tigers stopped the St. Louis Browns' winning streak here yesterday by a 10 to 4 walloping. The defeat sent the Browns into third place.

INDIANS BEAT SOX.

CLEVELAND, July 3 (Canadian Press).—The Indians took two extra inning games from the White Sox here yesterday, winning the first 4 to 3 in 10 innings and the second 5 to 4 in 11 innings.

The Sox seemed to have the opener safely put away in the ninth, but with one out, Myatt singled and Porter tripled to tie the score. Averill's double with two on won it in the tenth.

Rangers Suspended From Association

BRANTFORD, July 3 (Canadian Press). — That Guelph Rangers had been suspended following a protest against the playing of one Kelly against a Brantford club, it was announced yesterday by the Brantford and District Soccer Association. The suspension is to hold until Kelly is produced.

HEAVY STICK WORK.

TORONTO, Ont., July 3 (C.P.).—Jonathan T. Stone and William James Sweeney struck a few for the Toronto ball club and themselves down at the Stadium yesterday afternoon. The combined socking efforts of this pair of Spalding maulers had much to do with the Leafs taking the Red Wings, 6 to 4, in the third and final game of the series.

Two triples and a single were larruped by Stone, and the young collegian from the Tigers carried over three runs in addition to driving a fourth home. Sweeney hit a double and two of the one-base size and drove in three runs, one with a long sacrifice fly. Nolen Richardson, and Bucky Burke provided the impetus for the scoring of the other two tallies.

BALTIMORE, July 23 (C.P.).—A sacrifice fly by Pinch-hitter Del Gainer, sending Mooers home in the eighth, gave the Birds a 5 to 4 victory over Reading here yesterday. The battle was a tight affair all the way, with the Flock trailing at 4 to 2 in the fifth.

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

THE CREDULOUS ESKIMO

Long years ago the Eskimo,
Who ranges round the regions Polar,
Possessed a wealth of robust health,
And never had an aching molar.
The diet then of Northern men
Was chiefly whale and walrus blubber,
Which builded bone as hard as stone
Although it much resembled rubber.

But white men came to sing the fame
Of pie and pudding and molasses,
And other sweets and cakes and meats
Upon which dine the ruling classes.
"Your kind of food," said they, "is crude.
That's why your life grows daily drearier,
We're happier far than you folks are Because our dinners are superior."

So every soul around the Pole
Of walrus steaks and chops grew wary,
And took good care to mould their fare
Upon the white man's dietary,
A food which serves to knot the nerves,
Their once gay spirits to encumber,
And turn them gray with pain by day
While toothache racks their hours of slumber.

And so because he thought it was
The white man's meals that made him smarter,
The Eskimo is bowed with woe,
To crass credulity a martyr,
He has no need, indeed, to heed
His suave—self-satisfied advisors,
For whose advice he's paid the price
Of his bi-cuspids and incisors.

HIGHWAYS AND BYWAYS IN THE SPORTS WORLD

BOOSTS AND KNOCKS for EVERYONE

SOCCER — Final Spalding Cup, Canadian Packing versus Canadian General, at King Edward Park, at 6.15 prompt.

NORHAM HUNTING FOR COMPETITION.

Norham, a village down east, has a smart softball team, which desires to test its ability against outside outfits. In fact they are ready to meet all comers, and have issued a challenge to the world—that's how confident Norham is about its ball team. Any local aggregation that wants an hour or two in the country, should take on this team. The games would have to be in the evening, 6.30 standard time.

FAST JUNIOR BATTLE TO-NIGHT.

Old-timers who want to see real ball played by coming stars, should walk over the bridge this evening and see Kiwanis team and Lockworks engage in a junior battle. These two clubs have been furnishing close, exciting games all season. Jack Deannard's Kiwanis outfit won the first two engagements, but Monday afternoon the Lockworks slipped a 12 to 10 win over them in a ten-innings struggle. The game is scheduled for 6.15 at James Stevenson Park this evening.

Another tidy fixture is on the bill for to-morrow evening, in the same park, when the two hard-hitting, fast-fielding little bantams, Grafton's and Maple Leafs, will cross bats. These players are all under 16, and to see the pep and go they instill in their fixtures, and their smooth play, is a treat.

Canucks and Kiwanis, the other bantam teams, are billed to play across the bridge on Monday evening, July 8.

YOUTHFUL DRIVERS UPHOLD CITY'S HONOR.

This city is becoming the centre of sea flea racing. One of the largest fields of these skimming, roaring bugs competed in the water sport program at the Government wharf yesterday afternoon, and against these crack racers the youthful local drivers more than upheld the city's honor.

"Bunny" Waddell, son of W. R. Waddell, was first in the A class race, and Don Wood and Bill Coursey ran one and two in the forty-five mile marathon to Rice Lake and back. Wood covered the distance in his new Johnson-powered boat in fifty-five and a half minutes. Wes Kelly encountered engine trouble just before the second bridge, but he chugged along and finished fifth in the big race.

With such expert sea flea designers here as D'Arcy Carter and J. B. O'Dette, who are turning out boats that are meeting success wherever raced, and with the Johnson Motors Company here building engines recognized as the finest in the world for the heavy business of driving these fleas, this city is indeed fortunate. With every race new youngsters are taking to the game, and the local drivers are of the same high quality as the boats and engines.

WHERE IS THE POT OF GOLD?

It looks as though the boys who trotted across the continent, developing bunions and fallen arches, with the idea of getting a portion of the pot of gold which C. C. Pyle was supposed to have planted in California, will get nothing but experience and the air for their long journey.

When the race ended in Los Angeles, the boys expected that their money would be forthcomng the next day, but to their sorrow they were told that Mr. Pyle was "broke," and they would have to wait for the prize money.

Just how long the wait will be, no one seems to know. Pyle claims that the money will be forthcoming from his brother, but as yet the rich relative has not put in an appearance.

PICTORIAL GOLF

By H. B. Martin.

PIVOT ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY IN SWING.

Using the upper part of the body for the golf swing without any suggestion of a pivot has caused many golfers to play a stiff unsatisfactory game. The feet should not remain absolutely glued to the ground. The left heel must come up naturally as the body pivots.

One can get a good picture of himself by looking at this drawing if he is an arm swinger. Using the upper part of the body is wrong. Just as absurd as if one tried to use the lower part of the body without any apparent aid from the upper part. Some sort of a shot is possible by this method of swinging, but no substantial results can be obtained this way and it is not golf.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL

Richard Barthelmess in "Weary River" All Talking and Singing at the Capitol, Thursday, Friday and Saturday

There is realism galore in "Weary River," the new First National feature starring Richard Barthelmess which opens at the Capitol tomorrow.

In order that there may be an authoritative note in the sequences laid in a penitentiary and those showing how prisoners are photographed, attired and finger-printed, First National officials engaged the technical services of L. J. O'Connor, who has had many years' experience in prison work.

O'Connor, who also enacts the role of a lieutenant of guards, was formerly a guard at San Quentin prison, California, a sergeant in charge of a convict labor camp working in the forests of Mendocino county, California, and was an official with the District of Columbia Reformatory at Lorton, Virginia.

"Weary River" has but one scene of prison life; the balance of the story is laid in a modern American city with a night club, a gambling house, a luxurious apartment, etc. Strictly speaking, it is not what is generally called an underworld or crook story; rather, it is a sentimental tale of a singing convict whose voice over the radio achieves for him a parole, a new life and the love of a girl.

Frank Lloyd directed "Weary River" with a cast headed by Betty Compson and including William Holden, Louis Natheaux, Raymond Turner, George Stone, Robert O'Connor and others. The story was adapted by Bradley King from an original short story by Courtney Ryley Cooper.

THE LONG, LONG HIGHWAY

(Sung to the tune of "There's a Long, Long Trail a-Winding")

There's a long, long highway winding
Into the town of my dreams,
Where I used to treat my Mary
To her first ice creams;
It's a long, long time ago, now,
Since I left her to roam,
But I'm coming back, my dearie,
Down the long highway to home!

We're the exiles from a city
They call "Toronto the Good",
Where they used to drive the buggies
Through long miles of mud—
But that's a long, long time ago, now,
And we're motoring today
Along a nice Provincial Highway,
Down Peterborough way

Oh! the Mayor and City Council,
And all the Folks will be out
For to greet us when we get there,
With one great big shout!
For we've a long, long line of motors—
Coup, sedan, coach and bus—
And it's a long time since the burghers
Saw such good-looking guys as US!

There's a long, long highway winding
Into the town of my dreams,
Where I used to treat my Mary
To her first ice creams;
It's a long, long time ago, now,
Since I left her to roam,
But I'm coming back, my dearie,
Down the long highway to Home!

J. Lewis Milligan, a Toronto Old Boy and former editor of the Peterborough Review, composed this song and was written especially for the trek of the Toronto Delegation to Peterborough.

This motorcade, of 150 cars and 400 people sang the song to the top of their voices during their trip from the Queen city.

Teddy's Marathon Swimmers

The Wrigley Marathon swim again will be conducted at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, despite all the bally-hoos and rumors that it would be held in another city.

The world's best swimmers will meet in Toronto to divide the spoils of the world's greatest water marathon.

"Big boy," George Young, will be very much in front this time, according to the popular broker and sportsman, Teddy Oke. He says that there will be no monkey business this year about training, and when the day comes around his entry will be in A-1 condition.

Ethel Towers of Denver, will also be backed this year by Oke, in the ladies' event. At the recent Brule Lake regatta both Miss Towers and Young appeared to be in excellent condition.

COUNTY RICH IN MINERALS

Valuable Iron Ore Mined in Marmora Township By American Company.

LEAD MINES.

Minerals in Peterborough County. 1884—Iron has been found in Belmont and Galway, Methuen, Harvey, Burleigh and Chandos. In Marmora township, County of Hastings, very valuable iron mines owned by an enterprising American company, are being worked with most gratifying results. This ore is declared by experts to be of the best quality in the world. The Blairton mine on lots 7 and 8, in first concession, belonging to the Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora Mining and Railway Company, has produced large quantities of ore, the yield at one time being as much as five hundred tons a day. The company just named is an amalgamation of two distinct organizations having no connection. The mining company was one thing, the railway another. But, whether from want of practical knowledge or from some other cause, the mine was found to be unprofitable; and the railway collapsed, as so many other things have fizzled out, because it was built in ignorance of certain natural laws, the bridge across Rice Lake, which was built on timber piles, being unable to stand the stress of expanding and contracting ice. In 1866, an Act of Parliament was passed, authorizing incorporation, and the new company came into existence with an English and Canadian and United States proprietory. From 1867 the company worked at the mine steadfastly and energetically, but at a considerable loss during the first two years. After that the mine paid its expenses, and in 1871 began to yield a profit. A great drawback to be contended against was the fact that the ore contained a large amount of sulphur; but a scientific expedient reduced this to nothing. The iron taken out was found to be of excellent character, possessing some special qualities so valuable that great American smelters are anxious to get the ore to mix with others — such mixture being found to produce a very superior kind of iron. In order to convey the ore to its destination this company built a short railway nine miles in length. Starting from the mine on lots 7 and 8 of the first concession, it ran south-west through the small village of Blairton, a mile distant; then, continuing southwest, it met the River Trent at a point near the "Narrows", where a bend in the river touches lot 1, in the tenth concession of Belmont. After being taken along this line in flat cars the ore was dumped into scows and towed up the Trent and through Rice Lake to Harwood, whence it was conveyed by the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway to Cobourg; from Cobourg it was taken in schooners to American lake ports. Unfortunately this industry, which promised such bright results, succumbed to the depression in the iron trade in 1873. The main shaft of the mine is now filled with surface water, which ran into it after it had ceased to be worked, but it could, and no doubt will, be again put in proper working condition. Now that the Ontario and Quebec Railway, which runs through Belmont and is only three miles distant from the Blairton mine, is completed, it is almost certain that this and other like industries will ere long be in full blast.

A large deposit of valuable magnetic iron ore has recently been found on lot 19, in the first concession off Belmont, being about four miles from the Cobourg and Marmora Railway, six miles from the Ontario and Quebec Railway, and five miles from the Ontario Central Railway.

On lots 27, in the 13th and 14th concessions of Galway, and on lots 23 and 25 in the twelfth concession of Galway, deposits of magnetic iron ore have been found, said to be first-class Bessemer steel ores. In Chandos, in the Clydesdale mine on the second concession, owned by Mr. Coe, who is engaged in mining very extensively in the adjoining County of Hastings, the mine was opened in the Fall of 1833. During the present year (1884), a steam drill was put in and preparations made for thoroughly opening up the deposit.

On the Bobcaygeon Road, about six miles south off Kinmount, are most promising lead mines owned and operated by the Galway Lead Mining Company of Peterborough. Gold has been found in Belmont some time before it was struck in Madoc, and also in Chandos; in Belmont a Canadian company did a little working, but subsequently sold out to an American company, who allowed it to drop. Plumbago occurs in several places in the Township of Galway; lot 2 in the fifteenth concession, about three miles from Kinmount, appears to contain it in quantity. The northern and northeastern parts of Belmont contain large and valuable beds of marble; some of it is of very fine grain and appears to be fine enough for sculpturing purposes while other kinds are coarser. Both white and grey varieties are found in general abundance. In the east part of Belmont a good quality of marble is found. It is rather gritty, rendering it difficult for engraving purposes. Mica is found in the County of Peterborough, but of such a poor quality as to be quite useless. Copper has been found in Chandos and other northern townships. All along the line of the Trent Valley Canal are found quarries of excellent Trenton limestone, which is being utilized for building locks.

Millbrook

MILLBROOK, July 3 (Examiner Correspondence).—The boys of the Senior Trail Rangers' Camp of the United Church held an open meeting in the Sunday School Hall on Thursday evening, when they were hosts to their parents, the officials of the church and their wives and the members of the Wide Awakes C.G.I.T. group.

The Silver String Orchestra, with Miss Annie McMahon at the piano, played while the audience was gathering, and the chair was taken by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones, B.D., who led in the opening song service, and welcomed the guests on behalf of the boys' organization, in the welfare of which he is keenly and actively interested.

A piano duet by the Misses Francis and Beatrice Jones, and a selection by the orchestra, were followed by a playlet, "A Day in Court," an amusing farce with negro characters throughout. The cast was:

Judge Muckenfuss, Will Jessup; Dan, the Clerk, Donald Henry; Policeman, Harold Hawken; Unlucky Mose, Gerald Todd; Lizzie Sims, Grant Henry; Jim Thompson, Fred Coulter; Rastus Simmons, Jack Stinson; Susanna Huffy, Ernest Powell; Allie Allison, Alfred Hutchison; Skinny Huffy, Kenneth Little; Tiny Huffy, Gordon Jones.

When the Judge had disposed of the prisoners, and married the waiting couple, to the great amusement of the audience, two of the boys, Fred Coulter and Alfred Hutchison, sang "O Susannah." Miss Frances Jones playing the accompaniment.

A feature of particular interest was the presentation of the honor badges, won by a number of the boys in connection with their official Trail Rangers' program, F. P. Stinson, chairman of the sports committee on the East Durham Boys' Work Board, pinning on the coveted ribbon with the Honor Badge neatly attached, and heartily congratulating the boys on the fine work being accomplished.

Explanation was made that in the public speaking test each boy must make one impromptu speech, take part in two debates, and make five speeches lasting at least five minutes each. In the nature collection, some of which were on display, beautifully mounted and arranged, the requirement is for specimens of twenty different kinds of trees, six varieties of clover seed, six of grasses, and six of grains. The school record of the boys is also taken into account in awarding the honor badges. The latter are small in size, as Mr. Stinson explained, because when a given number has been earned the boy is eligible for a Tuxis Crest on which are then placed the badges previously won.

Speaking of the work of the county sports committee, Mr. Stinson announced that a baseball league has been formed, with the age limit of players fixed at twenty-one years, the places included being: Bailieboro, Garden Hill, Elizabethville, Welcome, Plainville, and Millbrook. The three teams having the highest standing, when the schedule of games is completed, will play off for the championship when a suitable trophy will be presented.

No camp is being specially arranged for the C.S.E.T. members in East Durham this season, but there are still vacancies in the one for Victoria County, to be held at Long Branch, beginning July 13, and boys from this section may apply for registration and camp privileges.

A special Sunday in the interests of boys' work is in view for next September, when throughout the whole riding of East Durham there will be afternoon services at each point where there is a C.S.E.T. organization, the boys themselves to take charges, culminating in a mass meeting in the United Church, Millbrook, at night. A boys' choir, to be trained by Mrs. Gray, of Garden Hill, will be a feature of the occasion.

In closing, Mr. Stinson referred appreciatively to the splendid work which Rev. Mr. Jones has accomplished among the boys since coming to this circuit one year ago, mentioning especially the three reception services held in the church in recent months, the number of boys who have thus publicly announced their stand for Christ being evidence of results obtained.

The list of those receiving honor badges includes:

Public speaking: Jack Stinson and Will Jessup.

Nature collections: Ernest Powell, Oswald Martin and Gerald Todd.

School standing: Donald Henry, 90 per cent.; Will Jessup, 79; Jack Stinson, 77; Gordon Davis, 77; Gerald Todd, 75; Nelson Davis, 75; Eric Clarke, 60.

Refreshments were served during the social hour at the close, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. G. E. Burnham, Mrs. Geoffrey Powell, and others assisting with this part of the evening's entertainment. On behalf of the boys, Will Jessup and Donald Henry moved the formal vote of thanks to those who had so kindly helped in making the gathering a success, and on behalf of the Wide Awakes C.G.I.T. group, Frances Jones and Margaret McCarthy sponsored the vote of thanks to the boys for the very enjoyable time which they had provided.

To find their supper partners the boys bought bow ties, of varied designs and hues, and then sought for the girl who had the matching tie pinned on, though, as guests of the evening, the girls were presented with their gay-colored decoration. The Trail Rangers added to their funds by thus taxing themselves for the ties, no admission fee being asked at the door. Gerald Todd is the Chief Ranger of the Senior Trail Rangers' Camp.

Salient Points of Bidding.

Auction: North's Spade take-out of Hearts while not justified by his Quick Trick values, was justified by his Probable Trick values with Spades the trump sufficient to warrant a re-bid in case South should make any further bid other than in support of Spades. East, though holding double stoppers in both of the suits adversely bid, as well as strength in Clubs, would bid No Trump were it not for his singleton Diamond. His negative double was made in hopes of a Diamond response, which was forthcoming. East then bid two No Trumps.

Contract: At Contract following East's bid of two No Trumps, West, with two Aces, ventured to bid three No Trumps.

The Play.

South correctly opens the King of Hearts. North plays the 9 and East holds up, playing the 2. South marks North's 9 of Hearts as a singleton, for had he either the Jack or Ace of Hearts, the two concealed cards higher than the 9, he would have played such card in response to his partner's King lead and had he the 8 of Hearts (the only other Heart outstanding) with the 9, he would have played the 8 rather than the 9. South, therefore, shifts suits and selects Clubs in view of Dummy's shortness in that suit. Declarer comes up at once with Dummy's Ace and leads a low Club to further the establishment of the suit, North discarding a Spade.

South, winning with the Jack of Clubs, now has an accurate reading of East's holding. Ten cards divided between Hearts and Clubs are accounted for, the Hearts inferentially by North's probable singleton and the Clubs positively by North's failure to follow to the second round. Of the three remaining cards, two almost to a certainty are Spades, for had East but one Spade he would hardly be justified in bidding two No Trumps, and moreover North would then necessarily have eight and with that number would not have stopped with a bid of one Spade. Therefore, to gain full advantage of the situation, in case East's probable singleton Diamond is an honor, South leads the King of Diamonds.

Declarer wins with Dummy's Ace and puts himself in with a Spade for another Club lead to effect the establishment of the suit. South wins the Club trick and then leading the 8 of Diamonds through West's 10 of Diamonds, secures three tricks in the suit, thus limiting the Declarer to one odd and setting him two tricks at Contract and one at Auction. But for the shift to Diamonds Declarer would have made game.

GOVERNOR OF UPPER CANADA PAID VISIT TO SETTLEMENT DURING THE WINTER OF 1826

His Excellency and Entourage Royally Entertained by Early Pioneers.

ASKS FOR SCHOOL MASTER

Claimed Name of City Was Suggested From Two Different Sources.

The market square was the scene of the naming of Peterborough, when the Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, Sir Peregrine Maitland, who had married the only daughter of the Duke of Richmond, later Governor-General of Canada, who afterwards died at Richmond, from hydrophobia, paid a visit to the new settlement in the winter of 1826.

At that time, everything was in the roughest pioneer condition; the log houses "sown broadcast", here and there, blackened tree stumps impeding the streets, the ox-waggon, the only vehicle, no church, scarce a store. However, the leading men of the village made every preparation in their power to receive the Governor with the respect due to his rank and character, and were seconded by all the inhabitants with the most loyal good will. An evergreen arch of triumph was constructed, and made gay with flag and Union Jack. The sleigh track was cleared carefully, and strewn with cedar boughs. A log building, of more pretensions as to size, at least, than the others, and situated on the place where the scales now stand, and which had been the residence of the Hon. Peter Robinson and of Captain Rubidge, and was known as "Government House," was made ready.

His Excellency brought with him as his companions in this journey several of the most illustrious men of that generation in Upper Canada: John Beverley Robinson, afterwards Baronet and Chief Justice, George G. Bethune, founder in Canada of the honorable family which has given to the English Church in Toronto its most able Bishop since the death of the founder of the diocese; the Hon. Zaccheus Burnham, father of a Church of England, rector of Peterborough, and grandfather of the present (in 1884) able and popular representative of one of the Peterborough Ridings in the House of Commons. With them was also a remarkable founder of an Upper Canadian settlement, the late Colonel Talbot. This gentlemen had, in his early manhood, been a fellow soldier of the great Duke of Wellington, and had risen to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel; but, from some unexplained reason—it is probable an unrequited attachment — left his native land, where he belonged to an ancient and noble house, the Talbots of Malahide, and withdrew to the wilds of Western Canada, where, adopting a celibate, but by no means ascetic, life, he occupied his remaining years in founding the Talbot settlement on Lake Erie. This he did with wisdom and generosity. He was a stern old Tory and High Churchman, and, although in later days he quarrelled with everyone who wore a black coat, he used, at one time, to read the Church service and a sermon every Sunday to the people, closing the sacred rite by the generous circulation of a stone whisky-jar. It need not be added that few congregations were more regular in their attendance. Colonel Talbot was one of a noteworthy class of pioneers and builders up of new settlements peculiar to those days of Upper Canada.

Crossed Rice Lake

The Governor and his suite crossed Rice Lake, where, although it was but early in the winter, the shallow water was already frozen hard enough to bear the sleighs. Thence they drove, on good "old-fashioned" snow roads, through Otonabee Township, nearly in the track of the present (1884) Cobourg and Peterborough Railway. On their way they halted at the comfortable residence where Captain Rubidge had made his home since 1819, and were entertained at a dinner with the respect due to their rank. On their arrival at the settlement they were met by the Hon. Peter Robinson, Colonel McDonnell, and all the leading men of the new settlement. They were then escorted to the large log building before mentioned, which had been prepared for their reception as well as the circumstances of their entertainers would permit. The Governor and his suite remained there for several days, during which they made themselves intimately acquainted with the circumstances of the settlement, and the needs and the wishes of the people.

During their stay they were waited on by the Hon. Thomas Aexander Stewart, who was a member of the Legislative Council of Upper Canada, Captain Rubidge, Robert Reid, and other gentlemen. His Excellency held a sort of state reception in the central room of the log building, which was an apartment of some size, and could accommodate a considerable number of visitors. The Governor in the place of honor at the farther end of the room, and the visitors, as deputation after deputation arrived to present their loyal addresses, were introduced to His Excellency, having entered at one door, and passing out through another.

Address Read

An address was presented by "the magistrates, clergy, and other inhabitants of the County of Northumberland," which bore testimony, after the usual complimentary phrases, to the good conduct of the Robinson immigrants during their stay in Cobourg; such good conduct, they said, "fully warranted the expectation of their becoming a valuable acquisition to the Province."

A deputation from the Township of Smith asked that a mill be erected in their township, at the public expense and an Irish schoolmaster, named Patrick Barragan, presented a loyal address on behalf of the Irish immigrants, who then formed the greater part of the Peterborough population. This asked for a Catholic priest and for schoolmasters to instruct the children. (Religion and learning-characteristics of the Irish race.) The Governor promised the mill for the Smith residents, which promise he took care should be promptly carried out. (Walter Wilson had commenced the address, with the words:

"We hae a mill, and we hae nae mill," when he faltered and asked a neighbor, Jacob Bromwell, to finish. The latter did so, explaining the cryptic phrase in the following words: "Saving your presence, sir, I have to get up at night to chew corn for the children," a vivid, if coarse, presentation of the hardships to which these early settlers were exposed, who did not even own a hand-mill.

The request for a priest was also complied with but the request for school teachers was not so palatable to the Family Compact, whose chief, John Beverley Robinson, had expressed himself to the effect that the less the lower grades were educated, the better it would prove for the community.

It is claimed that Mrs. Stewart, at a dinner-party held at the time of the Governor's visit, in 1826, suggested the name of Peterborough for the settlement, but Mulvany in his history says that at a meeting of the leading gentlemen of the neighborhood, held in 1827, the name was adopted in honor of the founder.

SIXTY-SEVEN YEARS AWAY FROM CITY

R. C. Brandon of Cannington, Ontario, Among Old Boys To Return.

MANAGES FARM.

W. H. Crowe of Fort William and Alfred Hudson of Pittsburgh Also Among Prodigals.

Many of the older faces that are returning to Peterborough for this week have been absent from home for long years, even though some of them were not so far away.

One of the most interesting of the returning Old Boys who came into the Registration Office yesterday was R. C. Brandon of Cannington, Ontario, who has not been back for sixty-seven years.

Born near Fenelon Falls in 1847, Mr. Brandon lived with his parents in Smith township during the early years of his life. His father, before that time, was manager of the Blyth farm of the Hon. John Lincoln and later farmed extensively in this neighborhood. To distinguish the family from others of the same name in the community, they were called the "Cooney" Brandons, Cooney being the name of Mr. Brandon's stepfather.

Mr. Brandon remembers much of the older town. He attended school at Elliott's school in Smith and also at the Douro school when Fred O'Hara taught, and the Armstrong school in Otonabee. His father farmed for five years on the Norwood road and left here with his family in 1862, when his son, R.C., was 15 years old.

Mr. Brandon's first wife was a Miss Junkin of the Verulam Junkins and his second wife, who accompanied him to the city, with their eleven-year-old daughter, Dorothy, was Miss Parliament of Prince Edward County, of United Empire Loyalist stock.

Mr. Brandon, who looks only about half of his eighty-two years, with eyes which are keen enough to see without the aid of spectacles, although these are used for reading, and only a slight deafness to mark his years, farmed for many years near Cannington and also conducted a pressed-brick establishment in Milton for three years. Although practically retired, he still actively manages a thousand-acre farm in Bexley township, Victoria County. He came here directly from attending a Christian Conference in Millbrook.

Other older residents who have returned for the celebrations are W. H. Crowe of Fort William, brother of Joseph Crowe, Brock street; Alfred Hudson of Pittsburgh; Mr. and Mrs. Jones of Ottawa, who left here twenty-six years ago; M. J. Tierney of Rochester, N.Y., one of the old-time lacrosse players, who was born and raised here and left about thirty years ago; Senator F. D. Long of Duluth, Minnesota, who went away thirty-five years ago, and is back now, visiting his brothers, Alex and Samuel Long; the three Hill brothers—Benny Hill of Saskatoon, Billy Hill of Orillia, and Joseph Hill of Mitchell, who played in the band here way back in 1881; Mrs. Laura L. Graham, formerly Miss Laura Campbell, who went from the city in 1883; Mr. McCall of Mount Forest, who is ninety-two years of age; Thomas Hanlon of Erie City, Pa., in his eighty-fifth year, who, since 1875, has been City Clerk of Erie City; Mrs. (Dr.) Willoughby, who was Miss Helen Hilliard and whose father was proprietor of Hilliard's Mills; Harold Cluxton of Chicago, whose wife was Miss Madge McGill; J. Scott, of Kansas City, a brother of Mr. W. Scott of East City, and a noted lacrosse player in the early eighties; Mr. Gladman of Toronto, absent from home for twenty-five years; Mr. Campbell of Hamilton, formerly of Keene, who is over eighty years of age, and went from this district over half a century back (Mr. Campbell drove his own car from Hamilton and is really eighty-two years "young"); Sergeant Major and Mrs. Edwards of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Fife of Edmonton, the former schoolmaster here in 1887, and George Miller of Toronto, a nephew of Colonel Miller, and just ten years his junior. Mr. Miller, who is in his seventy-fifth year, lived in Peterborough in 1876 and later, and has spent the past forty-five years in Toronto, where, as an architect, he was responsible for many of the public buildings of that city. He also drew the plans for the Neill Building here, for the Cereal Building that was destroyed by fire, and for additions to the Canadian General Electric Company. Mr. Miller was apprenticed here in his youth to George A. Cox and Comstock, cabinet makers, and Jim Hughes, contractor. He was born in Port Hope.

COUNTY IS BROKEN BY CHAIN OF LAKES

Country is Mecca for Hunting and Fishing Tourists.

The northern portion of the County of Peterborough contains chains of small lakes nearly one hundred in number Some of these possess names of historic character, being the names of Indian chiefs by whom they were claimed, with the land surrounding them, for hunting and fishing purposes. The first, worthy of mention, is Eels Lake, located in the northeast corner of the Township of Anstruther. It derives its name from "Eels," a subordinate chief of the Chippewas. It's outlet is Eels River, a deep and swift-running stream of much importance for milling and log-floating purposes, which flows directly south for about forty miles, until it enters Stony Lake, about seven miles east of Burleigh Falls. "Eels" was a brother of "Handsome Jack," a Chippewa chieftain for whose daughter, Polly Cow, a trio of islands in Stony Lake is named.

In the Township of Methuen, to the southeast of Jack's Lake, is Bottle Lake, so-called from the resemblance of its shape to that of a bottle. It empties itself into Kashabogamog Lake, also in Methuen township. "Kashabogamog" means "lake of many passages," and all Indian names is particularly appropriate. Its shape resembles very much a hand with wide outstretched fingers, each finger being a long and narrow piece of water. Some years ago, a wealthy young Englishman named Falassa met his death by drowning in this lake. This chain of lakes, together with Clear Lake three miles eastward, was formerly owned by John and Moses Taunchay, two Indian brothers who held it and the surrounding land for many years as hunting and fishing grounds. Massossago and Kitcheoum Lakes, in the southern portion of the Township of Cavendish, on the east side of the Buckhorn Road, were at one time the hunting and fishing grounds of a Chemong Lake Indian named Isaac Irons, whose squaw was a sister of Handsome Jack.

Loon Lake, situated in the center of the Township of Chandos, is a beautiful lake of very irregular shape, having no less than twelve distinct bays. The water is from twelve to twenty-five feet in depth, and is very clear and cool. its supply being principally derived from springs. It was originally called, by the Indians, Mongosogan; but, when the white man reached it, after making his way through the forests that lay between it and civilization, it received its present name out of respect to the thousands of loons that annually repaired to these waters, about the first of June, for the purpose of rearing their young.

Loon Lake has no inlet, except Tallan's Creek, which rises in Tallan's Lake, four miles north. Its only outlet is at the north-east angle, whence a small stream, called Paudash Creek, flows about a mile and a half into Deer River, thereby becoming a tributary to the Trent River. Notwithstanding the purity of the water of this lake, so far as can be ascertained, even from the oldest traditions of the Indians, it is entirely destitute of salmon, bass, maskinonge, and such like fish as are caught in the other lakes of the county. The few fish it contains are small, such as chub, perch, suckers, cat-fish and sun-fish. The perch alone are of a fair size, but, owing to being infested with a small worm which lies along the back bone, they are entirely unfit for food. About seven years ago (1884) the Government made an effort to stock this and other lakes in northern Peterborough with salmon. They deposited five million small fry of white fish and California salmon. Last fall, the first of the salmon that have been known to be caught were caught in Stony Lake, but none have been found in any of the other lakes. Those caught at Stony Lake weighed about five pounds. It is the opinion of Samuel Edgar, who resides on the south shore of the lake, and who made the deposits for the Government, that the greater portion of the fry were nearly dead when they were deposited, owing to the long distance they had been transported. The sand along the shores of the lake becomes as black as gunpowder after having been out of the water a short time. It is the opinion of many that the whole bottom of the lake is an iron deposit, iron ore being found in many parts of Chandos township. This may account for the scarcity and poor quality of the fish. The Indians claim that the lake contains plenty of salmon and bass, but that only an Indian can catch them. Many white men, who consider themselves as good fishermen as the Indians, have sought in vain for salmon and bass in this lake, and are now satisfied that it contains none whatever.

McNEIL FAMILY RE-UNITED HERE

Alexander McNeil, of Barrie, Was Born Here in 1842.

The re-union of Peterborough "Old Boys" Has brought a flood of memories to Alexander McNeil of Barrie, who was born here in 1842, the son of Alexander McNeil, a pioneer of the old town. In spite of his eighty-seven years Mr. McNeil was keenly interested in, and deeply moved by, the spirit of the re-union events and their recollections. He has been visiting his only surviving sister, Mrs. William Hudson, and was joined here by his sons, J. A. McNeil of Montreal, managing editor of the Montreal Gazette, and E. H. McNeil of Buffalo, and his daughters, Mrs. E. S. Redditt, of Barrie and Miss Kathleen McNeil of Toronto.

Because of his advanced age, Alexander McNeil had been doubtful of his strength to make this visit, especially during the crowded first days of the celebration, but the thousands of home comers offered to him an attraction which, as one of the Oldest Boys, he would not forego. He met many friends of his other days in Peterborough, and the re-union was to him an occasion which will never come to him again. He left this afternoon for his home in Barrie, highly pleased with his old town, and especially happy in the re-union of the members of his own family under such pleasant circumstances.

Mr. J. A. McNeil returned to Montreal Tuesday night.

FLIERS LEAVE FOR HOME PORT

British Naval Officers Accompanying Spaniards To Madrid.

GIVES FINAL SALUTE

GIBRALTAR, July 3. (C. P.) — Major Ramon Franco, true to a flying man's instinct, took to the air again to-day and made an aerial salute of farewell and thanks high above the British aircraft carrier Eagle, which had rescued him and his three companions from the Atlantic.

As the Spanish airman soared over Gibraltar, circled and swooped above the Eagle, the people of the town rushed to the streets, and a roar of good-bye cheers ascended.

Major Franco flew in the Jupiter, a Spanish military hydro airplane. The Jupiter had been flown from the Alcazares air field near Cartagena, where Major Franco started his flight to the Azores, bringing uniforms and clothing to the rescued flyers. No sooner did he see it than the Major borrowed it for his little excursion.

Captain N. F. Laurence on the Eagle and four others of the Eagle's officers this afternoon will go on the same train with the rescued men from Algeciras to Madrid where the Spanish government will officially welcome them as well as the flyers.

Captain Laurence, discussing the rescue, said: "Major Franco and his gallant companions endeared themselves to all on the Eagle during the homeward trip. We are really sorry that the time had to come for them to leave the Eagle."

MINOR ACCIDENTS.

Bent Fenders and Bumpers Extent of Most of the Collisions.

The great influx of cars yesterday caused a number of minor accidents, some of which were the result of unknown drivers who neither stopped nor inquired as to the damages incurred in the collisions.

W. O. Powell reports that he was driving south on Aylmer yesterday, when an unknown driver coming east from Dalhousie Street and on to Aylmer Street, collided with him, causing minor damages to the fenders of the car.

H. Lidall of 108 Lansdowne Street, also was struck by an unknown driver. Lidall was proceeding across the intersection at George and Simcoe Streets, when the other car collided with him. There was only small damages to the cars.

Harry Rowen was fixing a tire on an old car between Brock and Murray on Water Streets, when a car which was driven by H. Eastbrook, coming north on Water Street, struck him, inflicting a serious scalp wound and abrasions on his ankle. Witnesses state that the car was parked without lights in the darkest part of the street and that the visibility was poor. Dr. T. P. McCullough attended the injured man.

R. Clung, of 573 Rogers Street, was parked on Aylmer Street facing south when the auto in front of him began to back up and collided with the parked car, causing some damage to the fenders.

BIG FIELD OF HORSES ENTERED FOR RACES

Three-Day Racing Program Commences Thursday Afternoon at Exhibition Grounds

With the largest field of horses ever seen in Peterborough, a racing program has been prepared for the last three afternoons of the week, that promises to draw devotees of the King's sport from far and near.

Vic Fowler, well-known Peterboroughonian, and prominent among racing circles, has charge of the racing features and has spared neither time nor trouble in making it one of the outstanding events of the week. The program shows two races scheduled for each afternoon, commencing Thursday. Each race will have a purse of $250, and as an added attraction to the "turf boys", Coulter Brothers of Toronto are sending down a "cooler" or horse blanket for the horse making the fastest time during the three days.

Many of the horses are already on the grounds, and include four from Goderich, owned by Dr. Whitley; two owned by W. Park, Toronto; and two from Caledonia, owned by W. Hillick. Another ten are expected to arrive this afternoon to swell the stables further.

TO-NIGHT"S PROGRAM AT EXHIBITION PARK

Toronto Transportation Band Will Give Special Concert—Danny Simons Will Repeat.

The program at the Exhibition Grounds will be one of the best of the series. Hoaglan's Hippodrome will again give its clean and clever performance—the Toronto Transportation Band, kindly furnished to-day by the Toronto organization of Old Boys will furnish a special program. The T.T.C. Band is the finest concert bands in Canada.

Danny Simons will again put on his number which made such a hit last night. The summer carnival is in full swing and there is plenty of fun and amusement.

WEDDING BELLS

CUNNINGHAM—THROOP

A very pretty wedding took place on Saturday, June 29, at 10 a.m. in the new Mark Street Church, when Alberta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Throop, 362 Burnham street, became the bride of Lorne Cunningham, son of Mr. John Cunningham, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. A. E. Thornley. The Church was very prettily decorated for the occasion with arches of flowers and bells.

The bride looked lovely in a gown of satin crepe with bridal veil and carried a bouquet of white roses. Miss Helen Throop, sister of the bride was bridesmaid and wore a pale pink georgette gown and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Albert E. Rundle supported the groom.

The groom's gift to the bride was a bar pin with diamond setting and to the bridesmaid, a bar pin with pearl setting. During the signing of the register, Mrs. T. Cunningham, aunt of the groom, sang "The Crown."

After the ceremony, the guests repaired to the home of the bride where a buffet luncheon was served and many expressions of goodwill and best wishes for future happiness were heard on every side, among these being a cablegram from England from a cousin of the bride, Mr. Sidney Wand. The wedding cake was the gift of Mrs. Ipsa M. Jaynes, in memory of the wedding cake the bride's grandmother gave her.

The happy couple left on the noon train for Ottawa and Montreal amid showers of confetti and on their return they will reside at 624 Charlotte street.

SPANISH FLYERS GIVEN ROUSING WELCOME HOME

Five British Officers Accompanying Men To Special Train To Madrid.

RECEIVE BIG OVATION.

Huge Crowd Sweeps Police Guards and Porters Aside At Station.

MADRID, Spain, July 4, (C.P.) — The Spanish transatlantic flyers and the five British officers of H.M.S. Eagle, who saved them after being seven days lost in mid-Atlantic, near the Azores, came to Madrid together on a special train from Algeciras this morning, to be greeted with an ovation such as this capital rarely has seen.

Madrid sleeps late ordinarily but to-day at dawn thousands were crowded around the railway station waiting to see Major Ramon Franco, his three companions and their British rescuers. When finally the train arrived from Algeciras (a small Cadiz city opposite Gibraltar) they broke through the police lines and crowded on to the station platform.

Porters Swept Aside.

The human avalanche swept aside the train porters, employees, and passengers attempting to alight, and kicked luggage from the platforms. Their roars drowned out all other sound, even the engine whistles and the brass bands. The large official representation which had planned dignified greeting, was lost in the shuffle.

Outside the station the crush was just as bad, with the crowds extending back almost solidly for half a mile. The aviators and the British guests, who included Captain Laurence, D.S.O., and Lieutenant R. A. Kilroy of the Eagle, were shoved through to automobiles, and were driven to the Palace Hotel.

Major Franco, his three companions and the officers of the Eagle arrived at the Royal Palace shortly before one o'clock, and were received by Queen Victoria in a brief audience. Her Majesty felicitated the flyers upon their rescue and warmly thanked the British officers.

BRIDGE IS OPENED.

HAMILTON, July 4. — Temporary repairs have been made to the bascule bridge over the canal at Burlington Beach, and it was opened late yesterday afternoon to pedestrian and motor traffic.

The bridge will be kept in operation and permanent repairs will be made when navigation closes in December.

GUEST IS BEATEN BY JOE WRIGHT IN FIRST ROUND

Members of Toronto Argonauts Crack in Last Ten Yards of Race.

LEE IS ELIMINATED.

At One Point Guest Had Lead of Length Over Diamond Sculls Holder.

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, July 4.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Physical collapse to-day cost Jack Guest his chance of advancing to the semi-finals of the diamond sculls and avenging a defeat by Joe Wright, fellow-oarsman of the Toronto Argonaut Club, last year. Within ten yards of the post, Guest stopped sculling in the quarter final today, his strength sapped by the terrific efforts he had put forward to keep in front of the Diamond Sculls holder throughout the race.

Guest at one point had a lead of a length and a quarter, gained by gruelling work from the start. He had some lead still when near the end Wright pressed hard. But when he collapsed 10 yards from the finish Wright raced past to cross the line half a length in front. Wright had to be lifted from his shell, though Guest managed to paddle back.

Besides Wright, semi-finalists tomorrow will be L. Gunther, Holland, Viscount Tiverton, and either T. D. Collett or F. Bradley.

Lee Eliminated

Gunther to-day eliminated R. T. Lee, Diamond Sculls winner in 1927 and finalist with Wright last year. Viscount Tiverton won by default from H. R. A. Edwards, who chose to row with the London R.C. in their match with Toronto Argonauts' eight to decide a dead heat.

The holder of the famous amateur sculling trophy defeated Guest by half a length in 8 minutes 50 seconds, in a race that was second in interest only in the coming final itself.

Before the race Wright said: "I am feeling fine. This weather suits me, though for comfort I like it dry." It had rained all morning and the Henley scene was desolate. A strong headwind slowed up all the competitors and accounted for the comparatively slow times in races that were keenly showed, in contrast to the one-sided victories of the opening day.

Canadians Row Dead Heat

London Rowing Club Eliminates Toronto Argonauts in Preliminary.

WIN BY QUARTER LENGTH.

Fast Time of Seven Minutes and Eight Seconds is Recorded.

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, Eng., July 4.—(Canadian Press Cable.)—London Rowing Club eliminated Toronto Argonauts in the preliminaries of the Grand Challenge Cup to-day, after rowing a dead heat earlier.

The English eight won by a quarter length in the fast time of seven minutes and eight seconds.

The race was a hard struggle all the way with a strong wind blowing dead against the crews.

London had nearly a length lead at the half-way mark, but the Argonauts spurted and reduced the margin to a quarter length. Then in the last fifty yards they struck a thirty-six gait stroke and got on even terms with the London crew and both finished rowing strongly.

The re-row of the dead heat between Argonauts of Toronto and the London Rowing Club earlier in the day was put on the end of the list on account of the race between H. R. A. Edwards and Viscount Tiverton.

The intense determination of the London Rowing Club to progress at the expense of their strong Canadian opponents was shown in the fact that Edwards, a former winner, sacrificed his chance for Diamond sculls to Viscount Tiverton. Edwards is a member of the London Club eight. Other members of the London eight who were also representing their club in the two-fold plate were scratched from this event in order to be at full strength for the match with Argonauts.

The dead heat this morning followed on a dead heat in the Silver Goblets preliminaries, the doubles event. The two in succession made Henley history.

MAY MARRY GERMAN PRINCE.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, July 4.—There were reports in court circles to-day that Princess Ileana was about to become engaged to a German prince, whose name has not yet been disclosed.

CARRIED FIRST MAIL IN 1864 ACROSS RIVER TO ASHBURNHAM

H. N. Carver, Son of Peterborough's' Second Postmaster, Returns to City.

Prince's Visit Is Vividly Recalled By Peterborough's Old Boy.

H. N. Carver, who carried the first mail across the river to Ashburnham in 1864, is one of the returned old boys in Peterborough this week. Mr. Carver now lives in Caledonia, Ontario near Hamilton and is visiting his nephew, Harry Carver of this city during this week.

Forty-seven years ago Mr. Carver left Peterborough and has travelled widely since that time in the Northwest of Canada and in a great many sections of the United States, going as far as California. For the last few years he has lived in retirement in Caledonia.

Mr. Carver was born in the town of Peterborough in 1847 in a house on George street, situated on what is now the busiest section of the street. His father, S. J. Carver was the second postmaster in Peterborough, getting his appointment from the Postmaster General who at that time was situated in England.

Attended Old Grammar School

He got his schooling in the only school in the town, the old grammar school opposite Allen's hotel near the Hunter street bridge. The boys in the school in those days, he relates, were not very serious in their studies and scheduled often to go up to the dam and watch the lumbermen bring the logs over.

While attending school he used to carry the mail from the town post office to the branch post office in Ashburnham, then in R. D. Roger's store on Hunter street. He was the first to hold this position. Mail came in those days by stage, mainly, and also on the old railroad from Cobourg across the bridge over Rice Lake to Ashburnham.

day was one of great celebration. Two hundred scholars had trained for a long time to be able to sing the National Anthem for the prince.

The occasion of the American Civil War is still fresh in his memory and he remembers some of the local men who went to fight in it to earn the high bounties paid by individuals in the States who thus escaped from being forced into service.

The scene that greeted Mr. Carver on his return to Peterborough yesterday was one amazingly different from that of a half century ago. Peterborough then was a widely scattered town, he says. The east part of the town was mostly swamp and bush. Charlotte street was a bad street as the lumbermen made the street their headquarters.

For a considerable time Mr. Carver lived on a farm about two miles from the city. His brother Sam still holds this farm.

Tells of Prince's Visit

Mr. Carver's memory is a treasure-house of old memories concerning people and happenings in the early days of this city. He tells of the visit of the Prince of Wales who was later King Edward. The Prince came up on the old railway across Rice Lake and proceeded across the river to the dock close to the present situation of the gas works. He rode in the carriage owned by Mayor Charles Perry which was hauled by a pair of prized white horses. The

MAN FOUND DEAD AFTER ALLEGED "WINE PARTY"

Toronto Citizen Fractured His Skull on Way Home from a Party

TORONTO, Ont., July 4 (C.P.).—Joseph Coleman, 25, Toronto, was found dead in bed at his home last night. Death was attributed to a fractured skull which Coleman received in a street fight which followed an alleged "wine party," Tuesday night.

Henry McCann, 26, a pal of Coleman's, is being held by police on a charge of manslaughter. Police said the fight started after the wine had been consumed and McCann was taking his friend home. After the quarrel both men went into Coleman's home, and although the latter was bleeding at the mouth he was not considered too badly hurt.

Indian Mother Slays Bear With Small Axe

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., July 4.—While Frances Zuckigesick, an Indian woman, of Franz, carrying a papoose, was visiting traps near her home she encountered a bear and two cubs, and the beast attacked her. The woman armed only with a small axe, and hampered by the infant, accepted the challenge, and in a 15-minute battle killed the bear, escaping herself with slight scratches. The animal was a large one. The cubs escaped into the bush. At Mile 167 on the Algoma Central Railway Dan Cliffe and Emil Desjardins set snares for bears that were visiting the boarding cars in which they lived. No bears fell into the snares, but one, discovered by the men near one of the traps, was chased by them into it and was killed with an axe.

POLICE SEIZE OPIUM CRAFT

Smugglers Had a Collapsible Canvas Boat To Transport Drugs From Liner.

LOWERED THROUGH PIER.

VANCOUVER, B.C., July 4. — (Canadian Press).—The Royal Canadian Mounted Police have in their possession the latest product of the opium smugglers' ingenuity in getting their drugs into Canada. It is a collapsible five foot canvas boat. The craft was lowered through a hole in the floor of the pier along side the liner Empress of Asia and in the dead of night was used, the police state, to smuggle to shore narcotics which were in the possession of a Chinese confederate on board the ship. When not in use the boat was raised above the water among the piers.

The police had the boat on hand preparatory to the trial of Fred Brocks, 23, and Joseph Knowles, 22 both of whom pleaded guilty in county court before Judge H. T.

FREIGHT CARS ARE DERAILED

Engineer Runs Over Derail At Eastern Approach To Canal Bridge.

EXCURSION HALTED.

Eight cars of a way freight went into the ditch at the eastern approach to the Canal Bridge on the Canadian Pacific Railway at about nine o'clock this morning as the train passed over an open derail.

The train was a regular freight from Havelock to Toronto and was loaded with stone and pulp wood. Mat McMahon, bridge tender at the bridge, was about to open the span for the steamer Stoney Lake which was approaching on an excursion over the Lift-Locks and set the semaphores against the approaching train. For some unknown reason Engineer S. Anderson passed over the derail, the engine and two cars crossed the switch safely while eight cars which were following were thrown into the ditch on the south side of the track. One of the cars, carrying gravel, was completely demolished, while the others were not extensively damaged. Conductor E. Rosevear was in charge of the train.

An auxiliary wrecker was called from Havelock and soon arrived at the scene. The wrecking crew began at once to build a temporary track around the tracks which are torn up for a distance of about two hun-

FAMILY OF SIX BRUTALLY SLAIN

"Faith Healer," Wife and Four Young Children Murdered.

MAN UNDER ARREST.

DETROIT, Mich., July 4 (Canadian Press).—Discovery of a stained, razor-edged knife, a short axe and a pair of freshly washed shoes in the barn of Angelo Depoli, 34, led to his arrest late last night in connection with the slaying yesterday of Benny Evangelista, "Divine Prophet," of a religious cult, his wife and four children.

Depoli, held for investigation, admitted acquaintance with the family but denied any connection with the murders. Police said the knife found in his barn, a curved blade of the type commonly used in cutting bananas from the stalk, was freshly stained with what appeared to be blood. A chemical analysis of the spots was to be made to-day.

DETROIT, July 4.—(C.P.)—Slain, police believe, by a madman, the bodies of Benjamin Evangelista, 43 years old, known as a "faith healer," his wife Satina, aged 40, and their four children, aged 8, 6, 4 and 18th months, were found at noon yesterday in their home at 3587 St Aubin Avenue.

The father's head was severed from the body. The mother and children were found in bedrooms a floor above, their heads crushed by repeated blows of an axe or other heavy instrument.

A perfect fingerprint of the probable slayer was obtained by police finger-print experts. It is of an index finger, and is so clear that there can be no doubt of its identity if the right person is caught.

Police theory is that the killing was done by some one intimate with Evangelista, and probably sent insane by his fanatical teachings. The slain man was a faith healer and would go into trances between midnight and 3 a.m., neighbors told police. Every available member of the police and Detective Bureau has been put on the case, and an intensive search for the killer is under way.

Furnacemen Claim Future Is Bright

LONDON, July 4 (Canadian Press Cable).—"We are bidding good-bye to the terribly miserable past, and the iron and steel trade is coming into its own," declares a report issued to-day by the National Union of Blast Furnacemen. Furnaces in blast today number 162, against 115 a year ago.

It is also reported that ironmasters in the north-east of England are refusing both domestic and foreign orders as their stocks are depleted and their output is contracted for until the end of September. A shortage of coke and the difficulty of obtaining skilled iron and stone miners are advanced as the reasons for difficulty in increasing the output.

TWO CARS ARE TOTAL WRECK

Automobiles Collide At Corner of Aylmer and McDonnel.

NO ONE INJURED.

Two cars were almost completely demolished in a crash at the corner of McDonnel and Aylmer Streets at 11.30 this morning. Luckily no one was injured, but the cars were so badly damaged that repair men stated that it would take a week to recondition them, and even then they would never be the same.

Allan Lewis, son of J. Lewis, 568 Aylmer Street, was driving south on Aylmer Street, and he had reached the centre of the intersection at McDonnel when struck amidships by a car coming east on McDonnel Street, driven by John P. Fagen of Duluth Minnesota. Fagen, Lewis states, was travelling at a high rate of speed and had neglected to stop at the stop sign.

The force of the impact carried the cars twenty feet and up over the curb. Fagen's car swung around until it was facing west, and turned over. The glass in both cars was broken, but no one was injured.

The American car had its front driven in, cracking many parts of the engine, while the car of Lewis' was left almost a total wreck.

WINDSOR TRACK MOB DISPUTES DECISION OF RACE OFFICIALS

Several Thousand Bettors Storm Judge's Stand at Devonshire.

STARTER KNOCKED DOWN.

Brawl Is Caused By a Close Finish of the Horses.

WINDSOR, July 4.—Several thousand horse-race devotees, enraged at what they considered a "raw deal" rioted after the seventh race at Devonshire Track, Windsor, last night, assaulted G. R. Palmer, the starter, apparently in the belief he was one of the judges, and staged a heated free-for-all combat with stablemen and track attaches. Mr. Palmer was knocked down by an unidentified assailant, who, in retaliation, was badly kicked and beaten by stablemen and was arrested. He was released when Mr. Palmer refused to file a complaint against him.

The melee started when the judges declared Cogwheel the winner of the last race and placed Penlight, a favorite, second. Penlight apparently was overtaking Cogwheel when the horses swept past the clubhouse. From the clubhouse Penlight appeared to be ahead when the wire was reached, about one-sixteenth of a mile away. Cogwheel, ridden by G. Horn, is owned by C. N. Kelly, and Penlight was ridden by C. Phillip and is owned by Mrs. W. L. Brodie.

Mobbed By Bettors.

Immediately the decision was announced, the crowd in the stands began to shout, boo and hiss. About 15 minutes after the first dissatisfaction was noticed, a large section of the crowd surged toward the judges' stand. Mr. Palmer had come from the starting line to the judges' stand to watch the finish of the race, and was standing by the stand when the crowd reached him.

house and the betting ring.

Apparently he was mistaken for one of the judges, for the crowd began to menace him, and one man hit him in the back of the head. Stablemen and track attendants came running to his rescue, and for a few moments there was some feverish fist-fighting, with but little serious damage. Then Mr. Palmer's assailant was thrown down and dragged through the fence between the club-

U. S. Citizens Celebrate 153rd Independence Day

NEW YORK, N.Y., July 4 (Canadian Press).—The United States became one huge playground today as millions of citizens throughout the land turned to holiday pursuits to celebrate the 153rd anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

The order of the day in observance of a "new fashioned" Fourth appeared to be to go somewhere, with seaside, lake and mountain resorts the favorite objectives.

Airplanes, for the first time to a noticeable extent, shared with railroads, steamships, bus lines and private motor cars, in the task of transporting the legions of pleasure-seekers.

GOOD SAMARITAN RUSHES TO SCENE OF ACCIDENT FINDS VICTIM IS HIS SMALL SON

Anguished Father Faints At Discovery During Ride To Hospital.

STRUCK BY TROLLEY.

Little Lad Has Every Chance of Recovering, Doctors State.

TORONTO, July 4 (Canadian Press).—An organ-grinder with a tiny monkey perched on the music box went marching across Queen Street near Ontario Street last night. Three-year-old Carl Kipploff, with eyes fastened intently on the organ and the dancing monkey, toddled across the street in its trail.

A westbound automobile, with brakes screaming, jarred to a stop to let the boy go past, and Carl toddled a little faster, past the front of the stationary auto—and right under the wheels of an eastbound street car. In the space of a few seconds a crowd of men and women surrounded the scene and someone crawled under the car and dragged the crushed body of the unconscious lad to a place of safety. His right leg was hanging in shreds and blood was spouting from the open veins.

J. J. Weston, of 56 Bolton Avenue, swiftly but gently taking the crumpled figure into his arms, rushed to the nearest car, a limousine with a Michigan license number. A man and a woman in the car drew back with shudders when Weston rushed up, blood streaming from the mangled leg on to his clothing.

"Don't bring him in here," the woman told Weston.

"I asked him to drive the boy to hospital," Weston said, in later telling of the accident. "The man in the driver's seat said: 'Take him to another car. Don't put him in here.'"

Still holding the boy in his arms, Weston dashed across to the north side of Queen Street, where his own car, a sedan, was parked. P. C. Doolittle of No. 4 Station, ran across with him. Curious bystanders milled around the scene and all traffic was stopped.

Father Faints

"Open the door" Weston cried, and one of the men standing by obeyed. The police constable sprang into the driver's seat and Weston climbed into the rear and deposited the boy gently on the seat. The man who had opened the door of the car jumped in the back just as the automobile started off.

Then occurred something which Weston later said he would never forget. While the automobile went whizzing along Queen street against red traffic lights and with the horn sounding continuously, the man who had opened the door of the car leaned over and looked at the unconscious figure of the child. The face was turned away from him and the man, curious to see the features of the boy, gently turned the face towards him. A scream of anguish burst from his lips which was heard even above the roar of the engine. "My boy, my boy," he sobbed and fainted away beside the tiny form of his son.

Weston, who all the while was holding his hand over the hip gland f the right leg to prevent further bleeding, shouted to P. C. Doolittle, but the latter intent on driving as fast as possible without becoming involved in an accident, paid no heed. Stationary street cars were passed on the wrong side, red lights failed to even slow down the car, and the warning roar of the horn brought other cars to the side of the street to allow the car to pass.

St. Michael's Hospital, the nearest to the scene of the accident, was reached in safety, and Karil was immediately taken to the emergency ward and the fight to save his life started.

With the right leg hanging in shreds, almost completely severed, it was at once seen that the limb would have to be amputated and the operation was carried out without delay.

The almost frantic father hovered around the emergency ward and when it was found necessary to have a transfusion, he immediately volunteered to give some of his blood to save the life of his boy. Weston also offered his blood, but a test showed it to be too weak, and the doctors accepted the father's offer.

The transfusion was successful and the lad has a good chance to recover. He is still in a critical state, but the prompt work of P.C. Doolittle and John Weston, who were warmly commended for their share in the case, gave the doctors reason to hope that it would not be in vain.

Peter Kiproff, father of the boy, owns a restaurant at 260 Queen East, and is well known in the east-end of the city. Weston is the owner of the Keystone Rubber Corporation with stores in various parts of the city. Patrol-Sergeant Gillard of No. 4 Police Division, was in charge of the police investigation.

CHICAGO TO BERLIN AIRPLANE REACHES REMI LAKE IN ONTARIO IN ONE FULL DAY OF FLIGHT

Parker Cramer With Pilot and Navigator Off To Good Start.

BLAZING NEW ROUTE.

Aviators and Sponsors Hope To Establish Far North Way To Europe.

MOONBEAM, Ont., July 4 (Canadian Press).—Blazing the trail of an air route which will place Ontario on the direct highway of Europe-America aviation, the 'Untin' Bowler landed at Remi Lake at 6.50 p.m. The huge amphibian completed the first day of its scheduled five-day flight to Berlin on time.

The 'Untin' Bowler is not out to make non-stop records. It is carrying the first mail across the Atlantic and is out to demonstrate that the air route over the roof of the world is the commercial route of the future.

If the dreams of Parker Cramer, co-pilot, and sponsors of the flight succeed, Remi Lake, remote air post in far northern Ontario, will become an important port for air liners. Cramer attempted a trip over the same route in a land machine a year ago, but barely escaped with his life.

Remi Lake is eight miles from Moonbeam and there is located a Provincial Government forestry patrol station. The airmen will spend the night at Remi Lake, the plane will be re-fueled and a start on the next leg of the northward flight will be made early this morning.

No Communications.

The aviators will find no means of communication at the other Canadian posts on their route as there are no radio stations at Great Whale and Rupert House in the Hudson Bay territory.

The giant amphibian, owned by the Chicago Tribune, left Chicago yesterday morning carrying Bob Gast, pilot; Parker D. Cramer, co-pilot, and Navigator Robert Wood, aviation editor of the Tribune.

When the 'Untin' Bowler arrived at Remi last evening, approximately 1000 miles of the perilous journey had been completed.

Two stops were made en route, one at Milwaukee and the other at Sault Ste. Marie, where clearance was made through the Canadian Customs.

Leaving Remi Lake in the morning, the airmen expect to fly direct to Great Whale, a distance of 400 miles, or if this is found not feasible, a stop will be made at Rupert House, 200 miles north of Remi.

Then the journey takes them to Mount Evans, Greenland, by way of Cape Chidley, thence to Reykjavik, Iceland, and from there direct to Berlin.

Pay-If-You-Wish Busses Operating On London Streets

LONDON, Ont., July 4.—Having failed to obtain a license from the city to operate a line of busses J. W. Levitt today placed a bus on a route, and the payment of the fare is voluntary. Operating in this way way he does not need a license. Levitt says that the London Street Railway is operating busses and charging fares, though it has no bus license. If the present venture succeeds on a voluntary basis, he plans to place additional busses in operation.

LLOYD GEORGE BACKS BALDWIN AGAINST PLANS

Premier Ramsay MacDonald Would Take Time of Private Members.

TO STUDY UNEMPLOYMENT.

LONDON, July 4. — (Canadian Press Cable).—The Opposition Whip was not slow to crack when Premier Ramsay MacDonald announced in Parliament this afternoon that the Government proposed to take up all the time usually allotted to private members' business until Christmas. This was necessary to enable the Government to get on with essential national business, the Prime Minister said ,especially that relating to unemployment.

Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Conservative Leader, contended the period was unduly long and the private members' time should not be taken up any longer than the end of July.

Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George on behalf of the Liberals also strongly pressed the same point.

Premier MacDonald consequently withdrew his motion with a view to putting it forward in amended form.

Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, then protested a statement by the Prime Minister that there would be time enough for Hon. Philip Snowden to answer questions on the budget to-morrow. Mr. Snowden then said he did not wish to withhold information from the House and said he would not ask the House to proceed with the second part of the last budget of Mr. Churchill. This section had purposely been left over by Mr. Churchill for inclusion in the second finance bill.

In the morning a selection was rendered by a male chorus and a beautiful solo by Mrs. T. Cunningham of Orillia was thoroughly enjoyed. Mrs. Greenslade presided at the organ with marked ability.

In the evening the Old Time choir was a treat and solos by Mrs. (Dr.) Kindred and Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton, were splendidly rendered. CATTLE, GRAIN, PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, July 4.—The fresh supply of cattle at the Union Stock yards yesterday was light, and with 800 left over added the offering at the opening amounted only to 1,200 head. Trade was fairly brisk at the start, with bids on killers generally 25 to 30 cents a hundredweight up for the week.

Early trade showed butcher steers selling from 9 1-4 to 11 3-4 cents a pound, with choice heifers up to 11 1-2 cents.

Choice cows brought 9 1-2 cents a pound, with other butchers downward to 6 1-2 cents.

Bulls were firm at 8 1-2 to 9 cents a pound for the best, with bolognas selling from 7 1-4 to 7 3-4 cents a pound.

Store cattle offering was light and trade was quiet. Salesmen were asking 9 1-4 to 9 3-4 for good stockers and 9 1-2 to 10 cents for good feeding steers.

The calf market was firm at Tuesday's advance. Good to choice veals sold from 13 1-2 to 14 1-2 cents a pound. Grassers brought from 7 1-2 to 8 1-2 cents. The supply for the week was light and small calves were in good demand.

Lambs sold steady at last week's level with the bulk of these bringing 16 cents a pound and light culls selling from 11 to 14 cents.

Sheep were unchanged at Tuesday's slight decline. Good light ewes were worth from 6 to 6 3-4 cents a pound, good heavies from 5 to 5 3-4, and culls 3 to 4 cents.

Hogs were a light supply and salesmen were holding Tuesday's and today's arrivals at 12 cents f.o.b. and 13 1-4 cents w.o.c. for select with prospects of a late settlement at that level. Road hogs were quoted at 12 3-4 cents for select.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, July 4.—Wheat yesterday scored an advance of more than 5c, touching the highest level for the crop season. Extremely heavy trading featured the day's movement, and heavy bullish sentiment sent prices soaring. At the close advances of 5 3-8c to 3 1-8c were recorded.

Reports of crop conditions in United States, Argentine and other wheat growing countries were pessimistic. These reports, coupled with dry weather throughout the Canadian West with no prospects of rain for some time, resulted in the heavy bull movement.

Parts of Alberta reported temperatures of 102 and 100 degrees in the shade.

Cash wheat trading was active, with prices about 1-8c to ½c higher. Oats prices advanced about 1½c; barley, ¾c, and flax and rye also recorded gains. Trading in the coarse grains was fairly heavy.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 4.—Advancing rapidly in the late dealings yesterday, wheat closed strong at the highest point reached since May 31. The maximum intervening gain showed from that date is 25½c a bushel.

Wheat prices here closed 17-8c to 2¼c above Tuesday's finish. Corn closed ¾c to 1 1-8c up, oats ½c to ¾c advance, and provisions varying from 12c decline to 5c gain.

Urgent need of rain over a constantly increasing area Northwest and West gave the wheat market an evident upward trend yesterday from the outset, but it was only in the closing hour that prices here began to soar in earnest.

Corn prices reflected the advance of wheat, and also were influenced by unfavorable corn crop reports from sections between Chicago and Dayton, Ohio. Oats were sensitive to adverse news about the oats crop Northwest. December oats here established a new high-price record for the season.

In line with hog values, the provision market held about steady.

TORONTO PRODUCE.

TORONTO, July 4.—Trading on the local wholesale butter market yesterday was of a fairly active nature and all supplies to arrive were moved freely into consumptive channels. Receipts during the past day or so have dropped off considerably from the peak of last week and production is stated to be considerably lower than at this time last year. The market on the whole exhibited no unusual signs outside of the comparative lightness of arrivals locally and prices held steady on both grades. No. 1 finest creamery was quoted at 38c. per pound and No. 2 creamery at 37c. per pound.

The local wholesale cheese market continued to exhibit the same lassitude of recent sessions, and prices held quiet in dull trading at from 19c. to 19¼c. per pound for the No. 1 large, colored, paraffined and Government-graded variety.

Conditions on the local wholesale egg market was very similar yesterday to those prevailing during the past week, with very little activity in evidence and receipts still coming in in quite sufficient quantities to easily answer all demands. Some dealers report that it has been rather difficult to move supplies with any amount of freedom lately, but until consumption and storing picked up they could see no prospect of an early relief unless a spell of exceedingly hot weather curtailed production considerably. Quotations to country shippers for ungraded eggs, delivered and cases returned, are as follows: Fresh extras, 27c. to 28c. per dozen; fresh firsts, 25c. per dozen; fresh seconds, 21c. to 22c. per dozen.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, July 4. Prices on the local cash grain market were generally marked up yesterday, the opening revision being made following the improved price trend in the main markets of the continent. No. 2 and No. 3 Canadian Western oats were eliminated from the price list while Argentine corn was substituted for American yellow corn. Winter wheat flour was advanced 10 to 20c per barrel, while spring wheat fleur advanced another 20c per barrel.

The local egg market was unchanged to-day, with receipts totalling 5223 cases.

Wholesale prices of cheese were lowered here to-day owing to a lack of interest from English importers. The local demand was also dull and values were reduced to the following levels: No. 1 Ontario white, 18 1-2c to 18 5-8c per pound; No. 1 Ontario colored, 18 3-4c per pound; No. 1 Quebec white, 18c per pound; No. 1 Quebec colored, 18 1-8c per pound. Receipts amounted to 15,163 boxes.

The butter market continued steady at 37c to 37 1-4c per pound for Eastern Townships No. 1 pasteurized in a wholesale way. To the retail trade prices were 39c for solids and 40c for prints. Receipts were 1208 boxes.

Potatoes ruled firm while live poultry prices were a little higher.

Prices for new potatoes from the South were: $6 for No. 1 quality per barrel of 165 pounds net; $4 for No. 2, and $3 for culls. New Brunswick Green Mountains were 50c to 55c per 90 pounds in bulk.

Loud Crash Throws Scare Into Villagers

CAMPBELLFORD, July 4. — (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Someone remarked that the Peterborough Old Home Week celebration was being heard here, when there was a loud crash about four o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Business men and others on Front Street South dashed out to see a crowd collecting in front of the Herald Building. The general opinion in Fred Lang's barber shop was that it was a motor smash. Then the true facts of the case came to light and the reason the plumbers looked so frightened was divulged. Part of a brick chimney on the Bell Telephone block had come tumbling down on the tin roof of the A. E. Burgess plumbing establishment next door. Some of the bricks bounced, apparently and shattered a side window in the Herald office. Fortunately the bricks chose the only sash that held a double window and the inner panes were not damaged. This being all the excitement, the post master, undertaker, plumbers, printers, reporters, barbers and shoemakers and etc., continued on their routine rounds.

WHAT LUBRICATION IS TO MACHINERY--

Gum-Dipping IS TO TIRES

As the film of oil prevents friction of metal parts, so does the film of rubber surrounding every fibre and strand of Firestone cord, protect it against heat and friction within the cord itself due to continual flexing.

The Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping represents the greatest achievement in tire building. By thus saturating and insulating the cord fiber with liquid rubber, thousands of additional miles of service have been built into Firestone Tires.

This means that you get most mileage for least money—with greatest safety, comfort and satisfaction—when you equip your car with Firestones.

MILITARY TRAINING.

Figures given out by the Department of National Defense in regard to militia training this summer hardly justify the opposition of the Woodsworths and the MacPhails to military training in Canada.

It has been found possible to provide a little instruction in camp for only 35,000 men throughout the whole Dominion, the period of training in no case exceeding thirteen days.

With the permanent forces of the country numbering fewer than 3,400 men, the amount of time available for drilling the militia under camp conditions can by no possible stretching of the imagination be described as adequate.

In fact, the schedule of military training would seem to prove beyond a doubt that the Dominion has gone farther toward the goal of disarmament than any other leading nation in the world, and to show that pacificists in Parliament are tilting at windmills when they oppose the scanty amount of militia training that is authorized.

The simple fact is, that the militia regiments have been pared down to a veritable skeleton, and were it not for the patriotism and generosity of officers who help finance the cost of operating their own corps, such units as the Toronto Scottish, which made such an impression here this week, would be impossible.

A TIME-HONORED EVENT.

Happily Old Home Week is not being allowed to pass without a revival of that time-honored event, always a feature of such celebrations, that is known by the unpoetic but apt name of "shirt-tail" parade.

The very name will recall to older citizens the climax of many an old-time re-union, for no jollification in the days gone by was considered complete without such a function.

The fact that the night-shirt, as an article of male sleeping attire, has seen better day—or rather nights—makes no difference.

It may be that pyjamas will be favored by the majority of to-night's revellers, but what does that matter so long as the parade offers a chance to supply an atmosphere of merriment and fun that has not been so far sufficiently accenuated among the activities of this memorable week?

To-night's parade should be a classic in point of noise and entertainment; it is surely not necessary to point out that property should be respected and rowdyism should not be allowed to spoil the fun of what promises to be the outstanding amusement feature of the whole week.

A POLICE CHANGE.

The County Council has been well advised in deciding to bring law enforcement in the county under the control of the Provincial Police.

The new system, already adopted by some seventeen counties in the Province, substitutes a provincial officer in place of a high county constable, and there is every reason to look for increased efficiency as a result of the change.

Where there was dual control in the matter of law enforcement, there was always the danger that it would be a case of "Let George do it" on both sides.

Under the present arrangement Provincial Constable Harry Thompson will be responsible for the policing of the entire county and all police problems and business will be in his charge.

There has been in the past a duplication of police service in rural Ontario that did not make for efficiency—a condition that has led Attorney-General Price to institute a realignment that promises to give much better results.

The closer police work is linked up and the fewer departments in control the more efficient is likely to be the service rendered.

The disappearance of county constables in favor of Provincial Police should be followed by the shifting of traffic officers from the Highways Department to the control of the Attorney-General's Department.

THE CASE OF THE SMALL CITY.

Several speakers at the luncheon staged by the Toronto association of Peterborough old boys the other day called attention to the large numbers of Peterborough citizens who had made good elsewhere, adding that Peterborough would have been a wonderful city if her sons and daughters had not left home.

It is not feasible, of course, to expect that a small city can retain all her children; there is not a sufficient store of opportunities to keep them all at home, and the bigger centres will always continue to attract the ambitious and the restless.

All that can be done to deal with such a situation is strive steadily and persistently to make the smaller city a better place in which to live, to improve conditions in regard to recreation and entertainment, to ensure adequate wages and ample opportunity of employment, to provide the hospital and school and other accommodation that every live community should have.

The danger is that too much stress may be put on mere size.

Big cities are not necessarily good cities in which to own homes and bring up families.

There are advantages in Peterborough that are duplicated nowhere else.

They should be cultivated and developed in accordance with a scientific plan of civic betterment and improvement.

ON ROAD TO PEACE.

Premier Ramsay MacDonald described the paper on which he had entered notes of the conversation he had just had with Ambassador Dawes, in reference to naval disarmament, as "a very historical document." Historical, it is to be hoped, it will prove, for undoubtedly the prospects for international peace were never brighter than at this moment. It is quite obvious that both the British Premier and the President of the United States are anxious above everything else to ensure progress in the negotiations looking to a general reduction of naval armament. The direct action which is being taken is a guarantee that the effort will not be permitted to end in talk, but that a determined attempt is to be made to cut out red tape and get down to practical business.

To-night both Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Dawes will go into greater detail concerning the immediate steps to be taken, and from these speeches it will be possible for the public to learn more exactly what is intended, and to form an opinion as to the probable success of the venture. That there will be general approval and support may be taken for granted. It will be difficult for the politicians, in the existing state of public sentiment, to spoil the effort, as has happened in the past. The world is impatient of the professional quibblers, the selfish party men who would sacrifice the welfare of humanity for temporary factional triumph. With strong and courageous leadership, the ministers can depend upon popular support for any proposals which have hope of turning the dream of world peace into a reality.

One particularly interesting item of the British Premier's account of the conversation is that which speaks of the expectation that other naval powers will co-operate in the contemplated negotiations. It is not to be an exclusive effort on the part of the English-speaking races, but a world effort—so, at least, it is hoped. Every nation stands to benefit by such co-operation, and it will, therefore, be surprising if it is not eagerly forthcoming.—Hamilton Spectator.

THE GRADUATES.

There is something immensely interesting and yet pathetic in the fact that a vast crop of graduates is being sent out into the world by the colleges at this time of the year. They are the product of supposedly intensive and efficient training, and among them may be young men and women who will make their mark on their generation. The young women cannot be excluded from the reckoning, since the point has been reached where they practically equal the young men in numbers.

This large output of the convocation exercises is a striking illustration of Canadian progress. It was but day before yesterday that universities were few and far between, and that the freshman class was considered strong if it numbered a dozen. A higher education was then to some extent the luxury of the rich, although it was the incidental poor boy who carried off the gold medal. To-day the colleges are turning out their thousands of graduates every year.

The pathetic aspect of the matter is that education does not always educate, and that a diploma is often the synonym for disappointment. Being interpreted, this means that a B.A. is only a positive value to the young man or young woman who has something else to capitalize in the adventure of life. It has no immediate cash value. Only when it is joined to hard and persistent work, to intelligent enterprise and integrity, does it figure as an asset in the balance sheet. There must be something in the graduate himself, or herself, to start with, to make the mere passing through a university anything more than an unimportant incident.

Yet there is inspiration and significance in this going forth every year of a swelling army of young men and maidens from our colleges. As has just been said, it points to cultural advancement and to better equipment for responsibilities. Both are worth having, and may count substantially among the forces which will carry the Canadian people to further achievements as the years go by. All hail and good wishes to the graduate!—Brantford Expositor.

NEW WAYS.

It is said that away off in the mountain fastnesses of Thibet the names of automobile manufacturers are revered as gods. The transformation which motor cars have effected, in the lives of the people, even in the remote and inaccessible regions of the earth, has been so great that, in the minds of the unsophisticated natives, it could have been brought about only by some supernatural agency. This attitude is understandable, for it is indeed wonderful to think what revolutionary results have attended the popularizing of the motor car. It is an age of speed, and it would seem that hurry comes first in the consideration of the majority of people. The effect of that is plainly apparent in the habits of citizens in town and country alike. While there are doubtless many things to regret, there are also some causes for congratulation, in the new outlook on life for which the family motor car, among other things, is responsible. It has brought a broader vision and a more tolerant and sympathetic sentiment, because intercourse, such as was not possible before, between the various sections and classes means a better understanding and mutual appreciation and sympathy. The barriers between rural and urban interests are being effectively broken down—and that is assuredly a good thing. Town-dwellers have acquired a new knowledge of the problems of the country dwellers, and the latter for their part have learned to appreciate the problems of the cities. Good roads and swift and convenient communication are putting an end to the old prejudices and misunderstandings.

On the other hand, it is charged to the account of the automobile that family life in the big cities is sadly deteriorating. Home is just a place to sleep in, it is complained, while the thoughts of parents and children alike are all for the out-of-doors. So the domestic circle is losing its influence. In proof of which statistics are adduced which seem to prove that, in the big cities of this continent, "home," in the old-fashioned sense, is threatened with ultimate extinction. A labor department report issued by the Government of the United States declares that, while in 1921 24.4 per cent. of the people in 310 American cities, having a population of 25,000 and upwards, lived in apartments, last year that proportion had risen to no less than 53.7 per cent. That, certainly, is a surprising increase in seven years. In these cities over a billion dollars was spent on apartments and flats during the year. Why the change? The motor car is chiefly blamed, but there are, of course, other reasons. The Portland, Oregon, Journal says of these statistics: "It means a vast social and economic change in the habits of the American people, with more emphasis upon commercial amusement, rides on paved roads and other attractions away from home than the hearthfires, domesticity and restful shelter of home." Deplorable, no doubt; but there are compensations. What if the people are finding a way out of the old-time drudgery, when the women toiled over the washtub, and the menfolk idled away their time between household chores? Father and mother and son and daughter may not sit around indoors as they used to do; machinery is doing most of the hard work for them, more efficiently and much more quickly. There is more leisure as a consequence, and perhaps it is not a bad thing, but a good thing, that a means has been provided of employing that leisure agreeably away from home—seeing new sights, having new experiences, living more intensively. Life has changed—there is no denying that; but it is at least open to argument whether it has not changed considerably for the better for the majority of people.—Hamilton Spectator.

ORANGE LODGE AT SERVICE

Members of Society Hold Annual Parade To Zion Church.

SERVICE AT MADOC.

(Examiner Correspondence)

Petherick's Corners, July 4.— The annual church parade of the local Orange members Sentinel L. O. L. 2322 and L. O. B. A. 129 was held on Sunday, June 30, at 11 a. m. from the Hall to Zion Church where Rev. F. G. MacTavish led divine service on behalf of the Order. While not an Orangeman himself, Rev. Mr. MacTavish had much in sympathy with the organization.

He chose as a subject for his address the success of the great warrior and prophet of Israel, Gideon. His remarks were of a nature tending to inspire the Orange members to greater service for God and man.

The choir supplied special music in honor of the occasion. The church was well filled, one side being reserved for the guests of honor. Visiting members were present from Campbellford and Havelock.

Teacher Honored

Zion League met as usual on Thursday evening of last week with Gladys Simpson, social convenor in charge and Nellie Bennett as leader. A short program followed the business and devotional section led by Roy Fry, vice president. A instrumental duet, Misses Freda Petherick and Gladys Simpson and an impromptu debate were features. The subject "Resolved that is is better to be fat than thin" was won by the affirmative, Mrs. Lorne Barnum and Rev. F. G. MacTavish, as opposed to Albert Petherick and George Brunton.

At the close of the service, Miss Nellie Bennett, who for three years has been a valued and very popular member of the League and community in her position as school teacher, was presented with an ornamental table and electric reading lamp in appreciation of her faithful service here. George Brunton read an address, which voiced this appreciation and also the regret of all that Miss Bennett should have decided to leave the community. The presentation was made by Miss Freda Petherick. Miss Bennett made the reply in that pleasing manner which has won for her a reputation while here as a splendid platform speaker an debater.

SUCCESS.

What To-day Means To You.

JULY 4th

"Cancer"

If July 4th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this day are from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m., from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m., and from 10 p.m. to 11 p.m. The danger periods are from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., and from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m.

A feeling of "all rightness," and one of satisfaction with life in general, as well as your own particular niche, will prevail on this date. No radical changes will be made, and there will not be much travel.

Children born July 4th will be very quiet and reserved. They would rather take a back seat than force themselves to the front. They will be conscientious workers, but not original ones.

Your passage through this plane of existence will not be a dark or dreary one. The sunshine in your nature will dispel any clouds which tend, for the moment, to wipe out the joy of living. You love laughter, and with you, it is not a stage imitation of mirth, but an honest and a hearty expression of amusement of pleasure. You are not too thin skinned to thoroughly enjoy a joke at your own expense. There are often tears in your eyes, however, for you are very tender-hearted, and your sympathies easily run riot. You seldom brood over your own afflictions, but anybody's and everybody's troubles as well as their joys, are real to you.

You love the open air, and the country sights, smells and colors. It would be cruel to shut you up behind brick and mortar. You love animals, and they always sense the bond of sympathy and understanding which lies between you and them. There is very little cruelty in your nature. Although outwardly casual in your standards of conduct, you are inwardly strict with yourself. You never try to make other people over, nor to play the role of preacher. You are an inveterate and indiscriminate reader, or and you are not apt to neglect duties, or other pleasures, when you become absorbed in some book. You will not be a drudge at your work.

The Tule Marsh Murder

By NANCY BARR MAVITY

Story of a Missing Actress and the Taxing of Wits to Explain Her Fate

THE STORY THUS FAR:

Don Ellsworth's wife, formerly the famous actress Sheila O'Shay, disappears, leaving no trace. Dr. Cavanaugh, the great criminal psychologist learns that their married life has been very unhappy.

Peter Piper a reporter on the Herald tries to see Dr. Cavanaugh. Instead he meets Barbara Cavanaugh, the attractive daughter, and finds that she was engaged to Don Ellsworth before his marriage.

An unidentified body is found in the tule marsh outside the city. It is burned beyond recognition, but from a small patch of scalp Dr. Cavanaugh identified it as the body of Sheila O'Shay. Barbara faints when she hears him tell this to Peter. Peter, already half in love with her, is convinced that she knows something about the murder and his instinct is to protect her.

Mrs. Kane, Sheila O'Shay's waiting woman is arrested and admits that her mistress forced Don Ellsworth to marry her by threatening a breach of promise suit.

Peter and Dr. Cavanaugh search the boudoir of the murdered woman. The breach of promise papers have been taken, but they find a threatening letter signed "David Orme." Peter goes on the trail of Orme. He runs him down at an automobile tourists' camp. Orme is an irresponsible, temperamental, artistic and refined man who does not seem capable of committing murder. Finding Orme so helpless; Peter asks Dr. Cavanaugh to help him out at the trial. Dr. Cavanaugh agrees to examine Orme. Peter unwittingly sees Barbara destroy a deadly bit of evidence, a comb of Sheila O'Shay's, and he is torn between his love and the fear of her guilt.

CHAPTER 25.

Sheila O'Shay's body had been driven to the marsh in Barbara's car—the one one thing Peter had held to be inconceivable had happened. He saw the jaunty little sports coupe nosing its way through the night with its burden of death. Barbara's white face of terror above the wheel. Had she searched with frenzied fingers for the missing comb, not daring to strike a light? Had she, in the horror of those dark hours, not even noticed that it had slipped from the gleaming copper of Sheila's hair — perhaps not even known that it had ever been there?

A groan broke from Peter's lips. He was dully aware that something was pressing sharply against his forehead. The pain brought him slowly from the clutch of that imagined scene to a consciousness of his surroundings, like one who has plunged into deep water and rises, by no effort of his own, to the surface. He found that he was leaning against the trunk of a tree, his face pressed close to its rough bark. His breath came in sobbing gasps, as if he had been running to the point of exhaustion.

And then, as suddenly as the turning on of a light in a dark room, he was roused from the numbness of nightmare by a flash of absolute certitude. Barbara's hand might have held a knife or jerked a trigger; but Barbara could not have flung the body of Sheila O'Shay into the marsh and set fire to the grass. She could not have done it, simply because she was Barbara.

If he had seen with his own eyes her figure at the wheel with that other huddled figure beside it, he would still have known that she did not do it—because she was Barbara. He had believed without evidence that this one thing she could not do. The physically impossible—or what looked like it—was often enough accomplished, but there were impossibilities that struck deeper. He had the evidence now, and he defied it. Evidence was as nothing, because no outer facts could give the lie to the central fact that was Barbara.

With a deep, tremulous sigh, Peter moved away from the tree and walked slowly up the drivewhere where Barbara had run a few minutes—or was it hours?—before. Barbara needed saving, far more than he had dreamed. He had admitted, fleetingly, the idea that she, herself, was responsible for Sheila's death, but he knew now that he had never believed it. It had taken the flash of emeralds in the sun to bring that idea into the light where he must face it—face it with all its implications.

His mouth set in a hard, grim line. He knew exactly what he was doing. There was no ignorance of the law to blind him. He knew that he was going to suppress his knowledge of material evidence of a crime. If Barbara was guilty, no wrangling lawyers, no avid press, no stolid jury should tear that bright and gallant spirit to shreds.

If she was a murderess, she was still Barbara! He forced himself to say the word, with dry, stiff lips: "Murderess!" And he heard, as clearly as if he sat in the courtroom, as he had heard it many times from his seat in the press row, the voice of the judge solemnly intone, "And may God have mercy on your soul." Never that—never that—for Barbara!

He fought his way back to self-control, his nails forcing tiny red drops of blood from the palms of his clenched hands. If Barbara was guilty, he would share her guilt. He squared his shoulders as is against the wind. He was accessory after the fact of murder.

This time there was no hesitation on the doorstep before he rang the bell. Peter's training stood him in good stead; the black-and-white automaton who answered the door saw only a tall and rather pale young man whose clothes were badly in need of brushing—several twigs and bits of leaf were clinging to them but showed no evidence of excitement. She looked up at him with a tentative half-smile of recognition, but he had evidently forgotten her. He fished a "Herald" card from his pocket and scribbled a message on the back:

"Please let me see you at once—it is most important." He paused a moment, and then added: "I am counting on you—we are friends, remember."

He looked up, as if he had just become aware of the figure in the open door.

"Oh, it's you! I hope you found the two bits—though you didn't deserve them that time. Will you take this to Miss Cavanaugh, and tell her I'll wait in the room with the marigolds?"

"There aren't any marigolds—the season's past, sir," the automaton explained meticulously.

"Never mind—we know what we mean. You just cut along."

The atuomaton obediently "cut", wondering as she mounted the stairs how Miss Barbara had ever discovered such a very nice young man who obviously did not belong in her own social circle.

"He can't have any money—his clothes are a sight—but he does have a way with him. And Miss Barbara can afford to like whoever she pleases," she reflected enviously.

Peter stood anxiously waiting in the small room, where daffodils had replaced the marigolds, but where a little fire still twinkled in the grate. He wished he had warned her to take off that dust-streaked dress before she came down. She might meet any number of servants, and they'd be sure to notice it and wonder. He wished he had told her to destroy his card—but then, the girl might already have read it on her way up. He had thought only of Barbara while he was writing it—he strove now to remember the wording. It was noncommittal enough, still, it was better out of the way.

His brain felt paralyzed with the sense of his own incompetence. There were so many things to think of-so many things that he had never had to consider before. Peter found himself wishing that he had committeed any number of crimes so that he would have been practiced in technic, would know exactly what ought to be done. Suppose he made some horrible blunder. Suppose he could not save her. Suppose—

"You wanted to see me?"

She was there, slim and straight and child-like between the folds of the curtains. Before entering the room, she turned and slid the folding doors shut. She was immaculately dressed in a straight little blue frock, and she held Peter's card, twisted in a tube about her slim fingers.

"Thank God!" Peter cried.

Barbara summoned a wan little smile.

"You always do have the most astonishing ways of opening a conversation," she said.

"I was afraid you wouldn't change your dress," Peter explained. "And may I have that, please" He took the card gently from her fingers and dropped it on the glowing coals.

She looked up at him, faintly surprised, as one who has just passed through an earthquake might be surprised at the unexpected falling of a leaf. Unresisting she allowed him to lead her to a chairand place her in it. Peter towered over her, his elbow on the mantel.

"Barbara," he said, "God knows whether I've the wit to be of much good to you, but I think the first step had better be for you to marry me."

GENE TUNNEY IS NAMED IN SUIT

Texas Woman Wants Heart Balm to Tune of $500,000 From Boxing Champion.

PROMISE IS DENIED.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 4. — (C.P.)—Counsel for Mrs. Katherine King Fogarty of Fort Worth, Texas, and New York City, today filed a request for a jury trial of her $500,000 breach of promise suit against James J. (Gene) Tunney, former heavyweight boxing champion of the world.

Colonel Lewis L. Field, New Haven, attorney for Mrs. Fogarty, has not yet filed the reply to Tunney's answer, in which the retired boxer denies promising to marry the woman and in which he charged her with an attempt to exploit an acquaintanceship with him though he already had paid her more than $35,000 to waive any claims on him. The suit comes up in the September term of superior court.

LAUGHS FROM LIFE

"Um—m, so this is Venice!"

Keeping Up With the Law

After all, no outside law or influence can do half as much as our own inhibitions to keep us moral, dignified, soft-voiced, and uninteresting. Outside control can never be half as bad as self-control.

The law can't make anybody inhibit. No more than it can make him testify against himself.

So I have a neat little plan. Every time Congress passes another constitutional amendment, I am going to get even by abolishing a few of my inhibitions. Thank goodness, I have a lot of fun and freedom the have plenty of them. If I use they carefully I can I figure have a lot of fun and freedom the rest of my life.

I think this is the best way to get around the increasing tendency of other people to run my life for me.

As long as we submit ourselves to self-imposed inhibitions, isn't is unfair to criticize others for inflicting restrictions upon us? Who can blame them? Why should I worry about the "new narrowness" of the world when I have so many narrownesses of my own? Why should I critize Prohibition, for example, when I am guilty of inhibition?

My system really saves a lot of good liquor (even when it is available). You simply start out and become the life of the party without waiting for artificial aid. Saves time, too. You simply don't care what you do or say, and there you are—as good as stewed. Just ignore your inhibitions.

I expect to throw off my inhibitions at the rate of about half a dozen a day, if the present tendency of the world towards moral and mental strictness persists.

I have been driven to it. There is too much control in this world. Well, I can at least cut down on my self-control.

A Fair Farmer

Fannie's going in for farming,
And it's not a "fad" she claims;
Fannie's pretty, Fannie's charming,
With her "isms" and her aims.
Since she studied agriculture—
And con tell you beans from hops,
She's been hungry as a vulture
For all treatises on crops.

Fannie's going in for farming.
Or she'll know the reason why.
Some would deem my case alarming,
No such doleful suitor I.
Opposition would repel her;
Sooth, I rather like her plan,
And I'll call to-night and tell her
That I'll be her husbandman!

UNFAVORABLE CROP REPORTS SEND GRAIN PRICES HIGHER

Wheat Climbs Five Cents in Heavy Outburst of Trading.

ON WINNIPEG EXCHANGE.

Weather Reports From Alberta Pessimistic—No Moisture Promised.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 4 (C.P.)—Continued dry weather in Alberta sent wheat prices on another rampage to-day with values spurting another five cents higher. July wheat climbed 5⅛ cents to $1.45, a short while after the opening. October advanced 4 cents to $1.40½ and December 3¾ cents to $1.37⅝.

Weather reports from Alberta were very pessimistic and bulls did not hesitate in taking advantage of them to force the market higher. No rain was reported overnight in Alberta and forecasts promised no moisture for the next 36 hours.

A flood of offerings lowered the bulge fractionally but the market showed no signs of losing very much of the wide advance.

STANDARD LIST HOLDS STEADY

Upward Movement Prevails in Oil Stocks Despite Some Declines.

TRADING VOLUME LOW.

TORONTO, Ont., July 4.—(C.P.) — While declines were fairly prominent throughout the general list, a steady upward movement in the oil stocks gave the market on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day a rather strong appearance. The volume of trading was again low, the oils making the most headway as the result of an overnight accumulation of orders. Noranda, too, was stronger, gaining 30 cents to 59.00, while Sudbury Basin strengthened 20 to 9.15 and Base Metals held 10 cents higher at 3.40. Aconda sold up four points to 13. Pend Oreille continued to lose ground, breaking a further 50 cents to 5.60.

Baltac, running up 65 cents to 2.60, led the oil issues to higher levels, Mayland gaining a similar amount to 10.30, while East Crest followed with a 45 cents advance to 2.55. Wainwell was an exception, dipping 4 1-2 to 36 1-2.

SLIGHT GAINS IN OIL SECTION

PAGE-HERSEY GAINS.

TORONTO, Ont., July 4 (Canadian Press).—Active buying in the oil stocks again dominated trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day, but even in this group there were no notable price changes. Trading was again very quiet and came out mostly in five and 10 share lots.

Page Hersey and Steel of Canada, in easy trading, both moved upward, the former rising 3½ to 130 and the latter 2 to 57. Nickel never got about 52, and at noon was unchanged at 51¾, while Brazilian weakened almost a point to 59.

A two point gain in Canadian led the oil group advance, while British American, leading the entire list in point of activity, strengthened ¾ to 51¾, as did McColl to 42. International Petroleum and Home also recorded slight gains.

Lindsley shares were decidedly active at close of June and many expect July will be big month for these issues, especially in Sudbury Basin and Ventures.

Teck-Lake Shore

Situation surrounding Minacker property is replete with interest to shareholders of Teck-Hughes or Lake Shore, as Minacker lies contiguous to both properties, says Financial Counsel. At present Teck-Hughes is down close to 4,000 feet and is very close to Minacker boundary. If it is found that Teck orebodies are continued into adjacent property than Teck would be first to know it, and would be placed in a very advantageous position.

KING'S VACATION STORY UNFOUNDED

Reports Had His Majesty Spending Holiday in South Africa.

LONDON, July 4 (Canadian Press Cable). — The Canadian Press is authoritatively informed that the story circulated yesterday to the effect that His Majesty the King intends to spend a portion of next winter in one of the Dominions, is without foundation.

The report was widely circulated and related the possibility of the King journeying to South Africa. The opinion was expressed the visit would be of great benefit to His Majesty after his serious illness of last winter, and his convalescence this spring and summer.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

Recent results secured at the Amity Copper are giving the whole Boston creek camp a boost. One section of the vein at the 600-foot level has widened out to 30 feet under side-slashing operations, and slashing will now commence on the extension of the vein. This extension was where the ore was faulted for about 25 feet. Some press reports describe this as a new vein, but such is not the case. It is the extension of the main ore on the other side of the fault. There is no reason to believe that this will prove any narrower than the rest, which averages 30 feet.

The Patterson Copper is at an advanced stage of development in this camp and results are understood to have been favorable. Two prospects which are carrying out active operations are the Trethewey Ossian and the Barry Webster. The camp is now banking on copper to put it on the mining map. Barry Hollinger is the only all-gold proposition of any importance in the district. Development at the Ostrom property show about equal values in gold and copper.

Reports from Kirkland Lake state that continuous ore for a length of 500 feet, averaging $30 to $35 per ton has been opened up in drifting east and west from the main crosscut at the 1,800-foot level of the Lake Shore on the No. 2 vein. Officials are quoted as saying that both faces are still in high grade, about values obtained by sampling over drift width of eight feet, and as walls were not encountered on either side, the full width of the high grade is unknown. Additional mill equipment which will raise the daily tonnage to 2,000 or 2,300 tons is now being installed.

dred yards. They expect to have the line clear by to-night.

Passengers Transferred.

All freight traffic over this line is temporarily tied up until the right of way is cleared, while passenger trains have been running to the end of the wrecked part of the line and the passengers are transferred to a train at the other side of the derailed cars.

The bridge tender told The Examiner that he set the semaphore in time for the approaching train to come to a dead stop before he opened the derail for the approaching steamer. As the boat was a passenger carrying craft and the train merely a way freight he believed that the former should have preference in the right of way, so he intended to open the swing and hold the train up until the boat passed through, but something unknown went wrong and the train kept on coming and hit the derail, resulting in the crash. At present the blame for the accident is not laid on anyone until a thorough investigation of the facts is made by the railway authorities.

The bridge tender refused to open the bridge for the excursion after the accident, explaining that everything should be left as it was for investigation because he did not want to be blamed for the crash. The boat was forced to turn back after it had passed through Lock 6, which is immediately south of the bridge.

It is difficult to open the bridge after a train crosses an open derail and is wrecked as it ties up the machinery operating the switch and the rods to this have to be disconnected before the bridge can be opened. The swing cannot be operated until the switch has been set.

'UNTIN' BOWLER IS FORCED BACK NORTHERN POST

Radio Message Picked Up Says Flying Conditions Unsatisfactory.

MESSAGE INCOMPLETE.

Huge Amphibian On Berlin Flight Had Left Fort Rupert Early.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 4. (C.P.) — 'Untin' Bowler took up from Rupert House shortly before 9.20 o'clock this morning, but is returning on account of low visibility, according to a radio message received at the Department of Marine and Fisheries from its station at Port Burwell. The plane arrived at Rupert House early this morning. The brief message picked up by the operator at Port Burwell at 9.20 this morning, and read as follows:

"Returning to Rupert House account of low——"

It was presumed that the last word in the sentence was missed and that the message concluded with the word "visibility" or "ceiling," indicating that fog, rain, or low clouds rendered it impossible for the pilot to continue his flight.

MOONBEAM, Ont., July 4.—(By the Canadian Press).—The Chicago amphibian 'Untin' Bowler hopped off from Remi Lake, at five fifty eight o'clock this morning and headed for Great Whale, the next stop in the flight to Berlin. Great Whale is in the Hudson Bay district.

The plane's crew of three again expressed their confidence that their plane would land them safely in the German capital. Before their take off for the far northern pest a load of fuel was placed aboard the plane at Remi Lake, where a Provincial Government forestry aerial patrol station is located. Remi Lake is eight miles from Moonbeam.

Weather Is Perfect

Perfect flying weather prevailed as the plane turned its nose into the far north with its engines working perfectly and its crew of three confident that their craft will carry them through the barren northlands.

There are no radio stations at Great Whale but the aviators will have their own wireless as a means of communicating with civilization when they reach the Hudson Bay settlement, 400 miles from Remi Lake.

1,000 Miles First Day

Milwaukee was their first stop, and Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., their second. From the latter place the airmen flew to Remi Lake, completing 1,000 miles on the first day of their flight. They hope to reach Berlin in five days.

If the airmen find the hop to Great Whale too distant, Rupert House will be their destination. Rupert House is 200 miles north of Remi. Then the journey takes them to Mount Evans, Greenland, by way of Cape Chidley, thence to Reykjavik, Iceland, and from there direct to Berlin.

Two radio messages told the Chicago Tribune to-day that its amphibian plane, the 'Untin' Bowler, had taken off from Remi Lake, Ont., which it reached yesterday, for Great Whale River, about 400 miles north, on the second leg of its projected flight to Berlin.

GUEST IS BEATEN BY JOE WRIGHT

The Wright-Guest duel was the feature of the day. Though Guest had been training here for five months in the hope of defeating Wright, who had similarly eliminated him last year, the powerful stroking of the Diamond Sculls holder was too much for him.

Lord Desborough, famous sportsman, followed the race in the umpire's launch.

Magnificent Struggle

It was a magnificent struggle right from the start and the result was in doubt until the last few strokes, when Guest faltered and Wright kept up his terrific pace.

Wright broke away with 10, 19 and 35 strokes in the first quarter, half and full minute, to Guest's 9½, 18 and 35 respectively. It was a fine duel to the island, where Guest took a slight lead. At the first signal his shell's nose was two feet in front of that of the Diamond Sculls holder.

Guest gradually drew ahead to a quarter-length lead at the half-mile post. At Fawley, reached in 4.13, Guest maintaining fast clip drew into a lead of nearly a length. He was sculling in beautiful form and better rythm than Wright.

Guest held a lead of a length and a quarter at the Remenham Club. Wright spurted at this stage but Guest responded nobly and hung on to his lead. The holder pressed hard along the enclosure and Guest began to tire. Wright gradually drew up until Guest suddenly stopped ten yards from the finish, worn out with his efforts to keep in front. Guest stopped sculling while Wright passed him to win one of the best races ever seen here.

Noranda smelter has resumed operations at half capacity. Full capacity should be reached within next week, says Northern engineering service.

POLICE SEIZE

Ruggles, to a charge of having opium in their possession were remanded to July 18 for sentence.

Knowles, the police stated used the boat to transport opium consisting of 95 tins valued at $5,90[illegible] from the Empress of Asia to the shore. The boat, the police said was lowered to the water on May 24 and Knowles paddled the craft to the steamer's side. A Chinese confederate, whose identity is unknown, tossed the opium through a port hole into the boat. Knowles was arrested when he paddled his fragile craft to a place under the pier where police and customs officers awaited him.

CITY OF ROCHESTER HIGHLY ORGANIZED

Had Regular Meetings—Results Were Impressive and Are Deeply Appreciated.

The co-operation and support given by organizations of Peterborough. Old Boys in distant cities has been a most pleasing part of Old Home Week. In this particular Rochester was outstanding with St. Catherines, Hamilton, Detroit, Buffalo making excellent showings.

The first invitation to reach Rochester got R. J. Duncan, Reuben Lynch and Bill Miller together in conference with the result that a meeting was called at which eleven were present including Mr. J. J. Kelso, who agreed to provide the place for further meetings and at the last meeting there was one hundred and five in attendance.

At the suggestion of Herb Johnston, chairman of the float committee, rather than parading in a body, it was decided to put a float in the parade and a float from the Flower City saying it with flowers from Peterborough Old Boys in Rochester, to their old friends in Peterborough, was the result. That this beautiful float created a profound impression on all who witnessed the parade was evident from the applause it received all along the route of march. The sentimental touch was there and it reached many hearts.

Every dollar of expense in connection with the float was made in the city. The two young ladies on the float were Miss Irene Laplante, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Laplante, and Miss Irene Powers, a graduate nurse in Rochester.

So effective was the Rochester organization under the leadership of J. J. Kelso, R. J. Duncan, R. Lynch, Mr. Dumble, W. Miller, H. Johnston and others that more than three hundred and fifty visitors were her from that city. Mr. Dumble, son of the late D. W. Dumble, was unable to get over, but was most energetic in his work on the committee. Another factor in the big representation was the work of the ladies, who kept everlastingly at the men until every arrangement was complete with badges and car banners to visit their old home.

The whole city is indebted to our Old Boys and Girls in Rochester for the most splendid manner in which they gave support to the movement.

SOUVENIRS OF OLD PETERBORO

C. S. Stapleton Has Copy of the First Rules of Peterborough Turf Club.

BAILIFF'S SALE BILL.

Days of 1856 were brought back to mind, when C. S. Stapleton, city Sanitory Inspector, brought into The Examiner office to-day an old copy of the first rules of the Peterborough Turf Club, together with a complimentary ticket to the Velocipede races at the Turf Club in 1866 and a copy of a bailiff's sale, between the R. Thompson estate and Thos. J. Fisher, dated 1856.

These were souvenirs of the days when Peterborough was in its childhood, and were all owned by Mr. Stapleton's father, R. Stapleton, who was in those days, a noted auctioneer, bailiff, horseman and horse shipper.

The old Turf Club brings to mind the times when the race track was situated on the Webber farm across the Locks bridge. No such track as we have in the present time, but considered one of the best then, and to-day where once rolled the echo of thundering horses' hoofs, there is now only the peaceful hum of a buzz saw. The complimentary ticket, to the velocipede races was addressed to Mr. Stapleton's father and family, dated 1866, just the time when those weird two wheeled machines called velocipedes, were at the height of their popularity. It was priced at the sum of 12½ cents.

Different memories are brought to mind in the bailiff's sale bill, which included the entire furniture of the old Fisher hotel, situated where the C.P.R. ticket office now stands. Something we never hear of now, among which was included a piano forte, and what is getting exceedingly scarce, a double carriage, and the contents of the entire bar.

UNFAVORABLE CROP REPORTS SEND GRAIN PRICES HIGHER

Wheat Climbs Five Cents in Heavy Outburst of Trading.

ON WINNIPEG EXCHANGE.

Weather Reports From Alberta Pessimistic—No Moisture Promised.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 4 (C.P.).—Continued dry weather in Alberta sent wheat prices on another rampage to-day with values spurting another five cents higher. July wheat climbed 5⅛ cents to $1.45, a short while after the opening. October advanced 4 cents to $1.40½ and December 3¾ cents to $1.37⅝.

Weather reports from Alberta were very pessimistic and bulls did not hesitate in taking advantage of them to force the market higher. No rain was reported overnight in Alberta and forecasts promised no moisture for the next 36 hours.

A flood of offerings lowered the bulge fractionally but the market showed no signs of losing very much of the wide advance.

STANDARD LIST HOLDS STEADY

Upward Movement Prevails in Oil Stocks Despite Some Declines.

TRADING VOLUME LOW.

TORONTO, Ont., July 4.—(C.P.) — While declines were fairly prominent throughout the general list, a steady upward movement in the oil stocks gave the market on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day a rather strong appearance. The volume of trading was again low, the oils making the most headway as the result of an overnight accumulation of orders. Noranda, too, was stronger, gaining 30 cents to 59.00, while Sudbury Basin strengthened 20 to 9.15 and Base Metals held 10 cents higher at 3.40. Aconda sold up four points to 13. Pend Oreille continued to lose ground, breaking a further 50 cents to 5.60.

Baltac, running up 65 cents to 2.60, led the oil issues to higher levels, Mayland gaining a similar amount to 10.30, while East Crest followed with a 45 cents advance to 2.55. Wainwell was an exception, dipping 4 1-2 to 36 1-2.

SLIGHT GAINS IN OIL SECTION

TORONTO, Ont., July 4 (Canadian Press).—Active buying in the oil stocks again dominated trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day, but even in this group there were no notable price changes. Trading was again very quiet and came out mostly in five and 10 share lots.

Page Hersey and Steel of Canada, in easy trading, both moved upward, the former rising 3½ to 130 and the latter 2 to 57. Nickel never got about 52, and at noon was unchanged at 51¾, while Brazilian weakened almost a point to 59.

A two point gain in Canadian led the oil group advance, while British American, leading the entire list in point of activity, strengthened ¾ to 51¾, as did McColl to 42. International Petroleum and Home also recorded slight gains.

Gossip About Mines

Many rumors are going rounds regarding various mine stocks. Sudbury Basin and Ventures, it is said, will become one; Noranda will go on dividend basis, is another rumor; Ventures may get Lake Shore control is another. There is all kinds of gossip of this nature.

Mines In Demand

Lindsley shares were decidedly active at close of June and many expect July will be big month for these issues, especially in Sudbury Basin and Ventures.

Teck-Lake Shore

Situation surrounding Minacker property is replete with interest to shareholders of Teck-Hughes or Lake Shore, as Minacker lies contiguous to both properties, says Financial Counsel. At present Teck-Hughes is down close to 4,000 feet and is very close to Minacker boundary. If it is found that Teck orebodies are continued into adjacent property than Teck would be first to know it, and would be placed in a very advantageous position.

KING'S VACATION STORY UNFOUNDED

Reports Had His Majesty Spending Holiday in South Africa.

LONDON, July 4 (Canadian Press Cable). — The Canadian Press is authoritatively informed that the story circulated yesterday to the effect that His Majesty the King intends to spend a portion of next winter in one of the Dominions, is without foundation.

The report was widely circulated and related the possibility of the King journeying to South Africa. The opinion was expressed the visit would be of great benefit to His Majesty after his serious illness of last winter, and his convalescence this spring and summer.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

Recent results secured at the Amity Copper are giving the whole Boston creek camp a boost. One section of the vein at the 600-foot level has widened out to 30 feet under side-slashing operations, and slashing will now commence on the extension of the vein. This extension was where the ore was faulted for about 25 feet. Some press reports describe this as a new vein, but such is not the case. It is the extension of the main ore on the other side of the fault. There is no reason to believe that this will prove any narrower than the rest, which averages 30 feet.

The Patterson Copper is at an advanced stage of development in this camp and results are understood to have been favorable. Two prospects which are carrying out active operations are the Trethewey Ossian and the Barry Webster. The camp is now banking on copper to put it on the mining map. Barry Hollinger is the only all-gold proposition of any importance in the district. Development at the Ostrom property show about equal values in gold and copper.

Reports from Kirkland Lake state that continuous ore for a length of 500 feet, averaging $30 to $35 per ton has been opened up in drifting east and west from the main crosscut at the 1,800-foot level of the Lake Shore on the No. 2 vein. Officials are quoted as saying that both faces are still in high grade, about values obtained by sampling over drift width of eight feet, and as walls were not encountered on either side, the full width of the high grade is unknown. Additional mill equipment which will raise the daily tonnage to 2,000 or 2,300 tons is now being installed.

dred yards. They expect to have the line clear by to-night.

Passengers Transferred.

All freight traffic over this line is temporarily tied up until the right of way is cleared, while passenger trains have been running to the end of the wrecked part of the line and the passengers are transferred to a train at the other side of the derailed cars.

The bridge tender told The Examiner that he set the semaphore in time for the approaching train to come to a dead stop before he opened the derail for the approaching steamer. As the boat was a passenger carrying craft and the train merely a way freight he believed that the former should have preference in the right of way, so he intended to open the swing and hold the train up until the boat passed through, but something unknown went wrong and the train kept on coming and hit the derail, resulting in the crash. At present the blame for the accident is not laid on anyone until a thorough investigation of the facts is made by the railway authorities.

The bridge tender refused to open the bridge for the excursion after the accident, explaining that everything should be left as it was for investigation because he did not want to be blamed for the crash. The boat was forced to turn back after it had passed through Lock 6, which is immediately south of the bridge.

It is difficult to open the bridge after a train crosses an open derail and is wrecked as it ties up the machinery operating the switch and the rods to this have to be disconnected before the bridge can be opened. The swing cannot be operated until the switch has been set.

'UNTIN' BOWLER IS FORCED BACK NORTHERN POST

Radio Message Picked Up Says Flying Conditions Unsatisfactory.

MESSAGE INCOMPLETE.

Huge Amphibian On Berlin Flight Had Left Fort Rupert Early.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 4. (C.P.) — 'Untin' Bowler took up from Rupert House shortly before 9.20 o'clock this morning, but is returning on account of low visibility, according to a radio message received at the Department of Marine and Fisheries from its station at Port Burwell. The plane arrived at Rupert House early this morning. The brief message picked up by the operator at Port Burwell at 9.20 this morning, and read as follows:

"Returning to Rupert House account of low——"

It was presumed that the last word in the sentence was missed and that the message concluded with the word "visibility" or "ceiling," indicating that fog, rain, or low clouds rendered it impossible for the pilot to continue his flight.

MOONBEAM, Ont., July 4.—(By the Canadian Press).—The Chicago amphibian 'Untin' Bowler hopped off from Remi Lake, at five fifty eight o'clock this morning and headed for Great Whale, the next stop in the flight to Berlin. Great Whale is in the Hudson Bay district.

The plane's crew of three again expressed their confidence that their plane would land them safely in the German capital. Before their take off for the far northern pest a load of fuel was placed aboard the plane at Remi Lake, where a Provincial Government forestry aerial patrol station is located. Remi Lake is eight miles from Moonbeam.

Weather Is Perfect

Perfect flying weather prevailed as the plane turned its nose into the far north with its engines working perfectly and its crew of three confident that their craft will carry them through the barren northlands.

There are no radio stations at Great Whale but the aviators will have their own wireless as a means of communicating with civilization when they reach the Hudson Bay settlement, 400 miles from Remi Lake.

1,000 Miles First Day

Milwaukee was their first stop, and Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., their second. From the latter place the airmen flew to Remi Lake, completing 1,000 miles on the first day of their flight. They hope to reach Berlin in five days.

If the airmen find the hop to Great Whale too distant, Rupert House will be their destination. Rupert House is 200 miles north of Remi. Then the journey takes them to Mount Evans, Greenland, by way of Cape Chidley, thence to Reykjavik, Iceland, and from there direct to Berlin.

Two radio messages told the Chicago Tribune to-day that its amphibian plane, the 'Untin' Bowler, had taken off from Remi Lake, Ont., which it reached yesterday, for Great Whale River, about 400 miles north, on the second leg of its projected flight to Berlin.

GUEST IS BEATEN BY JOE WRIGHT

The Wright-Guest duel was the feature of the day. Though Guest had been training here for five months in the hope of defeating Wright, who had similarly eliminated him last year, the powerful stroking of the Diamond Sculls holder was too much for him.

Lord Desborough, famous sportsman, followed the race in the umpire's launch.

Magnificent Struggle

It was a magnificent struggle right from the start and the result was in doubt until the last few strokes, when Guest faltered and Wright kept up his terrific pace.

Wright broke away with 10, 19 and 35 strokes in the first quarter, half and full minute, to Guest's 9½, 18 and 35 respectively. It was a fine duel to the island, where Guest took a slight lead. At the first signal his shell's nose was two feet in front of that of the Diamond Sculls holder.

Guest gradually drew ahead to a quarter-length lead at the half-mile post. At Fawley, reached in 4.13, Guest maintaining fast clip drew into a lead of nearly a length. He was sculling in beautiful form and better rythm than Wright.

Guest held a lead of a length and a quarter at the Remenham Club. Wright spurted at this stage but Guest responded nobly and hung on to his lead. The holder pressed hard along the enclosure and Guest began to tire. Wright gradually drew up until Guest suddenly stopped ten yards from the finish, worn out with his efforts to keep in front. Guest stopped sculling while Wright passed him to win one of the best races ever seen here.

Noranda smelter has resumed operations at half capacity. Full capacity should be reached within next week, says Northern engineering service.

Ruggles, to a charge of having opium in their possession were were remanded to July 18 for sentence.

Knowles, the police stated used the boat to transport opium consisting of 95 tins valued at $5.90 from the Empress of Asia to the shore. The boat, the police said was lowered to the water on May 24 and Knowles paddled the craft to the steamer's side. A Chinese confederate, whose identity is unknown, tossed the opium through a port hole into the boat. Knowles was arrested when he paddled his fragile craft to a place under the pier where police and customs officers awaited him.

CITY OF ROCHESTER HIGHLY ORGANIZED

Had Regular Meetings—Results Were Impressive and Are Deeply Appreciated.

The co-operation and support given by organizations of Peterborough. Old Boys in distant cities has been a most pleasing part of Old Home Week. In this particular Rochester was outstanding with St. Catherines, Hamilton, Detroit, Buffalo making excellent showings.

The first invitation to reach Rochester got R. J. Duncan, Reuben Lynch and Bill Miller together in conference with the result that a meeting was called at which eleven were present including Mr. J. J. Kelso, who agreed to provide the place for further meetings and at the last meeting there was one hundred and five in attendance.

At the suggestion of Herb Johnston, chairman of the float committee, rather than parading in a body, it was decided to put a float in the parade and a float from the Flower City saying it with flowers from Peterborough Old Boys in Rochester, to their old friends in Peterborough, was the result. That this beautiful float created a profound impression on all who witnessed the parade was evident from the applause it received all along the route of march. The sentimental touch was there and it reached many hearts.

Every dollar of expense in connection with the float was made in the city. The two young ladies on the float were Miss Irene Laplante, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Laplante, and Miss Irene Powers, a graduate nurse in Rochester.

So effective was the Rochester organization under the leadership of J. J. Kelso, R. J. Duncan, R. Lynch, Mr. Dumble, W. Miller, H. Johnston and others that more than three hundred and fifty visitors were her from that city. Mr. Dumble, son of the late D. W. Dumble, was unable to get over, but was most energetic in his work on the committee. Another factor in the big representation was the work of the ladies, who kept everlastingly at the men until every arrangement was complete with badges and car banners to visit their old home.

The whole city is indebted to our Old Boys and Girls in Rochester for the most splendid manner in which they gave support to the movement.

SOUVENIRS OF OLD PETERBORO

C. S. Stapleton Has Copy of the First Rules of Peterborough Turf Club.

BAILIFF'S SALE BILL.

Days of 1856 were brought back to mind, when C. S. Stapleton, city Sanitory Inspector, brought into The Examiner office to-day an old copy of the first rules of the Peterborough Turf Club, together with a complimentary ticket to the Velocipede races at the Turf Club in 1866 and a copy of a bailiff's sale, between the R. Thompson estate and Thos. J. Fisher, dated 1856.

These were souvenirs of the days when Peterborough was in its childhood, and were all owned by Mr. Stapleton's father, R. Stapleton, who was in those days, a noted auctioneer, bailiff, horseman and horse shipper.

The old Turf Club brings to mind the times when the race track was situated on the Webber farm across the Locks bridge. No such track as we have in the present time, but considered one of the best then, and to-day where once rolled the echo of thundering horses' hoofs, there is now only the peaceful hum of a buzz saw. The complimentary ticket, to the velocipede races was addressed to Mr. Stapleton's father and family, dated 1866, just the time when those weird two wheeled machines called velocipedes, were at the height of their popularity. It was priced at the sum of 12½ cents.

Different memories are brought to mind in the bailiff's sale bill, which included the entire furniture of the old Fisher hotel, situated where the C.P.R. ticket office now stands. Something we never hear of now, among which was included a piano forte, and what is getting exceedingly scarce, a double carriage, and the contents of the entire bar.

ON THIRD DAY OF FLIGHT.

CULVER CITC, Calif., July 4. — Far above the din of Independence Day celebrations, L. W. Meneell and R. B. Reinhart to-day piloted their biplane, Angeleno, toward the third day of their endurance record-seeking flight which got under way here at 7.29 a.m on Tuesday.

Yet my wash is never scrubbed or boiled

[How my secret amazed her!]

I COULD have laughed aloud to see how puzzled she was. I guess she never saw such gleaming, snowy linens.

"Is this cloth new?" she demanded.

"New?" I laughed. "I've had it ever since I was married."

"But my linens are dingy, yellow—I can't understand it. Some of my tablecloths are threadbare from scrubbing, yet they never look as white as this."

A glow of pleasure surged through me. I knew I was a good housekeeper. I wouldn't think of permitting my wash to be scrubbed . . . why, that's so old-fashioned!

"My linens never touch a washboard," I said—enjoying her amazement.

"Then how does your laundress get them so much whiter than mine?"

"I have her use Rinso—you know, the granulated soap. It soaks out dirt. It gets clothes so white, scrubbing and boiling aren't necessary. That saves clothes."

"You mean to say a mere soap can make such a difference?"

"No other soap is like Rinso! Its suds are the richest, creamiest you ever saw. One cupful of this granulated soap goes farther than two cupfuls of those lightweight, puffed-up soaps."

"I must get some Rinso tomorrow!"

Safe—for tub or washer

Rinso suds are safe. The makers of 36 leading washing machines recommend this famous granulated soap. Great for tub washing, too.

Rinso's thick suds are also marvelous for dishes—loosen grease in a flash. No grit. Get the BIG package of Rinso now.

JAMES NEILSON TAKES POSITION IN MICHIGAN

Formerly Extension Specialist For Ontario Department of Agriculture at Port Hope.

NUT CULTURE EXPERT.

Accepts Charge of Activities in Michigan College at Battle Creek.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, July 4.—Professor James H. Neilson, whose headquarters were formerly at Port Hope while carrying on his work as Extension Specialist for the Fruit Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, has within recent months accepted the offer made him by the Michigan State College to take charge of culture activities, as the result of a donation for this purpose from W. K. Kellogg, of Battle Creek, Mich.

Many of those practically interested in nut culture through Professor Neilson's educative program, among whom might be mentioned Dr. C. M. Wright, of Garden Hill; Charles Thorndyke, Millbrook; E. V. Atkinson, Whitby; and Dr. J. M. Baldwin, Bowmanville, will regret his departure to the American college, and consider it a mistake that our own government did not offer sufficient salary inducement to retain so expert an authority in the service of the Dominion.

Professor Neilson, it will be recalled, has been carrying on investigations in the line of nut culture for the past eight or ten years, and has successfully demonstrated that many of the nuts at present imported by Canada may be grown in this country, some of the varieties proving both ornamental and useful, including the English walnuts; hazels, Japanese heartnuts, chestnuts, and hickorys.

W. K. Kellogg, the noted cereal manufacturer of Battle Creek, Michigan, recently gave a substantial grant to the Michigan State College as a research fund in support of nut culture, and with it five hundred acres of land much of which will be used for experimental work with all kinds of edible nuts suitable to the soil and climate of Michigan, and which have timber possibilities. It was this generous gift that led to the invitation to Professor Neilson to transfer his activities to the Michigan college.

Mr. Kellogg has again shown his public spirit by generously providing further funds to be used for the immediate stimulation of interest in this neglected feature of horticulture; this action following Professor Neilson's addition to the staff of the State College.

The whole nut cultural project is under the supervision of Professor V. R. Gardiner, Director of the Experimental Station, and is in charge of Professor Neilson, formerly of the Ontario Department of Horticulture.

The program, as drawn up by these officials, consists of several features, one of the most important being a detailed nut tree survey of the state this autumn, when a special attempt will be made to locate the best trees of the various native and introduced kinds, and to determine the range of these species. The assistance of Fruit Growers' Associations, Garden Clubs, Boys' and Girls' Clubs, County Agents, Boy Scouts, and school teachers will be enlisted, and substantial prizes will be offered as an inducement for the best trees. The co-operation of the daily and weekly press, agricultural and horticultural publications, will be sought in an extensive advertising campaign, and at suitable periods, a series of articles will be published.

An extensive scheme of top grafting walnuts and hickories will be carried on throughout the state next year. In the project the Experimental Station officials will endeavor to establish contacts with interested people, and will offer to graft up to 100 small seedling trees, if that many are required by any one person, or organization. The conditions on which this service will be given are very easy to meet, and it is expected that a large number of trees will be topworked with scions of superior varieties during the next few years.

In addition to the above features an effort will be made to introduce hardy strains of superior varieties of chestnuts, hazels, and walnuts for trial plantings.

As a result of the generous support given this work by Mr. Kellogg, it is confidently expected that a great stimulus will be given the culture of nut trees in the state which borders on Canada, and is this benefactor's home. It will then be well in advance of other northern sections of this North American continent in the culture of nut trees that produce a valuable food, and are, as well, beautiful to look upon.

Friends in this province who were led into active participation in this useful branch of horticulture through Professor Neilson's help while living at Port Hope, will be interested in the extended activities in which he is engaged since removing to the States, and becoming connected with Michigan College.

Peterborough Sevice Held

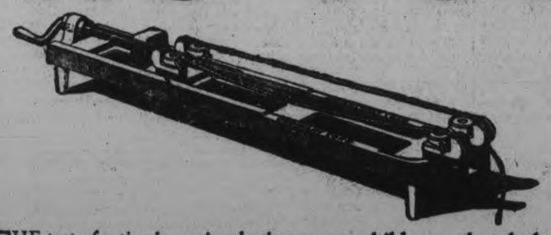
The special patriotic service, "The King's Highway", held in the United Church Sunday School at the regular session on Sunday, June 30, was one of the best of this type of program presented for some time.

The service was in charge of the superintendent, W. Fred Fallis, who conducted the responsive readings, and prayers, while the musical part of the program was led by G. E. Burnham with the cornet, and Miss Francis Jones presiding at the piano.

Miss Josie Spence recited, "Father Lead Me Day by Day". Miss Beatrice Jones, "Thou Art the Way", and Miss Jean Burnham, "I Am the Way". Mr. Fallis gave an inspiring address on the topic, "The King's Highway", presenting historical facts regarding the romance of road building, and its value to the nation, with the invitation to walk in the highway of the Kingdom, through faith on Him Who is the way, the truth, and the life, as a fitting climax.

Two new scholars were enrolled in the primary department, and there was a large attendance for the whole school.

Even a child can understand the reason!



THE test of a tire is so simple that even a child can select the best. There are two main parts to a tire—the tread and the carcass. The tread to grip the road. The carcass to withstand the strain.

Test any tread by pressing your hand on it. Does it grip? Test any carcass by stretching the cords of which it is made. Are they springy, lively, full of stretch?

Make these two tests on a Goodyear Tire at a Goodyear Selected Dealer's. Feel the deep, sharp-edged blocks of the All-Weather Tread grip your hand as it grips the road. Use the dealer's cord-testing machine and see how much a Goodyear Supertwist cord outstretches an ordinary cord. Even a child will choose "the world's greatest tire."

In every town in Canada large enough to support a good tire dealer, there is at least one Goodyear Selected Dealer.

"BILL"

(Written for The Peterborough Examiner, Old Home Week, by an Old Peterborough Boy.)

(By Robert W. Heafield.)

"Talking of odd characters," said Davis Senior, at the weekly meeting of the "Sixty Club"—a club confined to tradesmen of the district of Bow, in the East-end of London, all of whom must of necessity be sixty years of age and all, either the only member, or the senior member of the firm he represented; provided a man met these conditions and paid an annual fee of $5.00, he became a member ,and was entitled to be one of the company who met, Friday evenings each week, at the "Glee Pot." These meetings were usually of a convivial nature and many good yarns were heard, some true and others "doubtful." As Davis Senior (a decorator) remarked: "Speaking of odd characters, I believe I can tell you something of interest about an employee of mine, whom I have the greatest respect for, a man whom it seemed impossible to put in a corner, resourceful to a degree, and honest as the day; according to his mode of life and his upbringing and a good workman to boot; we simply know him as "Bill.'"

I first made Bill's acquaintance in the spring of 1902, I was just finishing some work in the West-end of London, when in comes Bill and said, "Any chance of a job, guv'nor?" I looked at him, he seemed a likely man, so I said, "Yes, I can give you a helper's job. Come to my house at 6.00 a.m. on Monday." I gave him the address in Leyton, a suburb of London. "Right-o, guv'nor, I'll be there."

Monday morning arrived, and with it Bill, right on time. I was going to a place about a mile away, chiefly white-washing, and I gave Bill the brushes, pails, trestles, etc., etc. He loaded up and off we went. I worked myself in those days! Arrived at our destination we got everything unpacked and ready to start after breakfast. Bill suddenly turned to me and said, "Can I have a sub. Guv'nor?' ' I replied that he had done no work yet, but that I would give him a little on account at dinner time. "Alright, Guv'nor, that'll do,' 'said Bill, and off I went for breakfast. On returning, I mounted the steps and asked Bill to hand up the pails, etc. A pail of white-wash came up and then thinking him a long time, I asked for the brushes. "Brushes, Guv'nor, brushes?" "Yes," I said, "those I gave you this morning." "Oh, yes," said Bill, and he fumbled in his waistcoat pockets and presently produced and handed to me, two pieces of pasteboard. I took them and read them, and stood nonplussed. "What," said I, "do you mean to tell me you have pawned my brushes?" "Pardon, Guv'nor," said Bill, "but you can't work on an empty stomach,' 'and although so astounded, what could I say? I knew the man must really have been hungry or he would never have done such a thing. So I gave him the money to go and get them out of pawn, for I could not work without them. On his return he worked with such a will and gave promise of being a first-class worker that I dismissed the intention of paying him off and at dinner time I offered him two shillings as a sub. "No, thanks, Guv'nor. Not now. I don't need it like I did this morning, and I'd rather not have it until I really need it." And, boys, many a time I've had a good laugh over the incident, and I would not be without Bill in the busy season. He is the life and soul of the whole business. He has one weakness ,he certainly likes his beer, but strange to say he never touches it all the week. He, however, makes up for this aridness at the week-end and wild horses could not induce Bill to work on Satuday mornings.

Pay day was always Friday, and Bill was missing from Friday evening until Monday morning, and moreover he never started work till 9:00 a. m. on Mondays. Now Bill was such a stickler for time all the rest of the week, that his behavior at the week-end rather puzzled me. So one day while he and I were working together and alone, I asked him his reasons for not working on Saturdays.

"Well, Guv'nor," says he, "I thought maybe you would be asking that question some time, so I will tell you. It's a habit I got into and one I have no desire to break, although for the last few weeks I've had to alter my program somewhat. As I told you, I am alone in the world, although I had a wife until some five years ago, when she died of consumption, and I've never been quite the same since. Fortunately, we had no children, but every Saturday, year in, year out, hail, rain or snow, I makes my way to Nunhead Cemetery, and I does a little gardening round her grave ,and it's a regular picture it is; you should see it ;and after that, Guv., Idon't care what I do much till Monday morning. So I've always made it a practice of taking a beer or two; it don't take much to knock me over, as they say, and it always ends up the same way—I get locked up for the week-end. It works out alright—I gets board and lodging for nothing and a good hot bath, out on Monday morning at 8:00 a. m., and at work by 9.00. It suits me, but lately they have been prolonging the confinement until Tuesday, and this don't suit . So last week I did not take quite so much beer, but I have no doubt had more than I should, as I got into the train to go home, and went fast asleep, not waking up until I reached Southend, finding myself miles away from home, with only a shilling in my pocket."

"Now,' 'said Davis Senior, "how he returned I must leave until a future meeting, but return he did, in time for work, and not hungry by any means."

CHARGED WITH THEFT

TORONTO, Ont., July 4.—Arthur Hampson, operating under the firm name of The General Discount and Bond Company, Toronto, was arrested last night by detectives on a warrant charging theft.

The warrant was issued to-day following investigations by the Attorney-General's department under the Security Frauds Prevention Act. It charges theft of $3,600 but police said this represented only a fraction of the amount involved. Hampson's bail was set at $10,000.

RECORDS OF COUNTY COUNCIL DATE BACK TO YEAR 1842

First By-law Recorded Defines Duties of Collectors in Colborne District.

BUCKHORN ROAD.

Number 8 By-law Establishes Road Between Hunter Street and Brock Street.

The first records of Peterborough county council go back to the year 1842 when this was known as the Colborne district, originally the district of Newcastle; then in the fifties being the united counties of Peterborough and Victoria and finally separating and severing the union, which after all its initial benefits and accomplishments in the early days of municipal organization had finally become unwieldy and inadequate and irksome.

A faded and bulky old volume printed by G. Haslehurst, Peterborough, in 1850, contains the summaries of the first by-laws, dating from the inception of the assembly in 1842, and later expanding into the minutes of the meetings, reports of committees and complete copies of the by-laws. This musty, ancient book should be of special interest to rural ratepayers and especially those who take an interest in municipal affairs and have a pride in the old county and its history.

The very first by-law recorded in 1842 defined the duties of collectors in the Colborne district. It was passed February 10. By-law No. 3 determined the amount payable for statute labor; No. 4 authorized the building of a school house in the 10th school section of Emily township.

Required Municipal Service.

Another by-law is curiously significant but the summary of it merely suggests its purpose and its latitude. It was to determine the penalties on persons neglecting or refusing to qualify or serve as municipal councillors.

No. 8 by-law established a road from Hunter street to Brock street and another from Brock street to the court house. This is our present Sheridan street, probably named after Walter Sheridan the first clerk and treasurer of the county. Another by-law opens up school sections in Mariposa and other townships, indicating the primitive needs of the rural communities at that time, and No. 15 made temporary provision for the support of school masters and for the erection of school houses.

But neither county nor city councillors may flatter themselves because of modern facilities for education. The language of the minutes, the Wardens' addresses and similar documents all combine to create an atmosphere of gentlemen of good repute and learning. Such evidence substantiates our traditional respect for the old school. Peterborough reeves, coming to the county council for the first time, might spend a half hour or more quite profitably by scanning these yellowed tomes and catching the literary key in a day when schools were presumably poor and scattered and ill-provided in material fittings, as compared with the excellent buildings that are found everywhere in the country to-day. It connotes a special merit and devotion in those schoolmasters who must have taught more than the three R's emphasized with a birch gad.

Opened New Roads.

By-law No. 19 established a road from the north angle of lot 26, concession 1, Verulam and Fenelon, to the Fenelon Falls road. No. 22 opened a road from Bobcaygeon to Cowan's bridge and thence to David Armstrong's in Emily township; and by-law 26 opened in Otonabee a road across the second concession between lots 17 and 18, and another across the ninth concession between lots 17 and 18.

By-law 34 established a road from Bobcaygeon to Fenelon Falls; and No. 42 opened a road through lots 11 and 12 in the fourth concession of Dummer and between lots 7 and 8 in the eleventh concession of Monaghan. Thus is the first year accounted for 42 by-laws.

Road to Buckhorn.

The first by-law in 1843 laid down a road from Peterborough to Buckhorn Rapids. County Clerk E. M. Elliott was himself sufficiently interested in these old records to produce the original of this by-law with a sketch and field notes by John Reid, surveyor.

This road was, and still is, the extension of Water street, along the river, and then known as the Smith River road in the township, between the 24th and 25th lots nearly to the concession road in the rear of the 13th concession; thence along the line to the south east angle of the 26th lot where it communicates with the Buckhorn road as laid out by John Huston.

The resurvey was made because the original was lost, and in many places the road was not on or near where the line was laid out. Mr. Reid wrote that with the new survey "settlers would be able to correct their fences which now in many places encroach on the road." Mr. Reid's report is dated Nov. 7, 1842.

MEMBERS OF JOHNSON FAMILY GATHER AT ANNUAL RE-UNION

CAME FROM IRELAND.

Biography Given of Family — Varied Sports Program Held.

MILLBROOK, July 4 (Examiner Correspondence). — Flags and bunting gaily floating in the breeze, and making bright the interior building at the Agricultural Park, with the "Welcome" sign prominently displayed, gave evidence of a gathering of unusual interest on Monday, July 1, the occasion being the annual reunion of the Johnston family, held here for the first time in its history and attended by approximately one hundred and fifty members of the "clan" of that name.

For some years Blackstock was the scene of this annual family celebration, and last year Orono was the point chosen, but as the grounds there were otherwise in use for Dominion Day this season, and as there are a number of relatives in this immediate vicinity, Millbrook was named for the gathering place by the committee in charge, and proving quite suitable, the buildings and the grand stand being much appreciated, and the choice being evidently so popular that return may be made another summer.

The Johnston family, which now has branches in practically all parts of the world, many of the descendants holding positions of prominence in the state, the army, and various departments of public life, originated in Dumfriesshire, in the Scottish Lowlands, although those who made the voyage to Canada in 1819 to 1821 and were pioneers in the family life here, came from County Cavan in the north of Ireland, the journey by sailing vessel, occupying a period of several weeks.

Settled in Cavan.

R. J. McLaughlin, K.C., of Toronto, is well versed in the family history, his grandfather, Hugh Johnston, having emigrated from County Cavan, Ireland, about the year 1821, and become one of the earliest settlers in Cavan Township, Canada, clearing the land and establishing a fine farm homestead about two and one-half miles east of what later became the village of Millbrook. This farm is now owned and occupied by John Thompson.

Miss Agnes Alice Johnston, a deaconess, of 662 Pape Avenue, Toronto, has compiled a very interesting history of David M. Johnston and his descendants to which branch of the family she belongs. "Early in the nineteenth century, when sailing vessels were used for crossing the great Atlantic, and when winds were favorable, the thirteen weeks required to cross was considered a record in those days, John Johnston and his family, filled with the spirit of adventure, with their seven sons and two daughters, William, Robert John, Letitia, James, Thomas, David, Mary, and Joseph, left that beautiful isle, the home of the Shamrock, and came to the Township of Belmont, in Northumberland County, in the year 1830. Here they built their log house and barn, or shed for Bess and the oxen, clearing the land, and cultivating it as best they could, among the stumps, for grain and potatoes."

That the family history runs back a long way was shown by facts quoted by Mr. McLaughlin, who mentioned that at the Battle of Chevy Chase in 1388 it was a Johnston who led the right wing of the Scottish Army. Records tell incidents of Johnstons in the north of Ireland in 1680; and it is quite evident, when history is studied, that of the many Border families, such as the Humes, the Maxwells, the Telfords, and the Holmes, the Johnstons were the most numerous, and took an active part in the border warfare between the Scots and English, as well as taking sides with either of the warring factions in Scotland itself.

Three Branches.

The guests at Monday's re-union spoke of three principal branches of the family—the Belmont Johnstons, the Havelock Johnstons, and the Cavan Johnstons—but as there were eight sons of a family of twelve, who came out from Ireland among the original pioneers, the connection is a wide one, and at the business session in the late afternoon Mrs. George Rigby of Havelock, was appointed historian; to her each branch will send material relating to family history as it is gathered together and she will edit the whole, which will finally be printed in book form and available for purchase by all the parties interested. As has been stated, the David Johnston section has already been prepared and issued in printed form by Miss Agnes Alice Johnston.

The large building on the Agricultural grounds was utilized for meals on Monday, three long tables being laid and service being supplied by the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of the United Church, under the efficient management of the president, Mrs. (Rev.) W. W. Jones. This was the first year this plan had been tried out, its success being assured, as it left all the ladies of the picnic party quite free to thoroughly enjoy the outing with no responsibility for preparation of dinner or tea, or the clearing up afterward. The Auxiliary also had the booth on the grounds, Misses Frances and Beatrice Jones, and Misses Margaret and Lottie Luxon being in charge. A very satisfactory sum was added to the Auxiliary funds through these two sources.

The sports program, including races for all ages, with splendid prizes offered, and a softball game, took place in front of the grand stand shortly after all had been served with dinner, and created plenty of entertainment. The prize-winners in some of the races, besides an opening one for the tiny tots, included:

Girls, 6 and under—1 Ruby Fallis, 2 Onalee Mteheson.

Boys, 7 to 8 years—1 Gordon Jones, 2 Wilson Stirling, 3 Elias Whyte.

Boys, 9 to 10 years—1 Roland Matheson, 2 Johnston Matheson.

Girls, 9 to 10 years—1 Edna Rigby, 2 Ruby Fallis.

Girls, 11 and 12 years—1 Iona Buck, 2 Josephine Matheson.

Married women's race—1 Mrs. A. Matheson, 2 Mrs. L. G. Williams, 3 Mrs. George Johnston.

Boys, 14 and under—1 Arnold Buck, 2 Gordon Jones, 3 Rowland Matheson.

The ball game, between the married men and the bachelors, resulted in a victory for the latter, the score being 14-12. George Williams was the umpire. The line-up:

Married Men — L. Williams, 6; G. Heaslip, c; Orlie Conlin, 1b; Frank Chipps, 2b; Earl Fallis, 3b; D. White, rf; G. Rigby, lf; H. Lough, cf.

Representatives were present, and registered in the visitors' book, from Bowmanville, Peterborough, Oshawa, Havelock, Burketon, Detroit, Mich., Smith's Falls, Bailieboro, Frazerville, Pontypool, Bexley, Toronto, Hepworth, Portage La Prairie, Man., Cavan, and Millbrook.

In the absence of the president, H. W. Johnston, of Millbrook, who is on a motor trip to Northern Ontario, the vice-president, A. J. Johnston, of Cadmus, took the chair for the business meeting, and among those who spoke briefly were R. J. McLaughlin, K.C., of Toronto, who mentioned appreciatively the pleasure he had in meeting cousins "some of whom I knew, and some of whom I never had previously heard about"; he believed the tradition, "that there have always been brave men and fair ladies in the Johnston clan," was fully justified, and he hoped the re-union would continue to be an annual affair for many years to come.

Following Mr. McLaughlin were Dr. Thomas Johnston, of Peterborough, who extended a warm invitation to make Peterborough the meeting-place for 1930; W. J. Johnston of Peterborough, Mrs. George Rigby of Havelock, R. J. Johnston of Toronto, Miss Olga Johnston of Peterborough, and Melville Johnston of Peterborough, who moved the vote of thanks to the executive for successfully planning the re-union for 1929, mentioning especially the originator of the whole idea, Mrs. John Johnston, who was not present because of illness. The motion was seconded by John Rowland of Cavan.

Mrs. G. Rigby moved the vote of thanks to the ladies who had supplied the service for the meal times, and Mrs. Jones responded. James Roddy and Dr. Johnston were the sponors of the vote of thanks to the Agricultural Society for the use of the buildings and grounds.

The following officers were elected for 1929-1930:

Honorary Preidents— J. M. Johnston of Burketon, John Whyte of Cavan.

President—A. J. Johnston, Cadmus.

Vice-President — Melville Johnston, Peterborough.

Secretary—Mr. H. Lough, Toronto.

Treasurer—George Johnston, Cadmus.

Executive Committee — Mrs. Ed. Scott, Norwood; Miss Olga Johnston Peterborough; James Whyte, Tara; Milton Jamieson, Oshawa; David Milne, Toronto; James Roddy, Frazerville; Ellida Rigby, Havelock; May Johnston, Cartwright; Maud Campbell, Toronto; Alivia Conlin, Oshawa.

The place of meeting for next year was left with the executive, and shortly after the tea hour the guests left for their various homes.

COMBINED MEETING IS HELD AT WARSAW

Good Program Provided by Young People at Church Gathering.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, July 4.—Members of the Warsaw Young People's Society and of Warsaw junior school met in the United Church basement on Friday evening. The president, Fred Crowe, was in the chair and Miss Sadie Young who had been invited to be present, was in her place as secretary. There was a short discussion about carrying on the meetings, when it was decided that the Society adjourn until the second Monday in September.

Dr. Munro took charge of the program which consisted of a selection by the Warsaw orchestra; a solo "I Am Dreaming," Mrs. John Payne; a solo, "The Garden of Prayer," Mrs. Herrington; orchestra selection; song, Miss Joan Munro. Dr. Munro gave an address, in which he spoke of the last day he taught in a school of the sincerity and truth of youth, and of the attachment that springs up between teacher and pupil.

He spoke, too, of the little consideration that is generally shown the teacher. The teacher has a wonderful exxperience, for he gets a great picture of humanity. It is the common thing to criticise preachers and teachers or any one else in the public eye. A certain amount of criticism is good, but criticism is generally bad, and seldom notes the good.

It is not wise to stay in the teaching profession too long, else one becomes almost worthless for anything else.

Speaking to Miss Young, he said she had helped in many ways, besides her school work. She had done her bit as all should, and informed her there was a lot of good in her, and perhaps as in all others, a little bad.

Fred Crowe then read an address to Miss Young, who is leaving Warsaw school, on behalf of the Y. P. S. and her school pupils. Little Miss Irene Clifford and Harold Clifford presented her with a handsome convertible hat box. Miss Young replied to the address, and thanked the donors for the gift, remarking she did not intend to leave Warsaw for ever, as she had made warm friends here.

Rev. Mr. Herrington spoke of criticism and of the great influence the teacher has over the lives of the boys and girls. Miss Young's example had been helpful to all. She had helped her pupils to obtain information, and greater still, she had helped them to a larger vision of life.

Misses Florence and Dora Tedford, Valetta and Cora Drain sang "Be A Helper". The orchestra gave a selection and all sang, "Auld Lang Syne". The orchestra consisted of Dr. Munro, Eileen Hamblin, Tom Davis, violinists; Gerald Crowe, cornetist, and Mrs. George Taylor, pianist. Refreshments were served and a happy social half-hour was spent.

To Hold Parade

Next Sunday afternoon, at two o'clock the Orangemen will hold their annual Church parade to the United Church. Brothers from Havelock and Norwood as well as Warsaw are expected to attend.

To Preach Here

Rev. H. B. Herrington will be absent on his vacation on the Sundays July 14 and 21. On July the fourteenth, Rev. Mr. Haddow, Baptist missionary, from Bolivia, now home on furlough, will take Rev. Mr. Herrington's work. The service in Warsaw, will be in connection with the W. M. S. and the loose collection will go to that work.

On Sunday July the twenty-first, some members of the Salvation Army will conduct the services.

Should any especial need for a minister arise, Rev. Mr. Wesley of Lakefield, has consented to act.

Who else wants new clothes?

"I have used Sunset Soap Dyes since 1919; have never had a failure. Three daughters and myself to clothe make a big problem, but thanks to your Dye Pot our clothing budget is cut in half. I have just completed a redyed crepe silk dress, originally gray. Everybody thinks it is new. I redyed and made over from ladies' coats, five coats for girls. One made a lovely wine colour from a faded brown, one a darker green from a faded green, one a warm brown from a faded tan and the other two their original colour of light brown redyed to freshen them up.

"Garments practically useless, with a little dye and remodeling make wonderful new garments at very little expense. My girls have three times more than if I had to buy every garment brand new. I have redyed curtains, couch covers, faded cretonnes, washable rag rugs just as satisfactorily as coats and dresses.

"I like your dye because it does not soil the hands or utensils. It is not necessary to rip garments apart, which saves time and patience. I told a friend about Sunset two years ago, she has used it ever since with wonderful results. People here in town will not believe we have redyed the winter coats our girls wear. I am glad to pass my knowledge of Sunset Soap Dyes on." —Mrs. Ward M. Kimble.

For fast dyeing use Sunset, 15c. a cake. For beautiful tinting use Dytint, wonderful new tint, big box, 10c. Made in Canada.

IN PETERBOROUGH CHURCHES

ST. JAMES' CHURCH

The Sunday services in St. James' United Church were particularly in keeping with Old Home Week and were under the direction of the pastor, Rev. J. H. Dudgeon.

In the morning Mr. Dudgeon spoke of the home-coming this week of many loved ones to the city and went on to emphasize our final home-coming, taking his text from John 14:3, "I go to prepare a place for you."

It has been said that the three sweetest words in the English language are "Mother," "Home" and "Heaven." Much has been said about the first two words, but it is the third which we wish to dwell upon.

All peoples have had confidence in a future life—the Greeks in an "Island of the Blest"; the Scandinavian in his "Green Paradise," and the Indian in his "Happy Hunting Ground."

But the Christian turns with eagerness to the vision given to John of that city whose Builder and Maker is God. Our Lord in His last talk with His disciples emphasized its reality. Heaven is not merely a state or condition, though we must have the Kingdom of God within. Let us bear in mind the fact that there are two kingdoms mentioned in the Scriptures—the Kingdom of God, which is spiritual, and the Kingdom of Heaven, which is organic and manifested in glory. The Kingdom of God is entered by new birth and the Kingdom of Heaven is entered after resurrection.

We do not know its location, but there is enough description of it given us to make it attractive. We know it is a place of health for in Rev. 21, 4, we read: "Neither shall there be any more pain." It is a place of plenty for 'they shall hunger no more.' It is a place of peace as found in Rev. 22:3, "There shall be no more curse."

Death is a dark, ugly thing that shatters our earthly hopes and brightest prospects. But the Kingdom of Heaven is a place of life and there shall be no more death.

From numerous references throughout the Bible, we know that our heavenly home is a place of reunion of loved ones. We must part from those who have returned to us for this week of reunion, but in our future home there is no parting.

We wonder, perhaps, what they are doing there. If we search the Scriptures we find Heaven to be a place of song and a place of service. For if the gift of God is eternal life, surely it will be a life of activity.

Where are words which can express our rapture when we behold Him? Therefore we know our final Home to be a place of realization.

But what constitutes a right of entry to this glorious Home of Homes? There is but one passport—we must be born again."

At the evening service, the pastor spoke on the subject, "Rejoice in the Lord alway." He mentioned three classes of people—those who are never happy; those who are happy one day and in the valley the next, and lastly, those who are always happy. God commands us to be the latter. The word "in" tells us how to carry out this commandment.

We cannot rejoice unless we are "in" the Lord. There are seven steps leading up to this (1) To rejoice you must be in the Lord; (2) You must confess the Christ you have taken; (3) You must put sin out of your life; (4) There must be absolute surrender of self; (5) Ask that your joy may be full; (6) Take time for Bible study, and (7) The step of fruit-bearing—go out and win others for Christ.

Come back! ye friendships long departed!
That like o'erflowing streamlets started,
And now are dwindled, one by one,
To stony channels in the sun!
Come back! ye friends, whose lives are ended,
Come back with all that light attended,
Which seemed to darken and decay
When ye rose and went away!

—Longfellow

* * * * * * *

Are there not many of us who wish that those who have passed on to the Great Beyond were able to return to us as our friends from other cities and countries are doing this week?

* * * * * * *

Even with all the gaiety of the week, our departed friends are not forgotten. No matter when one passes the memorial in Confederation Square, there is always a group of people paying a silent tribute to our comrades who gave their lives in the Great War. The largest gathering, I believe which ever stood on Confederation Square witnessed the unveiling of the Memorial on Sunday afternoon. Then again on Tuesday at noon, a beautiful wreath was placed there in honor of our Peterborough boys by the Toronto contingent which celebrated Toronto Day here during Old Home Week.

* * * * * * *

I think it is a fine thing for us to be able to say we had such a fine group of men in Peterborough as the Scottish Regiment during our celebration. How quiet and orderly everyone had been. No rowdyism whatever has been in evidence during the time when so many were in the city. Everyone seems to be so delighted to be back and so delighted because everyone here seems to be welcoming them so heartily.

* * * * * * *

Those of us who witnessed their Military display at the grounds were, I am sure, filled with great admiration. The sham battle which was staged on Monday evening gave those who had only a faint idea of how an attack was made, a glimpse of the battlefield.

* * * * * * *

I did wish on Tuesday morning that I was an Old Girl that I might have gone back to school to have seen how happy and thrilled the one hundred and fifty were who attended. I'll just bet you they had a queer feeling as they mounted the steps once again!

* * * * * * *

It really gives one a thrill to sit and watch people on the street. All the joyous words of greeting makes you almost wish that you too, had been coming back to Peterborough to enjoy the good courtesy of its friendly people.

* * * * * * *

"Put it there man, put it there." With outstretched hand and a smile upon the speaker's face; these words were often heard on the street and at the grounds on Monday. It need not take long for to get the spirit of the air, because the friendly greetings which are being exchanged on either side make you feel at home immediately.

* * * * * * *

We do hope that when they leave at the end of the week they will not forget us quickly. We hope they will make it a practice to come back at least every two or three years, while many of them will be back probably every year. Anyway if they never come back we hope they will take away with them a memory of a friendly spirit among their Peterborough friends.

And when the stream
Which overflowed the soul was passed away,
A consciousness remained that it had left,
Deposited upon the silent shore
Of memory, images and precious thoughts,
That shall not die, and cannot be destroyed.

Unfailing Courtesy

Invariably, when wives discuss food buying, one asks the other: "Where do you shop?" More than two million women today answer that question by saying: "At the A & P Stores." WHY? Because at A & P they are sure to get the popular nationally-advertised foods—they are certain to get good quality—their food dollars go farthest, and ... even in the matter of service, cleanliness, courtesy ... those details of storekeeping that mean so much to women ... A & P Stores constantly maintain a standard far beyond the most exacting requirements of the modern woman.

Seniors Drop 8-7 Decision to Kingston Rivals

FIELDING LAPSES OFFSET GOOD PITCHING AND PETES SUCCUMB TO ANCIENT KINGSTON RIVALS

21st Battalion Club Wins Old Home Week Exhibition Game 8 to 7.

ERRORS COSTLY.

Jamieson a Winner Although Clouted For Three Triples and Three Doubles.

(By F. D. C.)

Even the antics of Jake Solomon on the coaching lines could not offset the costliness of the Petes' fielding flaws in the Old Home Week exhibition fixture at the Exhibition Grounds yesterday and the Kingston 21st Battalion Club won the verdict by 8 to 7, despite the fact that they only earned two of their counters as against six earned markers by the losers.

Manager Swanston used the game as an opportunity to give his whole squad a workout and fifteen men got into the battle for the Petes, including three pitchers, while the visitors stuck to their original line up throughout.

Hardill pitched the first three frames for the homesters and after being touched for a clean run in the first frame was the victim of an error by Hatton, which made three Kingston registers possible in the third.

Lefty Macdonald was the second Peterborough gunner and he pitched very effective ball, striking out seven of the enemy in the four innings he worked but like Hardill he ran foul of wobbly support in the seventh when errors by Harrison and Red Hollingsworth presented the Limestone City crew with three runs.

The Petes made only these three misplays during the whole game but they represented a total of six runs.

Harrison blew a fast ball past the Kingston crowd in the last two frames and they failed to reach first.

"Yammy" Jamieson went the whole route for Kingston and was far from a mystery ,the Petes getting to him for 12 hits, including three triples and as many doubles, but even this lusty clouting failed to balance the expensive [illegible] errors.

perfect day with a hit by pitcher, a on the sacrifice fly and three hits including a double. Lefty Macdonald had two long smacks, one a triple and the other only reduced to a double because the Petes' pitcher slipped at first base. Ray Rose had a triple and a double to his credit too while Han Harrison uncorked the longest rap of the day in the ninth for three bases, only the fact that the Kingston outfield was playing a mile deep saving a homer that would have tied the score. Lawlor, Gibson, Williams and Cherry, the Kingston wrecking crew, had eight of their team's ten hits.

Both Teams Score in First

Both scored in the first inning in the same way. For Kingston Lawlor, with one out ,tripled to right centre and scored on Gibson's sacrifice fly to left.

In the Petes' half with one away, Ray Rose tripled to left and after Jake Hall had been hit and stole second, trotted in on Harrison's high fly to Williams.

The visitors did nothing in the second, but the Petes got a run to take the lead. Hardill walked and Len Hollingsworth dropped a single into centre. They both advanced on a passed ball. Hatton flied to Teepell in short right and Hardill was doubled at the plate when he tried to score. Hollingsworth tallied when Sweetman beat out a tap to second Sweetman stole second but was left when Reavis fanned.

Sweetman's circus stop robbed Stone of a hit, to start the third, but Kingston got a break when Hatton dropped the third strike on Jamieson and then threw low to first. Teepell was tossed out by Hardill. Lawlor chopped a single into centre to score Jamieson. Gibson doubled to left to send Lawlor in and Williams' single over second scored Gibson. Williams was out stealing.

With Macdonald pitching the visitors added another in the fourth. After Cherry had flied out, Tetro walked. Quinn struck out but Stone and Jamieson followed with singles to send Tetro across after which Teepel fanned.

The Petes got one back in the fifth. With two out Rose doubled to right and scored on Jake Hall's double to the same field. Hall was out at third on Harrison's roller to Lawlor.

The homesters came back with two more in the sixth to tie the score. Red Hollingsworth singled to right and rode home on Macdonald's long triple over Williams' head. Jimmy Hall flied to Cherry, close in Swanston batted for Hatton and scored Macdonald on a sacrifice fly to Teepell. Sweetman flied to Williams.

A couple of errors gave the visitors their winning margin in the seventh. Legon made a fine catch of Jamieson's fly to start the inning but Harrison gave Teepell a life by dropping a throw from Swanston after the latter had fielded a tap in front of the plate. Lawlor rolled to Hollingsworth, and with a double play in sight, the Petes' shortstop let the ball go through. The visitors cashed in on these two misplays when Gibson, Williams and Cherry followed with singles to drive home three runs.

The Petes were presented with a run in their half. Gibson threw past first on Legon's roller and after Rose had grounded to Stone, Legon came in on Jake Hall's sacrifice fly to Cherry. Harrison was safe on another wide throw by Gibson but was stranded when Red Hollingsworth flied to Cherry.

Harrison stopped the visitors in their tracks in the last two frames while the Petes staged a last minute rally in the ninth that nearly tied the score. With two out Jake Hall slammed his third hit of the day, a single over second and Harrison followed with a mammoth triple over Cherry's head. Fast fielding by the big centre fielder, who was playing deep, got the ball back in time to hold Harrison at third and Hollingsworth ended the game with a fly to Cherry.

THREE-CORNER TIE FOR LEAGUE LEAD

Hoard's, Springbrook and Pethericks Listed With Two Victories and Three Losses.

(Examiner Correspondence)

PETHERICKS CORNERES, July 4.—To those interested in softball the result of the only game played during the latter part of the week is of importance. Hoards visited Springbrook on Thursday evening to win a 9 to 4 victory and this creates a three-cornered tie for third place with Hoards, Springbrook and Pethericks each having two victories and three defeats.

Wet grounds prevented the crucial encounter between Menie and Bethel on Friday so the leadership is undecided. The only scheduled game for this week was Springbrook at Menie on Wednesday at 6:45 p. m. and this promised some rare fun as the Springbrook team are out to climb to the top and Menie would make a good stepping stone.

According to present reports Friday evening may see a revival of baseball in this section with Menie and Pethericks tieing up in an old fashioned game with gloves and padded catchers, etc. at the Rylstone social to be held on James Meeklijohn's lawn

ROWS TO DEAD HEAT.

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England, July 4 (Canadian Press Cable).—The Argonaut Eights of Toronto rowed a dead heat with the London Rowing Club Eights in a preliminary of the Grand Challenge Cup at the Henley Regatta here to-day. The time was 7 minutes 13 seconds.

C. G. E. WON SPALDING CUP FROM PACKERS

Winners Were Leading By Odd Goal at Interval—Forwards Brilliant.

C.G.E. 6, C.P.C. 1.

Combination Proved Successful Against Dilatory Tactics —Penalties Missed.

A large crowd witnessed the Canadian General soccer eleven trounce the Canadian Packing team by six goals to one in the final of the Spalding Cup at King Edward Park last evening.

Real cup tie tactics prevailed until the last fifteen minutes when the winners practiced the combination play to perfection, which terminated in their forwards adding three counters in that period.

J. Seymour Presented Cup.

At the conclusion Jack Seymour of the C. P. C. Company presented the trophy to the winners and complimented them on their excellent sportsmanship on the field. He handed over the cup to Captain Geo. Blowers, who suitably replied on behalf of the C.G.E. club.

First Half.

The Packers won the toss and took advantage of the sun at their backs. McMaster kicked off to test the C.P.C. defence, who were a player short, but Westwood completed the eleven after five minutes duration.

McMaster grasped the first opportunity offered quickly to bang the ball against an opposing player that altered its course into the net. This handicap made the Packers concentrate on the forward line, which moved with precision against an alert C.G.E. half back line.

Well Taken Equalizer.

Eventually Beggs dribbled his way right through the defence, then passed back to Preston, who sent a low grounder into the net like a flash. Three minutes later Burgess travelled along the wing to beat the defence on a feint pass, then let Mitchell have possession in front of goal, who banged the sphere into the rigging. Flagkicks and throw-ins were the order of play, and on one occasion Bromley gave the C.G.E. custodian a fright with a long shot that was touched over the bar. Wilson put the ball past. At the other end, the C.G.E. forwards all had a try at goal as long as the scrimmage prevailed until Bromley relieved the pressure. A hard first half ended with each goal undergoing a bombardment of shots.

Half time: C.G.E. 2, C.P.C. 1.

Half Time.

A short respite was given to the players but the referee insisted that they go on with the game.

Bolton made a brilliant stop in the corner of the upright. Robb dribbled up the field again to pass forward to J. McMaster. He carried the attack into the goal area where the defence closed in on him, but the left Rankin unmarked over from the rigging with a left-footer from the touch line.

Packers on Penalty Kicks.

The packers harrassed the winners to get a penalty kick. Buchan was given the second chance to reduce the lead. His first attempt went past the post, and a second effort was saved by Bolton, when he threw himself on the ball to stop its progress. Blowers had the chance to get into the scoring list when he took a penalty kick. To his own great surprise the parting shot was wide of the mark.

Goals Galore.

Play ran from end to end at a rapid pace, the Packers missing goals galore in front of the citadel, while the C. G. E. forwards moved in unison towards the Packers' goal. The wing men of the C.G.E. introduced combination with the halves and the perfect triangle play completely baffled the opposition in every attack. Ben McMaster found the inside of the upright, then Burgess made it five. On a solo run J. McMaster completed the half dozen just before the final whistle. Canadian General 6; Canadian Packing 1.

Canadian Packing: Giffin goal; Westwood and Downer, full backs; Craig, Buchan and Bromley, halves; Wilson, Beggs, Preston, Haidler and Foster, forwards.

Canadian General: Bdon goal; Figg and Wade, full bacs; Robb, Mann and Blowers, halve, Burgess, J. McMaster, Mitchell an Rankin, forwards.

Hugmen Beat Sox After Uphill Battle—Athletics Win Again.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Babe Ruth's seventeenth home run, delivered with the bases filled in the seventh as the Yankees trailed by four runs, played a big part in the 6-to-5 victory the champions wrestled from the last-place Red Sox here yesterday. Fred Heimach, relief pitcher, delivered the actual winning blow in the eighth when he hit to deep left centre and raced around the paths ahead of the relay for a homer within the field.

Ruffing hit a homer with one on in the big Boston inning.

ROCHESTER, July 4.—Rochester started its long home stand of 36 games with a victory over the Montreal Royals here yesterday 9 to 2, behind the excellent hurling of Larry Irvin and the careful bunching of Rochester's hits with Montreal lapses. THREE STRAIGHT FOR CATS

JERSEY CITY, July 4—The Black Cats made it three out of four by defeating the Newark Bears by 8 to 5. The Cats cracked out a flurry of base hits in the second and third innings to score eight runs and win the game right there.

Reading knotted the count with a two-run rally in the ninth at 3 all and apparently sewed the game up with three more runs in the tenth. However, Clark walked and Loepp singled to start the Bird half. With two down Harry Layne then knotted the count with a home run clout, scoring his two mates ahead of him. Bower walked and advanced on Bool's single and then Mooers came through with his third hit of the game.

LEAGUE HOLDS MEETING.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, July 4.—The monthly meeting of the Deloro Safety Committee took place on Monday evening with R. A. Elliott presiding. The reports presented by the various sub-committees were most encouraging. J. H. Hemphell reported that there had been no lost time during the past month and that for the first half of 1929 the lost days had only been 13 as compared with 137 during the corresponding period of last year. The flag was awarded to the General and the Star is still retained by the oxide.

MILLERS BEAT LEGION 13-4

Clerks-St. Andrews Will Clash To-night in Campbellford Softball League Tilt.

WEAK HITTING FRAY.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 3 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).— There was sufficient material from the Campbellford Cloth Company for the ball players to pull the wool over the eyes of the soldier boys, when the Mill team beat the Legionaires 13 to 4 in a 9-innings game. Apparently the change in ground did not agree with the tactics of the military men and the reverse reaction seemed to be the case for the Cloth Makers. The game Tuesday night was played on the new diamond at the High School grounds. The games will be played there for the remainder of the season, and Tuesday night's struggle was the first. The Clarks'-St. Andrew's game for Monday night was postponed and will probably be played Thursday of this week. The next regular game is called for Friday.

The Legionaires seem to be weak batters. In five out of the nine frames, they didn't make a single hit. Their first run came in the sixth innings when Free laid back his ears and got a single. Anderson went out. Petherick hit, and then Sanders went out. Leo Bush got a walk and Watt Owens drove a single but Petherick was forced out. Anyway, the Troops had broken the ice and both Henson and Johnston scored in the seventh. Free was on third when the side was retired. In the eighth, they went down one, two, three. They tried hard and played ball right up to the bitter end. In the ninth, Les Henson was the second man up. He drove a lone one to left field and scored a homer. Johnston went out, and Free got another safe hit. Anderson went out on an infield fly and left him on first base.

The Mill played an airtight game. They counted five the first time up and in the third added three more to the original number. In the fifth, Wilkes made it nine, and in the seventh Reynolds and Dennis each counted. In the eighth time up, Dennis and Wilkes scored again and the Cloth Makers called it a day at 13 to 4 without taking their last turn at bat.

During the game there were only three men walked and one batter struck out. Line-up:

Legionaires.—Johnson, p; L. Bush, c; H. Petherick, 1b; Burnett, 2b; Owens, 3b, Henson, ss; G. Anderson, cf; Free, rf; H. Sanders, lf.

Last Spring, the while your busy beak

The swarming insect hordes which wreak
Destruction on my growing fruit,
I drove away each prowling cat
Which might devour your little brood
Because of my deep seated grat—Itude.

I did not even mind the lay
You carolled in the early dawn,
Although, I hardly need to say,
I'd rather far have slumbered on .
I often wished that you would stop
But though I'd sometimes fume and chafe
I always felt my cherry crop
Was safe.

But now the fruit glows ruby red
Among the leaves of shining green
Whose children, frantic to be fed
Are every morning on the scene?
Whose brood, amid the evening dews
Each newly ripened globe secures
And strips the laden branches? Whose Buy yours?

What matters whether gnawing bug
Or feathered glutton raids my tree
Though robbed by catbird or by slug
The loss is all the same to me
I thought I'd save my glowing store
To can, and set upon the shelf,
But I was wrong; You saved it for Yourself!

"Weary River," Richard Barthelmess' All Singing-Talking Picture Now at the Capitol

Richard Barthelmess is now heard as well as seen. The star of two-score features, famed for his "Broken Blossoms," his "Tol'able David" and his "Patent Leather Kid," is now being hear for the first time in "Weary River," his newest First National starring feature now at the Capitol.

In "Weary River" Barthelmess not only talks but plays the piano. A Vitaphone test proved his voice of excellent quality for talking pictures and advance notices predict unprecedented success for the initial Barthelmess talkie.

"Weary River" is from the short story by Courtney Ryley Cooper, adapted to the screen by Bradley King and directed by Frank Lloyd. It relates the story of a convict who sings over the radio, wins a parole, becomes famous and wins the love of a girl. It is a wide departure from anything Barthelmess has done heretofore and offers him the sort of human characterization in which he excels.

The cast supporting Barthelmess is headed by Betty Compson, who recently played the feminine lead in Barthelmess' "Scarlet Seas." Others in the cast include William Holden, Raymond Turner, George Stone, Louis Natheaux, Robert O'Connor and others.

One never can tell about ab ll agme. Here the Kiwanis and Lock Works teams have been playing games all season that always resulted in close scores, and the one on Monday had to go ten innings before a decision. But the bottom seemed to fall out of the Lockmakers last evening, after the fifth innings, and the Kiwanis, swinging their bats lustily, piled up a lop-sided score.

Some solace can be gained to help the aching hearts of thousands of duffers by a quiet perusal, in some dark corner of the club house, of the scores turned in by many of the eminent golf pros in the recent affair at Winged Foot This open championship, as it is called, served to emphasize the supremacy of Jones, who, as all know, is the greatest golfing genius of the age.

The ordinary golfer who stands in habitual awe of his pro., and quails before the superior air of the latter, can quote chapter and verse from their recent debacle to prove that, while the latter may be all the world to their club mates when it comes to form and style, they are still only a lot of other golfers when it comes to competition against Jones, the man who has played the best ball of the world into submission.

Another has found the old truth substantiated that youth must be served. This time it was a woman, Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, veteran American tennis star. Mrs. Bundy amazed the sports world by going back to Wimbledon, where she was champion 24 and 22 years ago. A young English player, Joan Ridley, defeated her yesterday in straight sets, 6-3, 6-2.

BENNETT WILL SPEAK AT THE HEAD OF THE LAKES

Conservative Chieftain will close his Ontario Tour on Friday.

(By Thomas Green, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.)

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., July 4. —On the last lap of his summer speaking tour in Ontario, Hon. R. B. Bennett, departed to-day for the head of the Great Lakes. Two speaking engagements are scheduled for the Conservative leader, who will arrive at Fort William on Friday morning, in completion of his itineray for the province. Early in the afternoon he will speak at Port Arthur, with his final Ontario meeting at Fort William in the evening.

Mr. Bennett will leave Fort William for Calgary on Saturday morning where he will attend the stampede. He plans to remain in Alberta until the opening of his British Columbia tour at Windermere on July 25.

At his meeting here last night the Opposition chieftain was supported by James Lyons, M.L.A. former minister of Forests and Mines in the Ontario government, and T. E. Simpson, Dominion Member for Algoma West.

Mr. Bennett in discussing the tariff urged the manufacture or structural steel in Canada. He questioned why the government had not given proper encouragement to this industry. The attitude of the Government on the tariff, Mr. Bennett continued, was that of "waiting for something to turn up."

INCREASE SHOWN IN FIRE LOSSES

LIGHTNING AND SMOKING.

An increase in fire losses and the number of fires in Ontario in 1928 is indicated by the report of the Fire Marshal that has just been issued. The fire loss in the province during 1928 was about $300,000 more than in the preceding year while there was an increase in the number of fires by 1,143.

In 1928 the enviable record of a continuous reduction in the fire waste since 1922 was broken although it is true that the increase for the year was relatively very trifling. Nevertheless, it spoiled a rather unique record.

The increase was mainly in fires in dwellings, farmers' barns and mercantile stores. Lightning and smoking are the causes of fires which are definitely known to have shown a marked increase and it is worthy of note that for one more year there was a total immunity from fires caused by lightning in properties equipped with lightning rods.

The Fire Marshal attributes the large increase in dwelling fires of 795 for the year, exclusively to a growing demand of claimants under fire insurance policies for damage caused by electrical appliances and for burnt patches on chesterfields, chairs, carpets and curtains from cigarettes. His report indicates that there are more reports than ever before of claims from $1.00 to $25.00. Each is a potential fire and is therefore recorded.

A startling increase in the number of those killed and injured as a result of fires in 1928 is indicated. Ninety-six were killed last year, whereas the number for the preceding year was 53. Injuries have increased by thirty-seven. The loss to the Province in this way is beyond computation.

The monthly reports of the Fire Marshal for 1929 up to May, show an added increase in the number of fires of 489. However, there is a decided decrease in the loss sustained by fire of these months over the corresponding months of last year amounting to $502,107. Fires in dwellings again show an increase in both number and loss but in stores a decrease. For the month of May there is reported a decrease in the number of fires and the fire losses.

The biggest fires in the months of April and May were the Acme Building of Toronto with a loss of $137,117, the Consolidated Novelty Company of Toronto, $57,344; the Reading Building, Toronto, $44,719 and St. Alban's Cathedral, $36,000.

RUM WAR OVER ALONG BORDER

Coastguards Have Not Made a Seizure in Past 48 Hours.

THINGS VERY QUIET.

WINDSOR, July 4. (C.P.) — The rum war is over. Except for freighters ploughing through to the Soo, the great international stream is just as unexciting as the backwashes of the River Thames.

The smugglers can chuck their cargoes overboard at Bar Point and the officers of the coastguard cutters, and the customs border patrol can go on indefinite shore leave. The campaign is over whether they know it or not.

"We haven't made a seizure in the past 48 hours," was the report this morning from the Detroit headquarters of the U. S. Customs department.

"Nothing doing, and I don't suspect anything or anybody to-day," was the cheerful pronouncement from M. J. North, co-ordinator in the Detroit area for the three U. S. prohibition enforcement agencies.

"We'll be going out of business for good if this keeps up," was the prediction at La Salle of Ray Vigneaux, a leading liquor exporter and councillor of that centre.

"Not a boat has left here in a week and we have 18 loaded boats here since last Thursday," it was reported by S. E. M. Taylor, Canadian Customs official at Amherstburg.

But while there is apparent stagnation along the Detroit River and at the mouth of Lake Erie, the situation on Lake St. Clair and up on the River St. Clair, is different.

The boys up there are running plenty, as the coastguard cutters as yet have not mastered the problem.

Much liquor is leaving the river side and other east side docks for Mt. Clemens, Algonac, Marine City and other points north of the Detroit sector.

Salient Points of Bidding

Auction: In response to West's negative double of South's No Trump bid, East makes the conventional bid of his weak four-card Spade suit in preference to his strong five-card Diamond suit, concluding the bidding.

Contract: East's bid of two Spades is raised by West to three Spades which gives East the opportunity to keep the bidding open by a bid of four Diamonds. This Diamond bid, made despite his partner's assist of Spades, can only be interpreted by West as showing a very strong Diamond suit and a weak four-card suit of Spades. West, however, strong in Spades, is now in position to bid four Spades for game.

The Play

South opens the Jack of Hearts. Declarer covers with Dummy's Queen. North wins with the Ace and returns the 4 of Hearts, which is won by Dummy's King. Declarer leads a Diamond from Dummy to start the establishment of the suit. South holds up the Ace pending the play of Dummy's remaining Diamond in order that Declarer may not enter his own hand by the lead of a Diamond from Dummy after the suit's establishment.

Declarer takes advantage of the opportunity to make a double finesse in trumps. His lead of the 9 of Spades holding the trick, Declarer follows with the 2 and successfully finesses Dummy's 10. Then he leads Dummy's Diamond to complete the establishment of the suit. South, winning with the Ace, leads the 10 of Hearts to force the Declarer. Declarer accepts the force and leads the King of Diamonds. If South trumps, Declarer will over-trump in Dummy. If he does not trump, Declarer can discard a Club from Dummy and then by continuing with Diamonds can discard Dummy's two remaining Clubs if South persists in passing.

South, realizing the helplessness of the situation, trumps the King of Diamond with his King of Spades and Dummy wins with the Ace of Spades. Declarer then ruffs Dummy's remaining Heart and secures two Club discards from Dummy on the 9 and 4 of Diamonds. Declarer then leads a Club and South is compelled to take his Ace or lose it. Declarer, therefore, loses but three tricks, one each in Hearts, Diamonds and Clubs, and goes game on the hand.

FAREWELL PARTY.

R. D. Buchanan, of Belmont, Honored By Friends at Social Gathering.

HAVELOCK, July 4.—R. D. Buchanan of Belmont, was the guest of honor at a gathering held on Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cole of Blairton, prior to his departure from the community. Mr. Buchanan was presented with a Parker fountain pen and stand. Games and dancing were enjoyed and refreshments were served at the close.

The following address was read:

Dear Mr. Buchanan:

We, the pupils, trustees, and ratepayers of S. S. No. 9 have gathered here this evening, to bid you farewell, and to express our sincere regret at your unexpected departure.

We had expected you would favourably consider remaining with us for the coming year, but as you have not done so, we must feel that our loss is some other section's gain.

You have laboured untiringly and unselfishly for four successful years in our midst with the pupils' welfare uppermost in your mind and, we as parents have appreciated your successful efforts. So we meet to show our appreciation of your long service by asking you to kindly accept this remembrance, not for its intrinsic value but for that spirit that prompts the gift.

We wish you continued success as you pass on to your new field of labor, and wherever you go our good wishes will follow you."

COME ON, SEVEN!

BAND PRESENTS REQUEST BILL

Entertaining Program Presented By Toronto Band in Empress Hotel Lobby.

SOLO NUMBERS.

The Toronto Transportation Concert Band during its concerts yesterday and the day before was received with such enthusiasm that the band members were rounded up by the Toronto Old Boys and some of the local citizens to give an all request concert yesterday afternoon in the Empress Hotel.

Many citizens gathered in the lobby to enjoy the program. Mayor Roland Denne and Mrs. Denne and W. O'Brien, an enthusiastic Toronto Old Boy, were among those present.

All the numbers that were played yesterday, were requested by the audience. The "Poet and Peasant Overture, "Shamrock Election," selections from the musical comedy "Good News" were some of the outstanding ensemble numbers, while "Killarney," played as cornet solo was ably rendered by W. Lewis.

A medley of Southern airs offered as a xylophone solo by that versatile musician, S. V. Vouden, was greatly appreciated by the audience. The final number was the playing of "Auld Lang Syne," when all those present formed a circle, and pledged their faith by song, "never to forget."

At the close of the concert Chris. Graham presented the band with a box of cigars as a token of his appreciation and many expressed their heartiest thanks to Captain Haywood for the splendid impromptu concert that he so kindly offered.

GOOD PROGRAM FOR FRIDAY

Steamer Stoney Lake To Make Excursion Through the Kawartha Lakes.

HORSE RACES.

Stoney Lake is to be one of the main attractions for Friday's program. Probably many of the Old Home Boys and girls haven't seen the beauties of the Kawartha lakes which surround the city. Stoney Lake is noted for its beauty and myriads of islands which dot its surface and the trip to it through its sister lakes. Clear and Katchiwanooka, up the pretty Otonabee river is one worth coming a long way to take.

The boat leaves George street wharf at 8 o'clock and returns in the evening at 7 o'clock.

Horse races at the Exhibition grounds in the afternoon will provide plenty of excitement for those who do not care to go on the steamer excursion. There will be three races, and as some of the best horses in the country are here, turf fans are assured of an afternoon of real sport. "Jinx" Hoaglan between heats will put on the vaudeville acts which have delighted thousands so far this week.

For those who care to get out on the greens, the various Golf Clubs have opened their courses to the visitors.

The evening presents a varied program including vaudeville at the Exhibition grounds, with a grand display of fireworks at the conclusion, a moonlight excursion down the river, with splendid music for dance lover and community dancing on Aylmer street between Charlottee and King from 10.30 till the wee hours of morning.

CHAUTAUQUA IS COMING CANADIAN ORGANIZATION

A Wonderful Program To Be Presented July 20-25th.

Miss C. L. Davis, of Calgary, Alta., has been in the city completing final arrangements for the appearance here of the Chautauqua program.

Chautauqua in Ontario is under new management this year. The Canadian Chautauquas Ltd. of Calgary, Alberta is one of the largest Chautauqua organization in the world. This year they have taken over the American interests in Ontario. The artists who will appear are of various nations, including Australia, Great Britain, Russia, United States, Canada and Germany.

No tiresome waiting at the Chautauqua tent this year to buy amusement tax—it is included in the price of the season tickets. $2.20 admits an adult to 9 worth-while programs; $1.00 admits all children and students to the same 9 programs. The adult season tickets are transferable in the family.

Hundreds in the city who regularly inattend the Chautauqua are pleased to hear of its return.

FEATURE DANCE OF WEEK PROVES TO BE BIG SUCCESS

Seven Hundred People Attend Big Ball in the Armouries.

DECORATIONS EFFECTIVE.

Two Young Ladies From Montreal Receive Tremendous Applause.

The feature dance held at the Armouries last evening was a very successful event in the annals of Old Home Week. Although the attendance was not as large as was anticipated, there were nearly seven hundred people dancing and enjoying themselves last night in the big interior which was decorated in striking fashion for the occasion.
The decorations were of the futuristic type that is extremely effective Carried out in blazing colors that were softened by the electrical lighting, with a predominance of the golden note in the color scheme, it was apparent that a vast amount of labor and time had been expended in their arrangement.
In red and green and blue and yellow, paper cannopies jutted out from the walls on the four sides of the hall, in a lace-like pattern of paper that resembled tennis netting. At the point of each of these canopies an electric bulb glowed. Overhead were huge stars of the same brilliantly-colored paper, placed over the huge lights that hang from the ceiling. From these stars hung fringes of shredded paper and elongated golden cones that were caught at the bottom with large tassels. Lace-like paper shawls decorated the walls, and the large orchestra stand, placed against the north wall, had the same effective arrangement. Here the orchestra, fourteen strong, played all evening, in a manner that brought them appreciative comments from every side. Jerry Shea and his Palladians from Montreal, lived up to the reputation which preceded them with their rendition of dance music that was smooth and melodious and brilliant.

Novelty Program Good

The program of novelties was especially good. The two young ladies from Montreal, the Misses Germaine Daignault and Tony Le France, received rousing encores on each appearance. Their costumes, changed for each dance, were up-to-the-minute and snappy, and their dancing had a professional touch that made it extremely pleasing.
Equally good and proving equally popular with the crowd, who applauded them enthusiastically, were the local girls who danced in several of the numbers in which they appeared in the Kiwanis Revue. They wore their black velvet shorts and white satin blouses and red sashes, with jazz hats, and they did a couple of radium numbers under a purple spot that had a striking effect. The group included the Misses Dorothy Goheen, Adele Picard, Gwenn Hewitt, Sybil Sharpe, Eva Beatty, Mrs. Verda Gamble, Mrs. Otto Laderach, and Miss Ruby Jackson.
The dancing hit of the evening, on account of the nimble-footed skill of the little seven-year-old performer, was the solo work on the platform by tiny Jackie Wolff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Wolff of Regina, who are here for Old Home Week.
On account of a recent illness, little Miss Patsy Hanrahan of Montreal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Hanrahan, who was scheduled to appear in solo dances, was unable to be present.
Emerging from the rear of the hall in a simulated hay wagon, the band headed by "Red" Moncrief, who calls them his "Booby Band," was a surprise of the evening. Later, mounting the platform, they played for a square dance, much to the interest of the guests. They were dressed appropriately in overalls and straw hats and red bandanas, and they featured J. Thynce of Toronto, who is manager there of the "Clover Hullers' Orchestra." The personnel of the band includes "Red" Moncrief, Joe Stewart, Lionel Chapman and Hedley Childerhose.
The "Mardi Gras" procession, as it was termed, took place after midnight and was especially brilliant. Carried on a gorgeously-decorated palanquin, Miss Gertrude Gimblett was queen of the festival, gowned in a lovely Eastern costume with a glittering spiked headdress. Her attendants, also gowned in Oriental style, with flowing veils and harem dress, were the Misses Helen Robertson, Margaret Grady, Gladys Costello and Jean Gillespie.
At midnight, colored hats and caps for men and women were distributed and plenty of noisemakers added to the atmosphre of fun and frolic. The dancing went on under the colored spotlights which were used all evening.
The hard-working committee whose members left no stone unturned to make this feature event a success and one of the biggest dances of the kind ever staged in Peterborough, included D. A. Costello and Andy Purman, in charge of affairs; R. F. Sedgewick, convenor of the feature dance committee; Ray Harding, Jack McNabb, Charles Brewer, Roy Dixon, Butler Hickey and Dr. E. M. Crough.

Meets With Accident Port Hope Highway

While on their way to Peterborough yesterday, to attend the dance in the armouries, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Welsh of Oshawa, had an unfortunate accident. Near Bailieboro, the highway had been recently oiled, and after turning out to pass a car, in his endeavor to get into position on the road again Mr. Welsh's car skidded and turned over in the ditch, with the result that Mrs. Welsh is rather badly shaken up, and will remain here the balance of the week. Mr. Welsh was able to be out this morning but carries a limp. The car was badly damaged.

Bell Company Float Built In The City

The Bell Telephone Company wish to correct a rumor that has started in some manner around the city about their float. Some of the people have said that the float, with which this company won the Fleming Cup in the Old Home Week Parade was shipped into the city and was not the product of local workmanship.
This is an absolutely wrong impression. Members of the staff worked day and night for two weeks on this float and it was completely made in the city.
It was felt by some that there was an inustice done in giving the prize to a float that was not built by local talent and one that was constructed by specialists, but the staff of the Bell Company in this way wish to correct that impression and to state that the prize winning float was in its entirety a Peterborough product built by their own hands.

SLIPPERY STREETS CAUSE AUTOMOBILE TO COLLIDE

Several Cars Suffer Slight Damages In Two Collisions

Considerable damages resulted to the car of Edwin Sanders, 555 Gilchrist street, at 12.50 to-day when he struck a car driven by Mrs. J. Douglas, 591 Water street. Mrs. Douglas was backing her car out of the lane at her home onto Water street, while Sanders was proceeding north on Water, when the accident occurred. The damages to Sander's car were: broken right head-light, damaged radiator, broken windshield, and bent crankshaft. There was no damage to Mrs. Douglas' car.
Two cars collided on George street this morning just in front of the north Teco Store. R. Moffat, Detroit, was driving south on George street and a car with license, 273-491 was going north on the wrong side of the road, Moffat alleges. They struck, damaging Moffat's car around the front. The other car continued on its way without stopping.

Eskimos Are Turning Eagerly To Christianity

TORONTO, Ont., July 4 (C.P.). —The Eskimos, innately religious race, even in Paganism, are turning eagerly to Christianity; stated Venerable Archdeacon A. L. Fleming in an address to the Anglican Summer school for the Diocese of Toronto and Niagara here last night.
Reviewing the history of missionary work since the Moravian Brethren first went there in 1752, Archdeacon Fleming voiced a protest against the "intrusion" of members of the Roman Catholic Order of Oblates in territory which he claimed had been recognized as essentially a Church of England Mission field.

MAKING IT A REAL VISIT

A glance at the registration slips for Old Home Week shows that most of the Old Boys and Girls are making this a real visit. In the majority of instances, they are staying for four or five days, often a week or a month and sometimes longer. The percentage registering for one or two days is very small.

FAVORABLY COMMENTED ON

Capitol Eentertainment," the official publication of the Famous Players' Canadian Corporation, contains in its latest issue a full page cut showing extracts from several Canadian papers that have given much publicity recently to the Talkie innovation in the movies. In this page, The Peterborough Examiner occupies a prominent place and its front-page advertising of the local opening of the speaking drama is commented upon very favorably by the magazine, which also speaks of the energy of the local manager, J. A. Stewart, in connection with the inauguration here of the "gabby" drama.

A DOUBLE PURPOSE

For one couple Old Home Week is more than a re-union—it is a honeymoon. On registering at the registration bureau, the couple readily vouched the information that they didn't have time for their honeymoon when they were married twenty years ago so were making their Old Home Week visit serve a double purpose.

TWO FIRE CALLS

At 11.19 a.m. yesterday morning a call reached the fire department from 398 Aylmer street for a chimney fire. One chemical was used. No damage done.
Another call was received Another call was received shortly some rubbish in a box in the basement had ignited. The danger was quickly removed.

THIS OLD BOY KNEW THE TURN-OUT

Watching Parade Knew Who Would Be Handling Reins.

A Peterborough Old Boy from Chicago, watching the parade from the sidelines on Monday last, although away from the city for almost a quarter of a century know when he saw the spanking pair of horses leading that George Graham would be handling the reins, even before he saw the driver.
He had recollections of years gone by when George, who has been the owner of more good horses in the city than any other man in his time, drove through the streets with fine spanking teams of high steppers and called the turn correctly. He made the remark that there was not a prettier sight even now, with all the fine autos, then a spirited team of well-groomed horses.

VISITOR TO CITY SLIGHTLY INJURED

Alec Chisholm Has Wrist Cut When Car Overturns On George Street.

Alec Chisholm of Flint, Michigan, an Old Home Week visitor in the city, was injured slightly this afternoon, shortly after three o'clock, when the coupe that he was driving turned over at the corner of George and Lake streets.
Mr. Chisholm and Alan Gainey, both of Flint, were travelling south on George street, and being strangers in the city were not acquainted with the streets. The party was staying at 161 Lock streets, the guest of Mr. Gainey and when they neared the corner of Lake, Chisholm applied the brakes and the car caught on the slippery car rails and threw the car over on its side.
The car was badly damaged, the top was torn and the fenders crushed. Chisholm suffered slight wrist cuts which necessitated the calling of Dr. Fraser to dress the wound.

DANCE AT ARMOURIES AGAIN THIS EVENING

With All the Decorations and Fine Floor of Last Night.

A second dance will be held in the Armouries to-night. The building is still handsomely decorated, and with a fine out-of-town orchestra, should draw a great crowd. The floor is in the finest of shape for dancing, and any one who has not seen the decorations has missed a fine sight.

BRITISH EMPIRE TO GIVE THANKS FOR RECOVERY OF KING GEORGE; IMPRESSIVE SERVICE PLANNED Whole Royal Family Will Be Present at Westminster Abbey On Sunday.

FEW RESERVED SEATS.

As Far As Possible Those in Charge Have Eliminated Ostentatious Ceremony.

LONDON, July 5.—(By Thos. T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent).—While similar services take place throughout the Empire, Westminster Abbey on Sunday will be the scene of the main service of thanksgiving for the recovery of His Majesty. The King will attend to offer thanks along with his subjects, and Queen Mary and virtually the whole royal family will be present.

So far as possible, those in charge of arrangements have striven to eliminate al ostentatious ceremony. The number of reserved seats in the Abbey has been kept at the lowest possible limit, and the nave will be entirely open to the earliest comers. It is hoped the people will attend the Thanksgiving services at their customary places of worship or elsewhere in their own neighborhood. But undoutedly crowds will flock to Westminster Abbey.

Arrive Before Eleven.

His Majesty and Queen Mary will arive at the Abbey a few minutes before eleven o'clock. Preceding them by a short time will be the Prince of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of York, Prince George, Princess Mary and Viscount Lascelles, the Princess Royal (H.R.H. Louise Victoria, Duchess of Fife) and Princess Victoria Alexandra, sisters of His Majesty.

Very Rev. W. F. Noris, Dean of Westminster, accompanied by His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, will receive their Majesties at the west door and there will be a procession through the nave of the sanctuary. Those participating will include the Marquis of Salisbury, who holds the extremely ancient office of Lord High Steward of Westminster, Premier Ramsay Macdonald and three members of his cabinet, Lord Passfield, Lord Thomson and Lord Parmoor.

Grenadier Band To Play.

The Dean and Archbishop will conduct the service, the music for which will be supplied at designated times by the Grenadier Guards' Band. The first verses of the National Anthem will be placed at the beginning rather than at the end of the service so that expression may be at once given to the thought uppermost in all minds.

Some of the sentences in the thanksgiving service will be the same as those used at similar services for the recovery of King George III. from the mental malady which beset him in 1789. There will also be passages reminiscent of the service at St. Paul's in thanksgiving for the recovery of the Prince of Wales who was afterwards Edward VII, and of which grey-headed men and women still talk with wonder.

Prayers will also be said for the hospitals to which the thanksgiving funds are being devoted, and there will be a prayer for the whole empire.

The King himself has selected two hymns to be included in the similar services in the free churches: "All People That on Earth Do Dwell," and "Praise My Soul, the King of Heaven."

Surprise Is Sprung on House

Legal Experts of Foreign Office Make Important Ruling, Henderson Announces.

MAY CONSULT DOMINIONS.

Labor Government Seeks Resumption of Normal Trading With Russia.

LONDON, July 5 (By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent). — Right Hon. Arthur Henderson, Foreign Secretary, had a surprise for the House of Commons today. The legal experts of the Foreign Office held that diplomatic relations with Russia had not been severed at all, he said. Their view was that as recognition had never been withdrawn diplomatic relations had not been broken. What was now sought by the Labor Government was resumption of normal trading and commercial relations.

What Has Happened?

"If diplomatic relations have not been broken, then what has happened?" questioned Lieut. Jones, Liberal member for Camborne, Cornwall, in a puzzled tone.

Mr. Henderson repeated that he was giving the opinion of legal advisers of the Foreign Office. He promised to consult them further.

All through the debate on foreign affairs today there was a constant insistence on the intention to consult the Dominions both on signature of the optional clause of the World Court statutes and on relations with Russia. On the optional clause, signing of which would compel placing international legal questions before the permanent Court of International Justice at The Hague the Foreign Secretary remarked however, that he had not said the British Government would abandon its position if one single Dominion should decline to sign the clause.

"Then if the Dominions do not agree to signing the optional clause, does that mean the government will abandon its position?" asked Sir Frederick Hall, Conservative member for Camberwell, Dulwich.

Wait And See

"I think," returned Mr. Henderson, lapsing into the famous Asquithian phrase, "that the honorable gentleman had better wait and see."

Mr. Henderson went on to say that when the Labor government representatives attended the League of Nations assembly in 1924 they had made no move without first collaborating with the representatives of all the dominions.

The Foreign Secretary also declared he thought that before the British troops were evacuated from the Rhineland it was desirable to have agreement on the simultaneous withdrawal of the French and Belgian armies of occupation.

In resuming relations with the Russian government, the British government intended to stand by its position of 1924 and not tolerate Russian propaganda either in Great Britain or any of the dominions, the Foreign Secretary said.

Rt. Hon. Sir Austen Chamberlain, Mr. Henderson's predecessor in office, urged that before signing the optional clause of the world court statues the government should consider the matter carefully. The clause provided for submission of justifiable disputes to the international court of justice, but nowhere had justifiable disputes been fully defined, he said.

Indefinite Engagement

As the clause stood, the government would be signing an indefinite and indistinct engagement. Moreover it would be excluding other and equally good methods of settling disputes, such as reference to the council of the League of Nations.
